The timelessness of classic design.

A look, centuries old that has never seemed newer—17th and 18th century country French bedroom, dining, and occasional design interpretations of classic elegance and contemporary adaptability, Henredon's Four Centuries. Here, a handsomely carved armoire can accommodate TV or sound equipment, and the Louis XV-style cocktail table folds out for gracious entertaining. Companions in versatility, are beautiful upholstered pieces that can be made to a custom length to meet individual requirements and covered from a fabric selection that pleases the most particular decorating palette. See the many options of Henredon's Four Centuries and Upholstered Furniture Collections, by sending $2.00 to Henredon, Dept. G-75, Morganton, North Carolina, 28655.

As any perfectionist knows, details are everything. Here you have a most charming example.

Smocking.

It runs all around the pillowshams, ruffles the pillowslips, finishes the hemlines of the sheets, and gives the entire edition a handworked look, decidedly European in character.

The naive print, on strict white or neutral candlelight grounds, accompanies the smocking and looks surprisingly worldly when in a room.

Of course, no laundress needed here.

When's the last time we missed dinner at your house?

It's a rare occasion when electricity isn't there when you want it.

When you're home or at work, you count on it to be there, too. And it usually is.

But keeping electricity there in the quantities you want is costing more and more every day.

Since electricity cannot be stored in large quantities, there must always be enough generators in place to make it at a moment's notice.

We rely on you to understand why we have to build these power plants. And to realize that building them will mean higher electric bills.

Help us maintain the same electric service you've grown up with.

We rely on you as much as you rely on us.

A KITCHENAID COMPACTOR CAN GET YOU OUT OF THIS MESS.

It's a beautiful answer to an ugly problem.

Just deposit your trash. The compactor will swallow it up, compacting it to about ¼ its original volume. It gobbles up cans, cartons, bottles and scrap. Quickly. Easily. Neatly.

The exclusive KitchenAid Litter Bin™ makes it easy to handle small trash without stooping. And the big trash drawer handles whole wastebasket loads at one time.

What's more, only KitchenAid has an activated charcoal air filter to eliminate odors. And you can use the KitchenAid compactor with or without trash bags.

Your KitchenAid dealer will show you how it works. His address is in the Yellow Pages under "Dishwashers." Or send us the coupon.

HOUSE & GARDEN

(INCORPORATING LIVING FOR YOUNG HOMEMAKERS) Vol. 147 No. 7

BEADLE

ON THE COVER: Summer, dessert on the terrace, in the shade. The tablecloth, made from gingham sheets, picks up the cool greens of the garden. The old schooner chair out on the lawn, bought at a ship's auction, adds to the sense of vacation. Flowering plants hung from the trellis create a gentle bower. It's all so simple, yet makes summer so rich with pleasure. For the Robert Koturs, there is the added satisfaction of having restored this setting themselves. One of the many talented couples we report about in this issue, they saw potential in a neglected old house many had ignored. See more of their delightful 18th-century New England house, page 46.

...the ideal way to buy your presents from The Metropolitan Museum

Every three months—four times a year—the Museum will announce by mail remarkable new replicas—exact copies of Museum originals: sculpture, decorative objects, tableware, and ornaments.

The variety will be extraordinary: ancient jewelry in gold and silver; Oriental and European porcelain; early American glass in crystal and rare colors; bronze from Egypt, Greece, China, and the medieval world; silver, pewter, brass, and pottery from Colonial America.

These copies, often produced by the same techniques used for the originals, are made by artist-craftsmen working under the Museum's direct supervision. The care taken in production frequently limits the quantity, and the majority of replicas can be bought only by mail or at the Museum. (Above: Hippopotamus, brilliant blue faience decorated with lotus flowers. Length 8", $19.75 plus $1.25 shipping.)

To receive all of the advance announcements to be issued during the next year, send the coupon below with one dollar to cover mailing.

On September 1, you will receive the first of these, the 116 page Christmas Catalogue. A brilliant array of new presents includes an ancient Egyptian necklace of blue lotus flowers; golden stags, panthers, lions, and griffins from the Scythian treasure hoard; needlework kits of a tiger from a Chinese ceremonial banner, and puppies and kittens from a New England rug; a rose and a star in stained glass; a book of Persian miniatures in full color and gold; a bronze Etruscan acrobat; art nouveau stationery; a new cookbook, To the King's Taste, and next year's engagement calendar, Secret Gardens. In addition, there is an unparalleled selection of Christmas cards.

Please send me all advance announcements and catalogues of replicas to be issued by the Museum during the next 12 months. One dollar to cover mailing costs is enclosed.

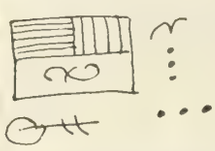
Hoop-back Windsor Chair

We have received conflicting information about this chair's origin. We believe it's 18th century, but is it English or American? How can you tell?
P.W.—Westover Air Force Base, Mass.

Your chair is English. You can tell because the two front legs of the English hoop-back Windsor chair were sometimes of cabriole form in imitation of the more costly furniture, and the stretcher uniting them was often curved. They replaced the ordinary turned and splayed legs invariably found on 18th-century American Windsors. The hoop-back came into use in England after 1750.



Sampson Vases

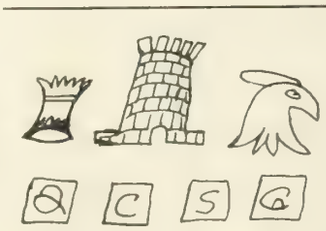
We think these vases were made in England in the 18th century, sent to China for decoration, then returned. Is this so? H.B.H.—Dickson, Tenn.

No. The mark is that of Sampson and Company, a still existing manufacturer located in Paris since the early 19th century, specializing in reproductions of collectable wares of various countries and periods, such as Chelsea, Meissen, and Famille Verte. It is claimed that all Sampson's imitations bear one of several trademarks. Your rectangular pseudo-Chinese hallmark in red with a running S beside it appears on copies of Oriental Lowestoft.

Russian Icon

Can you tell me the name of the saint on my Russian icon? Is it a very old one? Are icons considered collectable?
E.P.—Boston, Mass.

The saint represented on your 18th-century Russian wooden icon is Saint Nicholas, a sacred personage in the Eastern Church, who was widely popular as he performed miracles. Icons are very collectable.



American Tea Service

From my rough sketch, are you able to identify the maker of my tea service and tell me about how old it is? What do the initials E.P.N.S. stand for?
H.M.—Cannon Air Force Base, N.M.

The mark indicates that your plated silver tea service was made by the Queen City Silver Company, which manufactured plated silver hollowware. The company was active at Cincinnati, Ohio from about 1888 to 1931. The letters E.P.N.S. (electro-plated nickel silver) tell you that your tea service is plated silver.

It goes from oven to table, table to dishwasher, dishwasher to cabinet. And back again. What's more, it's rugged enough to make the round-trip over and over again, unscathed. The place-setting patterns, clockwise from top, are Tiger Lily, Victoria, Arctic, Primrose and Iona. The shapely Arctic serving pieces—there are several others—coordinate with all patterns. Wedgwood® oven-to-tableware is not only extremely good-looking. It goes to ridiculous extremes. 45-piece service for 8, $260; 16-piece service for 4, $87; 4-piece place setting, $26.50. Wedgwood, 555 Madison Avenue, New York 10022.

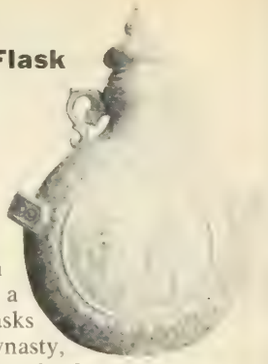
Pilgrim Flask



We found this flask tucked away in a dusty antiques shop and are curious about its origin and what it was used for. Can you help? A.G.—San Ardo, Cal.

The form of your vessel with flattened sides derives from the distinctive pilgrim flask, generally almost circular in shape with two loops or rings on the shoulders to hold a cord, but without handles. Pottery pilgrim flasks were made in China as early as the T'ang Dynasty, 618-906, and majolica examples survive from the Renaissance. Your flask was made in Europe, perhaps England, probably about the 1880s.

Caster and Butter Dish

I inherited these two silver pieces. I've drawn the markings on each and hope that you can give me some idea of their age and any other information you may have about them. G.N.J.—Shreveport, La.

The revolving caster of plated silver, fitted for six glass bottles, three having pierced metal caps, was made by James W. Tufts of Boston about the 1880s. It was at this time that the tall central handle, always a marked feature, attained extreme height. You are fortunate to have all six original bottles.

The butter dish was probably made about the 1880s, when for the first time they were made in considerable quantity and variety. Most had two distinguishing features: a high domed cover to conform with the "print" of butter and a pierced disk inside so melted ice could drain into the container below. The "moist" cover was often suspended from a high-arched handle while butter was being used.

German Clock Peddler

What can you tell me about this clock figure that I've had for many years? Does it represent anyone in particular? It contains a whistling mechanism and the head turns slowly from side to side as the man whistles.
L.R.—New York, N.Y.

Your clock figure represents the popular Black Forest of Germany clock peddler who, in the 19th century, traveled about the German countryside with his wares strapped to his back. ■

Buy 4 more at big discounts…anytime.

Here's how The Literary Guild works:
After you get your initial four books for $1, you only have to buy four more books during your membership. Then, you can cancel anytime you want.

So, choose four books (or sets) now, send in the coupon and pay $1—plus shipping and handling—when your application is accepted.

If, after 10 days, you decide you don't want the books, send them back and we'll cancel your membership.

Fourteen times a year you'll get The Literary Guild magazine. You'll find dozens of best sellers in each issue… all at discounts up to 40%.

To order the Selection, do nothing: it's shipped to you automatically. If you'd like an alternate, or no book, fill in your choice on the order form. There is a charge for shipping and handling.

You have 10 days to return the order form so that we get it no later than the date specified. If you receive an unwanted selection, return it at our expense.

The Guild offers its own complete, hardbound editions, sometimes altered in size to fit special presses and save members even more.

Using the earth to heat and cool a house

At New Canaan, Conn., architect Landis Gores and heating consultant and ecologist Paul Sturges have designed a geothermal house that will draw upon heat stored in the earth. It will have an air-conditioning system using a heat pump that extracts heat from the ground to warm or cool the air. (Below the frost line ground temperature remains constant year round.) The constant tempered air, circulated by blower fans through a 250-foot loop, 8 feet under ground, will minimize the cycling of the heat pump as it warms the air. A heat exchanger provides for household hot water. The five-level house, with two zones below ground, has bands of south-facing windows on top zones to gain sun heat, while bedrooms, below grade, gain insulation from the enclosing earth. The zoned design of the house, coupled with earth heat, controls indoor climate year round at the modest cost of an electric heat pump and fan.

Budget Eating

She shops and cooks. He cleans up. They share the cost. Françoise Filotti shows how she and her husband, Ion, eat and entertain for less than $50 a week

Ion and I were married last summer and live in Manhattan. We both like to eat delicious, inexpensive dishes that are quick to prepare, and to have friends for dinner once or twice a week.

We both work and contribute an equal amount to all household expenses. Household duties are divided in the most natural way: according to likes and dislikes and personal schedules. I do all the shopping, because it bores Ion to tears. He doesn't enjoy wandering into three supermarkets to find the best values, which, to me, is a sport.

Often, I work the menus around the sales or "specials" of the week. If there is a chicken "special," I buy enough to cook a dish that day, plus more to keep in the freezer. I prefer some frozen foods over their fresh counterparts—spinach and baked squash, for example, because they are so easy to prepare and save a lot of time. I also make good use of some canned foods: Tomatoes are excellent value for cooking.

Cooking is my job because I love it and I leave the office first. We start the day with a good breakfast—cereal or eggs, yoghurt or cheese, fresh fruit juice, toast and jam, and coffee or tea.

We both like the idea of taking our lunch to the office. We save money and avoid the fattening monotony of delicatessen sandwiches and hamburgers. Neither of us is on a calorie-counting diet; we each want to maintain our present weight. Ion, however, has ulcers. So we follow some basic rules: small portions; no snacks; no greasy or spicy dishes; no wine or alcoholic beverages, unless we have guests. We do indulge in a sweet a day, because Ion wouldn't think of a meal without dessert.

Every day, Ion calls me when he leaves the office. As it takes him forty-five minutes to reach home, I can time dinner. While I'm cooking I do the next day's lunch. After dinner, I relax while Ion washes the dishes, stashes them away, and cleans the kitchen.

Kohler endurables

There are products designed to wear out. And there are those which endure. Kohler enameled cast iron sinks endure. Beautifully.

A Kohler enameled cast iron sink remains beautiful to look at. There's good reason. Cast iron sinks have a strength, depth of color, vividness and lustre that other materials cannot match. Cannot retain.

Kohler cast iron sinks resist chipping and scratching. They will not dent. Since they're solid and heavier than steel, they dampen disposer vibration and noise. And the enamel on a Kohler sink is acid and stain resistant . . . is five times thicker than the enamel on a steel sink (and colorless stainless steel sinks don't even have enamel).

Kohler cast iron sinks come in a choice of 13 lovely kitchen colors, plus white.

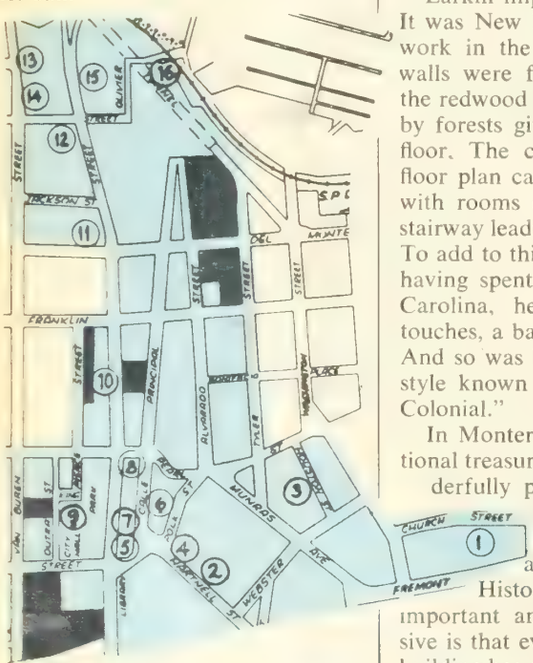
Restored adobes in California, a solar house in New Jersey, new museums by great architects, plus 5 supershows in museums across America

FOLLOWING THE ADOBE TRAIL THROUGH CALIFORNIA

By Dee Hardie

Born of nature, raised from the earth and baked by the sun, adobe architecture settled early and comfortably into California's brave new world. For the first pioneers it shaped their lives, their frame of living. Simple and uncluttered, thick adobe walls kept the summers cool while walled gardens and courtyards captured the winter sun.



42 Buildings on Monterey's Path of History

most of them adobes, the largest collection in America. Sixteen on map open for annual adobe tour.

Ancient history shows that the chief occupation of the Israelites during their imprisonment in Egypt was making adobe bricks from clay taken from the Nile. An old art, but new to California, adobe comes from the Arabic meaning "sun-dried brick." The Spanish, explorers, soldiers, and priests, among them the famous Padre Juniperro Serra, brought this architectural concept from Mexico to California, teaching its ways to the Indians.

Now truly native to California and the Southwest, the adobe wisely never left home. The sandy clay from this arid region makes the brick, and the brick is sun-bound, crumbling if exposed to the freezing and thaw of a Northern climate.

It was a Yankee merchant, however, who changed the face, indeed the whole shape of the original adobe house in California. In 1833 William Oliver Larkin arrived in Monterey, married a young widow he met enroute from Boston, and in three years started building the first two-story adobe dwelling in California.

Larkin improvised, he adapted. It was New England ingenuity at work in the California sun. His walls were familiar adobe brick, the redwood frame cut from nearby forests giving a strong second floor. The classic New England floor plan called for a center hall with rooms on either side and a stairway leading to the upper floor. To add to this American mélange, having spent some time in South Carolina, he included Southern touches, a balcony and a veranda. And so was born an architectural style known today as "Monterey Colonial."

In Monterey there is an exceptional treasury of old adobes, wonderfully preserved and rejuvenated, that can be seen on a route heralded as "The Path of History." What is so very important and especially impressive is that every single house and building has definite purpose. They just don't stand and wait to be admired. They are used, they serve.

Colton Hall, first important public building in California

True, they are monuments to a frontier past and heritage, but today's people are living and working in them. There are museums, yes, and private houses, too, but

LET ALL THE SUN SHINE IN

As long as it shines on the black panels that collect solar heat along the front of Solaria, below, photographer Bob Homan and his family will be warm inside. To show off their solar energy, they've opened the new house in Indian Mills, N.J., for tours on the first and third Sundays of every month until December, for $1 a tourist (less for groups). Call 609-268-0045.

Plans for the house are available from the Edmund Scientific Co., 150 Edscorp Building, Barrington, N.J. 08007, for $24.95.

Architect Malcolm Wells, who used a solar system pioneered by Dr. Harry Thomason, is so sure of its efficiency that he has not installed a back-up system. When winter nights get cold enough, an oversized domestic water heater heats house air. The roof will soon hold 2 feet of soil and a wild garden to insulate house naturally. A wind generator powers pump that circulates water-stored solar heat.

NEW BUILDING ART: MUSEUMS

The Robert Lehman Collection is now at home in a magnificent new glass wing at The Metropolitan Museum in New York. Designed by architects Kevin Roche and John Dinkeloo, the wing centers around a glass-domed court with ficus trees and is open every day but Monday. Seven original rooms from the Lehman house are in the new addition. The Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden, on the mall in Washington, D.C., is a new, masonry-faced circular building by architect Gordon Bunshaft. There is also a sculpture garden and the building is open seven days a week. The Herbert F. Johnson Museum of Art, at Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y., is free, open every day but Monday. The multilevel building, by architects I.M.Pei and Partners, includes a terrace sculpture court with broad views of a valley below. The Kimbell Museum, in Fort Worth, Tex., is architect Louis I. Kahn's glorious breakaway from stuffy museums of the past. Ground-level vaulted galleries, with uncrowded, unobstructed displays receive diffused natural light from overhead and open to landscaped courts. Paintings and sculpture range from prehistoric times to the 20th century. The museum is free, open every day but Monday.

Gayelord Hauser—great at eighty—talks about vitality foods

Plus some delicious easy-to-make Hauser recipes, a completely new one-day diet, and ideas for eating well inexpensively.

By Caroline Seebohm

EDITOR'S NOTE: Anyone who still has doubts about the validity of Gayelord Hauser's principles of living happily ever after should catch a glimpse of eighty-year-old Mr. Hauser in real life. He has been a nutrition enthusiast for over fifty years, has published more books on nutrition in more languages than any other man, and the London Sunday Times has designated him as one of the "Makers of the Twentieth Century." We met him recently one afternoon in New York. He had been on the go since 6 o'clock that morning in a whirl of interviews and TV appearances, but from his courteous, serene, and enthusiastic presence you would have supposed he had just risen from a long rest. Moreover, he had not even had time for lunch, and while we watched, he ate a fresh fruit salad with cottage cheese and fruit juice, a situation that reminded him, he told us, of lunching once at '21' with Greta Garbo when a woman came up, pointed to his plate and shouted, "He eats! He eats!"

Gayelord Hauser at work with the things he knows and loves best—nourishing, healthy foods.

"Who are the most beautiful women in the world? The Swedes," says Gayelord Hauser. "In Scandinavia they love milk, cheese, black breads, fresh vegetables and fruits. They are healthy, nature-loving nations. Let us hope that we shall become like them. Intelligent mothers will teach their children to live better. I always come back to the same principles—that only fresh, living food can build a living body and that this food is there to be enjoyed at times when you can relax with your family in the surroundings you love best.

"Our lives are now more stressful," Mr. Hauser explains. "We are all pushed more. The traffic is bad, things don't work, our time is often uselessly wasted. We can overcome much of that by good nourishment—because if we are well nourished, we are not so irritable. We can endure things better. It's not a fad—it's a new lifestyle."

To learn the new lifestyle, here are seven ways Gayelord Hauser recommends as a prescription for happier, more natural living.

1 Watch your blood sugar level

"We know that physical diseases are affected by nutrition, but it is now being proved that mental health is also deeply affected by it. Hypoglycaemia, or low blood sugar, for instance, is now quickly diagnosed and helped by diet. When your blood sugar drops, you begin to get tired, forgetful, anxious, and let-down feelings. (The cause is a problem metabolizing carbohydrates. Diet can help this situation. To maintain your blood sugar level between meals, use protein foods such as a handful of sunflower seeds, high-protein tablets, milk, cottage cheese, or a hard-boiled egg."

2 Eat a good breakfast

"At the moment we are upside-down people, to get up in the morning with a full day ahead and only have coffee and a donut. No wonder morning irritability and difficulties are commonplace. If you are fortified with one or two eggs, a little cheese as in Switzerland or fish as in England, some whole wheat toast, fruit, milk—this keeps your blood sugar level up and your temper down."

3 Retrain your appetite

"People are afraid of eating a big breakfast because they are afraid of overweight. Fundamentally, reducing means to find out what your body tolerates, how much you can eat to be fit, and then retain your appetite. It's much easier to do this now with fresh and natural foods—the new lifestyle. For instance, you can hardly overeat on whole wheat bread, it's so nourishing—whereas if you eat processed white bread, you can eat six slices and still feel hungry! Undercook your vegetables, choose only fresh ones, and eat fresh fruit rather than sticky desserts. This

ROOF WINDOWS that can be set in the sloping roofs of modern or traditional houses to open up attic or loft spaces to light and view are imports from Denmark. The pine frames are encased in aluminum lacquered gray-brown in sizes ranging from 21⅝ by 27½ inches to 52¾ by 55 inches. In two major models, these roof windows are equipped with flashings; blue exterior awnings, blue or gray interior roller blinds, or white Venetian blinds are available as accessories. Type GGL includes a ventilating flap and filter to admit air while the window is closed, hinges to hold the window open in any position and to reverse for easy cleaning from inside, double pane insulating glass, and a double action lock. Type FVA can be reversed for indoor cleaning, requires installation of two glass panes, can be held open in four positions. Velux, 26 Pickett St., Beverly, Mass. 01915.

STAPLED VINYL FLOOR. New vinyl flooring, in rolls of 6- or 12-foot widths, is stapled with a staple gun to the floor around the border of a room, and can be applied to particle board, plywood, or wood floor, but n cushioned vinyl. You can cement it to concrete, terrazzo, marble, or ceramic tile masonry that won't take staples. Cement is used where a staple gun won't reach (under cabinet overhangs) or where staples can't be concealed with a baseboard molding. Composed of a clear vinyl, foam inner cushion, special backing, it is flexible, so can be handled, cut, fitted easily, even carri and folded. If you should slightly undercut roll, the elasticity permits stretching it, and it also absorbs slack or wrinkles if you install it too loosely. It will bridge small underfloor irregularities, stay taut if sub-floor expands or contracts. Tredway in Villa Cortez (a terra cotta, gold, beige, green pattern) or Santa Flora (blue, gold, green, off-white) is in the medium price range. Armstrong Cork Co., Lancaster, Pa. 18604.

Architect Harwood Taylor removed the doors and shelves of unused pantry cupboards and applied wood strips diagonally at back and front of the cabinet frames; they form a crisscross lattice to hold wine bottles.

CORDLESS TOOL SYSTEM provides an "energy pak" handle and a recharger that accommodates seven different power tools. Instead of buying power tools of various makes and separate battery cells and chargers to operate them, this one unit will handle the following tools of the Mod-4 system: an upright grass shear, shrub trimmer, sealed beam lantern, hand grass shear, ¼-inch drill, 1-quart and 1-gallon sprayer. Each tool of the system slides into the rechargeable energy pak handle and charger. The handle unit houses four nickel cadmium cells, and the recharger, plugged into a 120-volt outlet, will recharge the energy pak in 16 hours. The energy pak with charger and one tool head ranges in price from $19.99 to $29.99; individual tool heads are from $9.99 to $19.99. Black & Decker Manufacturing Co., Towson, Md. 21204. ■

All the fuss about smoking got me thinking I'd either quit or smoke True.

I smoke True.

Don't Let This Summer Destroy Your Complexion

Summer may be a recreation season for you, but a near-disaster for your complexion. You could end the three-month summer season looking decidedly older.

Just one summer day can be like a whirlwind tour through the climates of the world. You swim, then bake on a beach beneath a desert-like sun. You step from sun-baked sidewalks into chilly air-conditioned restaurants or stores. A sudden summer storm leaves the air steaming and humid. Your complexion is exposed with shocking suddenness to a gamut of environments.

No wonder your skin becomes dryer as the summer days pass. And the dryer your skin, the more that dryness emphasizes little lines and wrinkles. And the older you can look. But there's no need to fret. You may enjoy summer fun and still maintain your own youthful look.

Many younger-looking women, from Acapulco to Sydney, discovered a beautiful secret, a unique fluid known in the United States as Oil of Olay beauty lotion. This summer, share the secret of the lovely benefits of this world-renowned liquid that eases away wrinkle-accenting dryness. Complexion-cherishing Oil of Olay, discovered by beauty connoisseurs, softens and silkens a woman's complexion with a wealth of pure moisture, tropical moisturizing oils and other emollients.

Oil of Olay, available at drugstores, penetrates so quickly, so completely, it leaves no greasy after-feel on the skin so the dryness that can make you look older than you like is eased away. The beauty fluid helps maintain the oil-moisture balance, necessary if your complexion is to look as young as possible. The skin-loving liquid also helps keep nature's own moisture from evaporating into the summer air.

Your skin would welcome Oil of Olay whenever it feels dry or slightly tight or rough to the touch. Smooth on at bedtime so it can work its wonders during nocturnal hours. Again in the morning, as a moisty, non-greasy base that lets cosmetics stay fresh for hours.

Summer Beauty Secrets

Gently bathe away your sun-protective lotion after sunning. Pat your body not-quite-dry, then soothe your still-damp skin with Oil of Olay wherever the sun's rays have reached you.

* * *

If you wear sunglasses, your skin can seem dry where the frames touch your nose, temples and ears. More frequent use of Oil of Olay® on these sensitive spots will be welcome and helpful.

way you will retain your appetite. Then if you make a mistake, as we all do occasionally, it can be rectified by what the Russians call 'unloading.' "

4 Try a new elimination diet

"When you need a quick 'unloading' day, this diet is easy and safe for almost everyone." (But it's wise to check with your doctor first.) "It's inexpensive, too. The poorest people can do it. Have tea or coffee in the morning with fruit juice (liquid), and for lunch have two, three, or as many as you want —boiled potatoes. No butter with them—use a vegetable salt, or parsley and lemon, or herbs. Have a cup of tea in the afternoon if you want. And at night, have two baked potatoes, or peeled ones. Again, no butter. You'll find you'll feel so nourished and so full that you don't feel at all hungry. You won't get a headache as you do if you fast completely, and you lose a pound. You urinate well, you lose puffiness because of the potassium-rich content of potatoes, and it's easy."

5 Eat well inexpensively

"If you can't afford meat and expensive proteins, a quart of skim milk with a cup of powdered skim milk (or nonfat dry milk) gives you 60 grams of protein—the daily requirement of an average person. (Try my Hi-Vi Milk Formula: combine 1 quart fresh skim milk, 1 to 1½ cups dry skim milk, and 2 tablespoons vegetable oil. Thoroughly mix in blender or with egg beater. Use this formula not only as a beverage but also for cooking purposes and for pouring over cereals.) In the vegetable world, the one vegetable that provides you with all the necessary protein is the inexpensive soybean. Eat soybeans and you will stay healthy."

6 Enjoy your food

"This may sound simple, but so many people eat absent-mindedly or bolt their food. Eating should be a little celebration—so the digestion can go to work properly. If you choose wholesome natural foods, eat them slowly, chewing them twice as long as you now do, and thus you will feed your satisfaction center. Never eat when you are emotionally upset. Approach the table in a spirit of peace and harmony, and then the meal will replenish and nourish you without putting on weight."

7 Learn the difference between work and play

"Don't have workitis. If you take your work home with you at night it will shorten your life. Do your best during the day, leave your cares at the office, and then go home and play with your family. Fight fatigue by exercise and relaxation, and make it easier to fall asleep by taking one gram of calcium a day. Nervousness and jangled nerves, the inability to unwind, can be due to lack of calcium and B vitamins. A good, tranquilizing nightcap is 1 tablespoon powdered skim milk, 2 teaspoons molasses or honey, and 1 teaspoon brewer's yeast. Stir into a cup of warm milk and sip slowly."

What Gayelord Hauser has to teach us is now all in his New Treasury of Secrets (Farrar, Straus & Giroux). Mr. Hauser has been successfully teaching his three principles of nutrition, movement, and relaxation for over fifty years—what is new is that for the first time people are really becoming conscious of what they eat and how it affects the way they live.

"Nutrition is a young science," he says. "We don't know much yet. We have only discovered between fifteen and twenty vitamins, and just a few minerals. There is still something in fresh fruit that a chemist analyzing it cannot place. We must trust nature. It has kept us alive for many years, and people at last are beginning to know it.

"The time will come when you will go to a doctor and he will give you tests and weigh you and all this information will be fed into a computer and out will come how much Vitamin A you need, how much protein you need, and so on. We are all different. We look different. Our pulses are different. Our blood pressures are different. Why should we all follow the same diet? One day your diet will be adjusted for you and you alone. Meanwhile, you must learn to know what your body needs, and be your own nutritionist."

Gayelord Hauser believes also that we need repose. "Privacy and peace are the most difficult things

Introducing the paint color system that keeps you from getting a lemon.

Imagine. The first lemon-proof selection system.

Every color's arranged according to family. Blue-greens, pinks and reds, yellows, oranges and 18 others, including neutrals and soft pastels.

Meaning they're all where they ought to be at last. In easy-to-find, easy-to-compare groups instead of scattered, helter-skelter, through a thousand and one paint chips.

What's more, for once you've got a range of real choices in every family. Thirty-six of them. All the way from bright, clear colors to the deep, rich variety, both muted and otherwise.

Precisely 792 very stylish colors all told, on paint chips large enough not to leave the outcome to your imagination. Yours in an equally revolutionary paint called Microflo™ WALLHIDE® that really brings out the color's beauty.

So naturally, picking the right color isn't a hit-or-miss proposition anymore. It's as easy as finding your nearest Pittsburgh Paints retailer in the Yellow Pages.

When you get a lemon from us, it'll be on purpose.

At Bloomingdale's; Neiman-Marcus; Marshall Field; Joseph Magnin.

L'ORÉAL . . . It's the summer of the "curly-natural" head—one that needs little fussing when there's so much else to do. An Extra Body Perm is all you need to give your hair curl and body that will stay in no matter what the humidity or whatever you might do. Use big plastic rollers for body and medium or small rollers for curls—it's that simple. In two formulas for tinted or natural hair. $2.95. At drugstores everywhere.

MAX FACTOR . . . Just like the movies—A Classic is re-released! It's the original 1930 Lip Gloss Stick, the clear peach-tinted glosser that goes on "natural" and soothes dry lips. $1.50 in its traditional gold-toned tube. At Macy's; Carson Pirie Scott; May D&F.

GERMAINE MONTEIL . . . If you like the fresh, piquant zest of tangerines you'll love Régime Splash and Régime Spray Cologne. When it seems as if nothing could cool off a muggy day a slosh of Splash will do it. And the Spray Cologne is an airy substitute for perfume on a hot night—it's lighter. Régime Splash, 8 ounces, $7.50; Régime Spray Cologne, 2 ounces, $6.50. At Saks Fifth Avenue; Neiman Marcus.

LUBIN . . . Would you believe a recipe that contained 143 ingredients? That's what it takes to produce L de Lubin, a brand-new fragrance from France. It's a clear floral scent with overtones of sandalwood and oak moss that's clean—just right for day in the eau de toilette, (especially if you keep it chilled). Perfume, 1 ounce, $45; eau de toilette, 4 ounces, $13.50. At B. Altman & Co.; Marshall Field; I. Magnin; Bullock's. ■

How to give your life at home

more meaning

From answers to our January issue questionnaire:

Are you spending more time at home?
9 out of 10 H&G readers are

Are more people coming to see you?
48% of H&G readers say yes

Are you sharing expenses more equally?
54% of H&G families have 2 incomes

Are you using your skills more?
48% of H&G readers are doing more crafts

The turning inward, the focus on home that we are observing today, the new surge to make things, to get into handcrafts, to garden and provide the family with food from natural resources, to share family activities, represents an exhilarating pattern of change across the country.

"In the face of outside pressures from work, and organizations, home is the place where you can get the most satisfaction, doing something in a way that feels more personal, more real, where you can intensify personal pleasures," explains anthropologist Dr. Rayna Reiter.

Through personal involvement in home activities, doing the things that mean most to the individual, life develops more meaning. Fifty-one percent of the readers answering House & Garden's questionnaire last January (more on this pages 41, 94) chose a craftsroom or studio as the room they would most like to have. Somewhere they could be their own person and develop their own skills.

"Because there are few enduring, satisfactory ties outside the home in our mobile, technological society," Dr. Reiter points out, "the turning inward provides a release from external tensions and home appears as a great source of strength, from which we derive trust, love, sharing, reciprocity in human relationships."

Once you can prove to yourself that you can bring out your potential successfully and have your ideas and creativity reinforced within the family, predicts Dr. Reiter, you can launch out into larger issues. You can channel personal energy into community collaboration. So a larger slice of your life has more meaning.

The starting point for it all is to work with the givens. Look at what you can do, see how you might broaden your horizon. Accept what is there now, today; in psychological terms adjust to the positives.

This issue is full of people who developed their talents positively, to live with more meaning:

The Gutcheons, page 40, who quilt together or follow individual pursuits successfully. The Koturs, page 46, who worked four years to restore an old house. The Grausmans, page 50, who gutted a gardener's cottage (for his sculpting) and remodeled a barn (for her dancing). The Kasprzyckis, page 42, who created a house around a common interest gardening. The Schlachters, page 66, who with their architect, built a new house that is sensitive to all their individual and collective needs as a family.

Aside from these very human stories, we have ideas for summer, decorating, places to go, surprises to give your rooms, ways to start celebrating the Bicentennial, plus an up-to-date report on the big boom in cooking schools.

Whatever it is that you or your family want to do to enhance living today is possible. You have the options. It's your choice to give your life more meaning.

Comfortable porch—best summer living

"This porch means summer to us. It's a gathering place for us and our children and friends. We read the morning paper here, have a tray lunch, do needlepoint, share a drink before dinner. It is cool on hot days, pleasant even when it rains. It's our summer living room." The Richard V. Hares' porch is a semicircle shaded by magnolia and wisteria. It catches Long Island breezes from the east, south, and west. The upholstered wicker furniture has summered here eleven years, protected by plastic slipcovers popped on at bedtime. At the edge of the porch is a wall of flowers—hanging baskets of angel-wing and tuberous begonias, tubs of fuchsias and scented geraniums, impatiens in curved narrow planters. Just beyond the porch is a green wall of arborvitae and rhododendrons. More on the arborvitae in Gardener's Notes, page 140.

For a great American summer

...wonderful new things to see and experience, ways to start celebrating America's Bicentennial.

Exciting new water garden

Downtown in a sun-baked Texas city you are surprised by sloping shelves of cool shallow water, an upside down pyramid, a four-and-a-half block water garden with three areas to explore. Right: You walk down slab steps as city sounds fade in the rush of water. A slanting waterfall rises above you, swirls past under your feet to a place where narrow lighted waterfalls plunge into a roiling pool.

A sheet of water in another garden is so very still a leaf can startle it. It is surrounded by high walls that are veiled in falling water and have the sound of rain.

Tiny clustered fountains to the south spray like fireworks, flowers, comets, a hallelujah of jets and rainbows waking up the sky—water celebrating itself.

This extraordinary Fort Worth Water Garden, topographical sculpture, call it what you will but experience it, was designed by architects Philip Johnson and John Burgee and is a gift to the city from the Amon G. Carter Foundation. It is between Commerce and Houston Streets, near the Convention Center, and open free all year, until 10 on summer nights. Sometimes there are formal concerts.

From a garden to a city dream—the magical I.D.S. Center, occupying a whole city block in Minneapolis, also designed by Philip Johnson and John Burgee—a glass-roofed galleria of shops, bank, restaurants, fountains around a central plaza or "Crystal Court," immune to weather all year.

In Philadelphia's Society Hill, between the Delaware River and Independence Hall, discover a feast of restored Colonial houses and gardens. The Powel, Hill-Keith-Physick-Dolley Todd Madison, Bishop White, "Man Full of Trouble Tavern" are all open as museums. So are the refurbished Independence Hall, Carpenter's Hall, 1761 St. Peter's Hall. Also public market, restaurant, shops.

your Answers to our Questions

The following twenty pages draw their inspiration from the thousands of thoughtful, concerned answers we received to our questionnaire "How liberated is your household?" You will find some ideas to help you free up your time and your house for what means most to you, and you will meet some families who have worked out their own imaginative ways of doing it.

In the living room, left, bright space alive with the color and geometric pattern of quilts. Making the frame a permanent fixture in their big living area leaves them much more time for quilting—which they can pick up whenever there's a minute to spare.

Q. WHO TAKES CARE OF THE GARDEN AT YOUR HOUSE?

A. "We both garden! It's our way of life indoors and out"

A young California couple lives among the growing things they love in a cedar-shingled house they've made into a bower of flowers, vines, and ferns, and they paint plants for a living. Sandi Tommela, designer for Denby Limoges china, works in her home studio, left. (One of her china patterns is the popular zinnia "Contrariwise" design of her coffeepot.) Her husband, Jan Kasprzycki, also works at home, painted the "Wild Hawaiian Ginger" above their flowery bed, right. Together they care for their 8-year-old daughter, Lisa, show their floral paintings at their new art gallery in Laguna, and tend their hillside garden overlooking the Pacific. Every room in the house, which they remodeled with architect Paul Johansson, is an indoor garden of pot plants paint-box fresh.

Q. WHO DOES THE COOKING AT YOUR HOUSE?

A. "We all do! And we're enjoying it so much we're going to cooking classes"

There's a cooking boom across the country; men, women, and children are taking up the whisk, and to help them there are great cooks teaching in a mushrooming roster of cooking schools from coast to coast. In New York alone the number of schools has quadrupled in the past six years. Courses in canning, pastry or bread making, Chinese and all the international cuisines take place anywhere from the cook's own kitchen to a highly organized cooking school like James Beard's in New York. Here we bring lessons from three schools across the country and our pick of the list of America's good cooking schools.

"When children start cooking they become more interested in experimenting with new foods," says Felipe Rojas-Lombardi who teaches seven to twelve year olds at the Little Red School House in New York. Not that these children have to be coaxed to munch the breads they make in the popular baking class that includes sausage bread and a braided buttermilk bread. While they knead away, Mr. Rojas-Lombardi, author of the A to Z No Cook Cook Book, chats advice.

"I started teaching to get ideas for my books," says Texas's great cook Helen Corbitt, who dedicated her last book Helen Corbitt Cooks for Company to her classes (separate ones for men and women). Each month the men, a spirited group of doctors, lawyers, stockbrokers, architects, and jet pilots, gather to learn a whole menu; for this class crown roast of pork, corn oysters, and a marvelous Cheddar cheese apple pie (these and other recipes on page 81). Students are expected to try the dinner themselves within a week and report back any hitches. Twice a year they throw a party themselves, invite their wives, and expect some succinct criticism from their teacher. These classes are by invitation only, however Miss Corbitt gives many classes for charity across the country (St. Louis, Atlanta, Fort Worth, Houston).

In a pretty apartment in San Francisco Emalee Chapman teaches small classes of 4-6 students (larger classes take place at the Forrest Jones Kitchen Shop). Students help prepare a complete meal, usually Italian and Piedmontese or Florentine in flavor; they also pick up great tips on where to shop for the freshest most inexpensive food, how to bone a breast of veal, decorate desserts with aplomb. Everyone then sits down to lunch in a tiny garden or beside a roaring fire.

WHO DOES WHAT IN YOUR HOUSEHOLD?

"We make decisions together and together, we transformed an old inn into a weekend house"

Sheila and Robert Kotur scraped paint, stained floors, and stenciled walls to share in the restoration of their house

The success of the Robert Koturs' partnership (she is Sheila Camera the artist and designer, he is a market research executive) and their marvelous restoration of an 18th-century New England country inn into a weekend and vacation house, has its origin in agreement. Whether it's a matter of stripping paint off a wall or taking the children to school, they make the decision together. This kind of attitude, the drawing of double energy to any situation enables them to see through projects that might deter others. The rescuing of their house, for instance, turned out to be a four-year operation. "It was very neglected, hadn't been lived in for five years and was empty during the Depression. While the main structure was sound," explained Robert, "some floors were rotting, inside walls, doors and moldings were layered with paint. It had gone through a forties modernization and most of the old character had been lost." They plunged into repair work themselves, using a local contractor for major jobs like plumbing, kitchen and bathroom installation, and rewiring. "People just couldn't see its potential," said Sheila. "We turned it from a two-bedroom into a four-bedroom house by breaking through into a storage space over the porch—this became a bedroom for our two daughters—and opening up the third-floor attic. We created a whole new outdoor room where the old porch had been, replacing the wooden floor with a brick terrace. Now this is where we spend most of our time in the summer." Most important was their wish to put back a graceful elegant quality into an old house steeped in history. As a coaching inn originally, it had been a stopover on the Hartford to Albany pike. They inherited a modern oak floor in the living room, once the taproom. "We wanted to make it look more like what it should have been—wide boards. So we sanded it down and leaving three boards natural, stained every next three boards ebony, and so on all the way across." Then came the fun of furnishing, going to auctions, galleries, country fairs, buying a few treasures—like the English 18th-century black leather screen in the living room—finding and refurbishing old pieces themselves. Some chairs even came from a furniture sale on board a cruise ship. Sheila did the shopping and found a fascinating new interest in 18th-century decoration in the process.

JED HARDIN

He worked on the outside, pruned trees, planted the garden, did all the heavy jobs, like sanding floors

She centered small needlepoint pieces in large pillows, made chintz table skirt

They stripped old mantel, highlighting carved details with ivory paint on white

BEADLE

The house, 3, has a feeling of nature all through, to stress the romantic 18th century. No curtains to interrupt outdoor scenes. In the living room, 1 and 2, nearly everything is white. "It would have been easy to have a dark room, so much 18th-century furniture is dark wood, but I didn't want that," said Sheila. Hunting for white painted antiques she found three interesting chairs, one a signed Philadelphia piece, now grouped around the card table. At the fireplace, 2, the dogs and plates on the mantel are Staffordshire. Doorway behind the screen leads to brick terrace, 8. White trellis was there before, pieces numbered, taken down, and reassembled after new paving was laid. In this joint family effort, Robert prunes apple trees, 4, Sheila stencils walls, 5, father and daughter work on upstairs attic floor, 6. Mother and both daughters pick meadow flowers, 7, for wonderful indoor bouquets.

She cleaned up antique black leather screen, uncovered brig Chinese bird design

They stripped and stained modern oak flo in a natural and ebony stripe

She washed antique needle point rugs and made pieces in new pillows

"It was fun peeling away 200 years and taking the house back almost to its original state"

In their efforts to restore authentic character to the house, the Koturs talked to neighborhood people who remembered what the place had looked like fifty and sixty years ago, particularly members of the Curtiss family. "It had been a Curtiss inn, they were some of the earliest settlers in New England. We found out that what is now our bedroom was once a ballroom, and a Curtiss recalled seeing a motif over the fireplace. We got the paint remover out and took eight layers of paint away. The first thing we uncovered was a big red stenciled flower. It was so exciting I could hardly believe it," Sheila said. After reading books on historical decoration, visiting other houses with stenciled walls, and studying old colors, she decided to repaint the faded patterns herself (Robert made tracings of each design for her). Another job for him was knocking down the plasterboard ceiling in the library/dining room to expose great old beams. On the outside of the house, both scraped paint off marble steps and window decorations, returning the stone to its natural beauty. Both put individual creativity into particular aspects of the project . . . Robert gardening, Sheila needleworking all the pillows, bed curtains, tableskirts, needlepointing little cushions, making the appliquéd bed quilt. Their renovation schedule was systematic and effective and went like this: The first year, after painting the upstairs white, they lived in the two bedrooms, making the master room double as a living room. This allowed them to have major work done freely, remove an old bathroom, pull out the kitchen, put in a new one, fix

"We uncovered red stenciled flowers—it was so exciting we couldn't believe it" up the study and living room. When downstairs was completed, they started furnishing. The study was finished first and served as a living room until the big living room was completed. The second year was spent on finishing and furnishing upstairs, making the girls' room. Then came the master bedroom stenciling. The third year was devoted to the outside and the garden, plus a start on the attic, which is still in the process of being converted to guest wing. Whatever they are involved with, their two daughters, Fiona and Alexandra join in. "We believe children should take part and help in work," added Robert. "We like to share and do everything together as a family whenever we can. We all enjoy it."

Q. ARE THERE ROOMS IN YOUR HOUSE THAT SEEM TO BELONG TO ONE MORE THAN THE OTHER?

A. "Yes, we remodeled a gardener's cottage and a barn so now we each have our own studio"

Philip and Martha Grausman created separate work places near the house they remodeled and enjoy together

He's a sculptor, she's a dancer—two full-time careers—and both work at home. A six-year-old son completes the family. These are the Grausmans, who moved out of New York on her impulse soon after their son, David, was born. The house they found is an 1882 gabled New England house with a gardener's cottage and a barn, situated on a hill, with a stream and a river nearby. They spent two and a half years remodeling—doing the work themselves with the help of friends and local contractors. Much of the house was gutted—they removed a porch, for instance, to give more light in the dark downstairs rooms (her idea) and a floor upstairs to make use of attic space and reveal pretty latticed windows, 7 (his idea). They seeded over the driveway so now you walk up to the house instead of driving (her idea). But the most important remodeling involved their work. Philip took the gardener's cottage, removed most of the upper floor and put in skylights, 5. He kept the old stairs up to a small room where he draws. It has perfect light. "I can watch it change throughout the year." For Martha Clarke, his dancer wife, he transformed the barn/hayloft into a dance studio. He restructured the upper floor to make it stable. He put white painted Sheetrock in the roof with the original wood and added skylights. The most dramatic part of the story, though, is that when he built it she had not been dancing for five years. "I knew she would go back to it," he says. "I didn't," she confesses, "but when I saw the studio I knew I must." Martha is now choreographer and dancer with an international group, Pilobolus, and just received a Guggenheim Grant—a personal triumph.

1. Martha Clarke's dance studio—a transformed hayloft, with a roof of Sheetrock and original wood. On the left side, skylights were inserted made of plastic instead of glass, giving an opaque, almost Japanese effect. 2. The two studios seen from the house—his on the right, hers on the left. A Grausman bronze and stone katydid in the foreground. 3. The main house with his sculpture blending into the landscape. 4. Philip in his studio, sculpting his wife's head. 5. The sculptor at work with an apprentice. 6. The dancer at work with a co-dancer. 7. Upstairs living room, showing gabled roof line, Turkish rugs, wicker lounge.

The Grausmans' separate careers are inextricably entwined with their life together. It shows in the way they run their household. Being close to nature is essential to both of them. They grow things in the garden, constantly improvising and changing. 2. The house inside is all white, with lots of windows and plants—almost like a greenhouse. They share the cooking. There is music all over the house for both of them—and for David, who goes on tour with his mother and works in the studio with his father. They share household expenses—even share the desk, 5. They have part-time help, which Martha Grausman pays for—"because it is work that otherwise I would have to do." Most important of all, they are deeply involved in each other's work. He looks at her dance movements and sees a "great sculptural line, a wonderful new construction." She observes his studies of nature, his "germinating forms" in bronze and marble, and they become part of her choreographic art. They are both fascinated by movement—and the house reflects their interest. On the walls above the dining table, for instance, 1, is a changing exhibit of their work—sculptural shapes, choreographed forms, the two of them at work. In summer, the deck, 6, the biggest space they have to entertain in, is full of her dancers and his artists, who meet after working in the studios. "We've always enjoyed the same people—our work creates richness." Philip designed the deck himself with an architect friend's help, and built it with two young carpenters. The Grausmans do not belittle the hard slog and sometimes pain it took to work on the house. "You've heard of people remodeling houses and then getting a divorce?" laughs Martha Clarke. "We really bubbled out of the ashes of this place." Philip agrees. "The experience of the house was sometimes a nightmare, but now it's beyond dreams." "We both work very much from nature, so this place is inspiration," Martha says. "I get very homesick for this house when I'm on tour. The right house is like the right clothing—it fits comfortably."

"Our visual world is part of our careers—and our lives"

Desk/TV area of upstairs living room—desk specially designed with Formica top by Philip Grausman to fit the space over the radiator. 6. Deck—large space for entertaining, white wicker furniture, Grausman grasshopper in bronze and brass. 7 and 9. Summer buffet with famous Grausman iced tea. 8. Original kitchen, painted white, with her basket and plate collection, brought home from her travels.

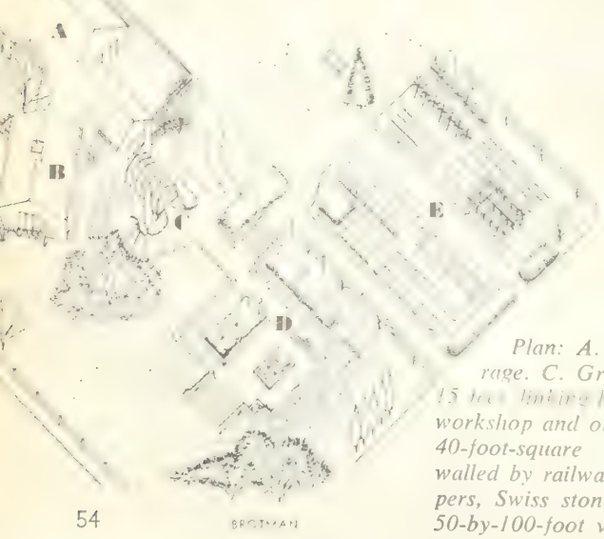
Q. HOW DO YOU ALLOT YOUR FREE TIME?

A. "We love gardening, and working together doubles the satisfaction"

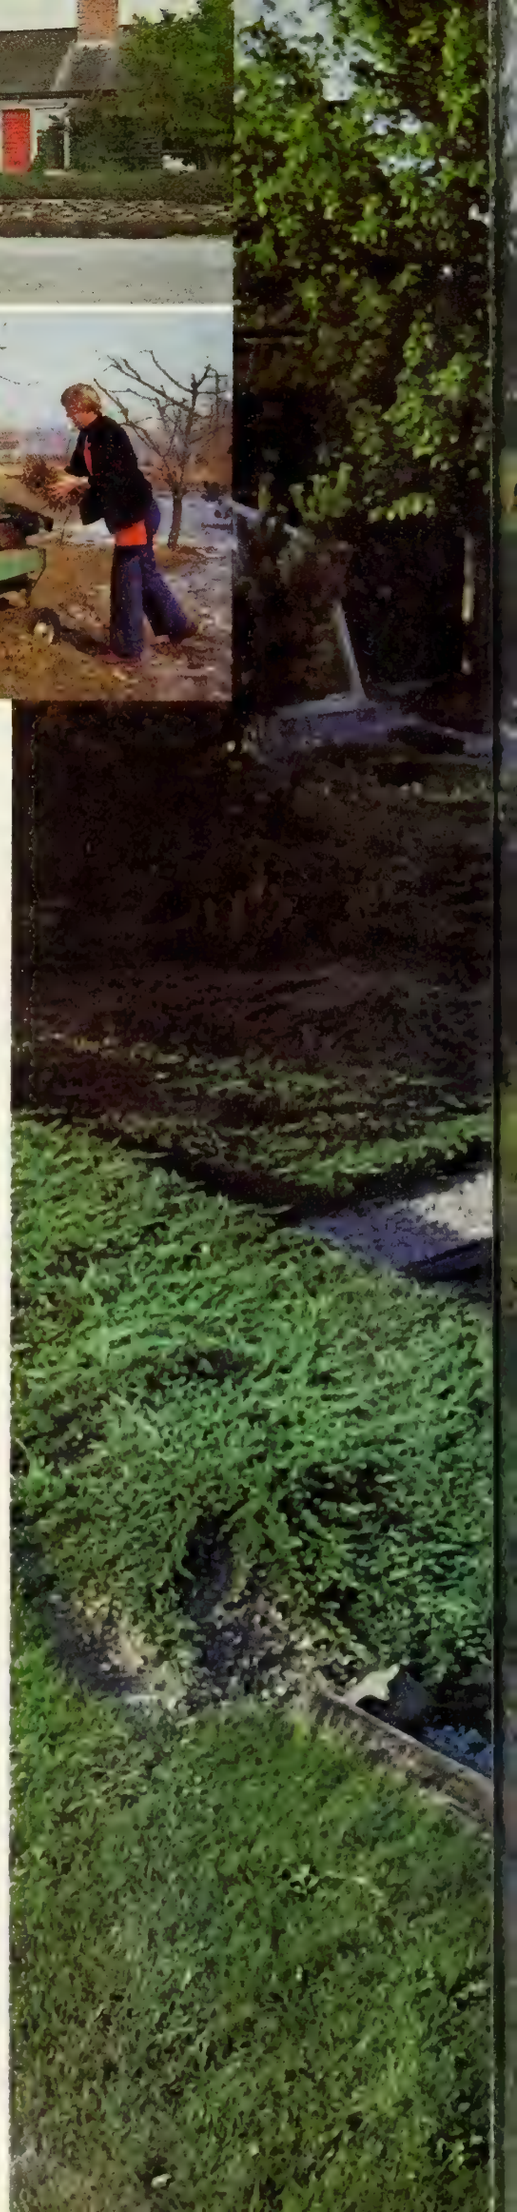
Betsy McBratney grows flowers, Greer McBratney grows vegetables, they share the relaxation and the happy results

They garden in spare hours and "the children help, too, when they are home," says Mrs. Greer McBratney. This couple shares a big garden, an active community life, and an interest in boating with their five children now eighteen to twenty-four. Dr. McBratney "never has a full day home but takes time when he can for his vegetable garden. At harvest time I help cook, peddle, call friends." The children participate in "Sunday work detail." The flower garden is her bailiwick. "Make the garden truly yours," challenged nurseryman Allen Haskell, who excavated, laid out paths and beds, but left the choice of plants to her. (More on him in Gardener's Notes, page 140.) Like sunny summer days, her flower beds brim with hues of yellow sun and blue sky. Among the yellow to orange to bronze perennials: achillea, butterfly weed, daylily, gaillardia, oenothera, Oriental poppy, potentilla fruticosa, rudbeckia, sedum Indian Chief, senecio Desdemona, Shasta daisy, trollius. The lavender-blue perennials include: anchusa, aster Frikartii, bachelor's button, iris, lavender, plumbago larpentiae, polemonium, stokesia, verbena venosa. Annuals add their spark: African daisies, ageratum, cacalia plumosa, cosmos, gazania, heliotrope, lantana, nicotiana, and marigolds.

1. View of greenhouse, flower and vegetable gardens, sailboats on the horizon. 2. Dr. and Mrs. McBratney share spring clean-up. Debris goes through a Kemp shredder onto a plastic sheet emptied into a lath-enclosed compost area. 3. The McBratneys' house has one floor in front, two in back, overlooking Buzzard's Bay in Massachusetts. 4. A Lord & Burnham aluminum greenhouse was added seven years ago.



Plan: A. House. B. Garage. C. Greenhouse, 9-by-15 feet, linking basement garden workshop and outdoors. D. Her 40-foot-square flower garden walled by railway ties, low junipers, Swiss stone pines. E. His 50-by-100-foot vegetable garden fenced by espaliered fruit trees.



Flower garden, right, sunken as protection from sea winds, sheltered on the southwest by pines. This garden was leveled down to hardpan by a bulldozer. Each small bed was raised and framed with railway ties and filled with a fresh start of loam, peatmoss, bonemeal, other nutrients.

For low maintenance, low ground covers and flowers that never need staking

Flat juniper (J. procumbens nana) makes a soft mat for a big stone rabbit

Greenhouse gives seeds an early start, provides flowers for the house all winter

"With our greenhouse and garden workshop we can garden all year"

"We do things from start to finish here," Dr. McBratney says. They grow vegetables, flowers, herbs, berries and fruit—from seeds or cuttings. They harvest their crops for the table and to keep for winter. The vegetable garden was plowed first by a farmer, is now rotary-tilled every spring and fall. Some favorite crops are kohlrabi ("so good raw it rarely makes the pot"), Ruby lettuce ("good and makes a good border"), Green Mountain potatoes, and Ebenezer onions ("a good keeper"). Among the fruits they grow are peaches, plums, pears, grapes, blackberries, apples.

"It never seems like work when you garden together and do a little bit all the time"

Many crops are stored on shelves or in a second refrigerator and freezer in the garden workshop. To start seeds the McBratneys use a sterile soiless mix. They enclose flats in plastic bags and set them to germinate in a six-tiered metal shelf in the warm 75-80 degree furnace room adjoining the workshop. They later put them under fluorescent lights or in the greenhouse. They set them outside on sunny days to harden off before planting. All plants are fed Rapid-Gro and sometimes fish emulsion. On hand for outdoor pest problems are supplies such as Isotox systemic, Bug-geta, Diazinon, Dipel, Malathion, and a favorite source, Cynthia Westcott's The Gardener's Bug Book. Other workshop aids: plenty of shelf space for garden gear and catalogues, a bulletin board for handy reminders, storage bins on wheels.

1. From the deck, the triumph of Dr. McBratney's vegetable garden in late summer. Homegrown salad is served after chowder with bread, cheese, pears. 2. Dr. McBratney, a full-time surgeon, is a deft part-time pruner. 3. In the greenhouse, Mrs. McBratney uses a hose and wand attachment for flowers. 4. Spring rite: working together to start flowers and vegetables from seed. 5. Lights on adjustable chains provide artificial sunshine for seedling growth. 6. A great garden workshop for all seasons. 7. Wide counter and sink for washing pots and produce. 8. Daughter Ann's pumpkin pies from father's homegrown pumpkins.

An inclined trellis for cucumbers and a tepee trellis for tomatoes are both made of saplings braced and bound with garden twine. They keep crops off the ground, open to every ripening ray of sun, handy to tend or pick. The cucumber frame is 8-feet square, up 1 foot. The tepees have slanting 5½ foot poles about 2-inches thick. Inch-thick ridge poles and horizontal side poles are of varying lengths. Easily dismantled and stored at season's end, the trellises last three years or more. Young McBratneys go on "sapling discovery missions" in the woods. Dr. McBratney adapted these ideas from techniques noticed on trips as a volunteer physician in Haiti, Vietnam, and on the Ship Hope.

Couples

Is too much togetherness good for you?

By Caroline Seebohm

Cou•ple, n., two persons of opposite sex considered together, as a married or an engaged pair, lovers, dance partners, etc.

This definition from the Random House Dictionary has a rather charmingly old-fashioned ring to it, in these days of same-sex couples, polygamous couples, liberated couples, just-living-together-this-week couples. Dance partners? There are more ways of becoming a couple than are dreamed of in Random House's philosophy, it seems.

Most people, however, even today, still concern themselves with the most important couple relationship in their lives—the partner they choose to make a life with. And while it would be foolish to pretend that there is a guaranteed method of making this relationship work, there are some ground rules and pointers that can help you attain this difficult ideal.

Dr. Bernice Podesta, clinical psychologist at Bronx Psychiatric Center, Albert Einstein College of Medicine, and teacher of a course on Successful Couple Relationships at New York's Womanschool, believes that there are some basic principles that all individuals should understand before they embark on a relationship of a lifetime:

1. The goal of life is self-differentiation. In other words, know thyself as separate. Until you go some way toward fulfilling yourself as an individual, you will find it almost impossible to become fulfilled in a partnership. The demands will be too great. You must know your needs, your desires, your responses, your moral values, to some extent before you can hope to share them with anyone else.

2. The goal of relationships is intimacy—and intimacy is closeness without fusion. "Fusion" means invasion of space—being inside the other person's head. An example of this is when a wife always answers for the husband, or when a husband makes a decision that involves him and his wife without consulting the wife.

The key to these principles is that you must be a complete person in your own right before joining up with another person. If your sense of yourself, of your own identity, is weak, then you will get lost in the relationship and will not be able to contribute to it. You will end up frustrated in yourself, and boring to your partner.

Philip and Martha Grausman, for instance, whose house is described on page 50, say that their marriage was vastly enriched after Martha, who had given up her career five years earlier to have a baby and remodel the house, took up dancing again. "We're both much happier when she's working," says Philip. "Every time she says she thinks she'll quit, I talk her out of it!"

Dr. Podesta points out, however, that when one person who is dissatisfied in a relationship, makes changes to try to become more fulfilled—for instance, by taking up a new hobby or going back to school—this can be very threatening to the other partner, "unless the other partner also becomes involved in new activities and projects, or is already deeply engaged."

If you can both develop your separate interests, equally, then the relationship will grow stronger as you both bring more to it. Dr. Podesta knows a case where both partners in a couple relationship of long-standing have deliberately chosen to do more things separately. Whereas in the past they did everything together, and could even anticipate each other's thoughts, now one will go to a museum without the other, or meet a new friend without the other—and the result has been a revitalization of the relationship. (Closer without fusion.)

Dr. Podesta believes that th are two words that come clos to describing a successful cou relationship: delight and care. light is all the things that are portant for well-being—the giv of gifts, the pleasure of physi contact, being able to laugh cry together and to enjoy thi together, and to communicate t joy to each other.

Care is the responsibility of person for the other, the agr ment of fidelity between them, presence of one partner when i important to be present, the des to cherish. Margaret Mead pressed this most poignant "Having someone wonder wh you are when you don't come ho at night is a very old human nee Care and delight go side by sid they complement each other.

Frankly, these are not thi you can teach people. But you c teach a kind of observation, a w of looking at yourself and yo partner and the relationship as whole so that you can go some w toward developing and strengthe ing whatever ties bind you t gether. Here are six guideli suggested by Dr. Podesta:

1. Develop a sense of hum Being able to laugh about yo lives and yourselves is a great set in a relationship. All succes ful couples laugh a lot.

2. Be open about what is ha pening between you. Discu things before they become a pro lem, not after. Don't build resentment. Continued on page 1

ND B. POGREBIN, HUSBAND OF LIBERATED COTTIN POGREBIN WHO WROTE "GETTING ." (MCKAY $8.95)

The woman who doesn't ask a man to help out in the house is surely a loser in these liberated days of changing roles. In fact, plenty of sociologists and psychologists are gathering impressive statistics to show that the wife who plays doormat, cooking, cleaning, picking up, and generally acting as a handmaiden is more likely to run into a troubled marriage, than not. Part of the reason for this explains Maggie Tripp, author of Woman in the Year 2000 (Arbor House, $8.95) and teacher at the New School for Social Research, is that if you live with a man for ten or fifteen years and have no outside interests, you begin to mirror his thinking. "Then should he hit trouble, with his career, financially, sexually, or whatever, you can only give him back what he has already said. And he doesn't want that, because nowhere for him to go, it's a dead end, so he turns away for other stimulation. The thing to fear," Mrs. Tripp goes on, "is growing apart. And there will be a gap if you do all those things that you are programed to do on television advertising. You have to be somebody else, then wife and mother."

Mrs. Tripp and her husband, Allan, a new product inventor, married for thirty-three years with two grown-up children, have always shared the household chores, and had their separate rooms. His bathroom, his bedroom; her bathroom, her bedroom. "Our two rooms show the difference between his and hers. And his bathroom is a model of tidiness, mine is not." He makes breakfast, she makes coffee. "We have an agreement, I will make dinner, but he will clean up the kitchen, because I hate to do that. But on the whole we renegotiate every breakfast, and we've learned to fight fairly. He sometimes says, I can't cope, you take over for six weeks and I'll do it. I say to women who come to my classes, you don't have to have a job to be more assertive with the man in your life, but learn to be good at something. It might even be butterfly collecting. So then when somebody says, 'I know you're good at whatever it is, will you come out to our next seminar another experience. As woman has made a commitme something that the man sees is im portant and needful to her, he begins to change. He doesn't worry about the dinner not being on the table when he comes home, or the house not being quite perfect. The situation forces some sort of collaboration at home. My husband feels that my successes have added tremendously to his whole and he's happier for it. I think many women do not have faith in their husbands' ability to understand—and are afraid to test it."

There certainly is fear involved on both sides, confirms psychoanalyst Dr. Robert Weinstein, a founding member of the Men's Center in New York, who trains counselors for men's consciousness raising groups. (Very useful men's groups that meet to discuss changing roles today in reference to women's liberation.) "I've found it's true that many women are unable to speak up and tell the man what their needs are," he says, "because they feel they're going to be seen perhaps as unfeminine, or as complaining and unappreciative. They're afraid of being left, of abandonment if they're assertive. But there's very little validity in this anxiety. I've found that most often there is an increasing degree oes your household evolve too much around our children?

By Sandra Oddo

Six years ago our cleaning woman left and we couldn't find anyone to replace her. We decided to e the housework and pay our- es what we had been paying "

We have work lists. Each child chores he must do before he go to play."

There are the standard things dmaking, table setting, keep- the rooms straight—and other that, I ask for help and usu- get it."

We used to designate chores, found that it created unnec- ry discussion. Now we do a lot alking with each other but we age the work without a set ern."

Four families, four ways of cooperation between parents and children. "There's a kind of myth about families that can make a large contribution to family problems," says W. Keith Daugherty, director of the Family Services Association, "and that's the expectation that families as a system ought to be able to handle anything that comes along without training, that it's 'natural.' We don't expect that of business or educational systems. Other kinds of systems in society require training and orientation and preparation and continuing education—while we just assume that families will somehow magically work."

But cooperation, successful living at home together, also takes planning and thought. Patterns of dealing with the sheer mechanics —keeping fed, clothed, and clean —have to be dealt with or they'll pile up to overwhelming problems. "All too often, I guess, it's Mother who does everything," says Mr. Daugherty. "But there's really no common law that says Mother has to be the one who mops the floor. Sometimes Father enjoys mopping more than she does. My wife would rather do yard work, and I like what goes on inside the house better. You work out combinations with one another that each of you is comfortable with. Then everybody has to take on some tasks that aren't very comfortable and that nobody likes, but that have to be done if the family's going to run."

To find some successful combinations, we asked people who should know, families with children and ways of working together that keep them reasonably happy.

"Communication and democracy, those are the ground rules," says Gail Olsher. "Who cares who cooks or loads the washing machine? Do we care about each other is the important question. When you reach that goal, when who does what always evens out in the end." To reach it, the Olshers have a once-a-month family day. They spend it together, and they take turns planning it. Last football season, for instance, Mrs. Olsher, Cindy, Scott, and Steven, joined Harvey Olsher in watching the bowl games. Dinner was ordered in. Cindy may take them all off to the stock car races, or Scott may take them bowling. "All of us have very strong lives of our own," says Mrs. Olsher. "We have tended to scatter. But our ten-year-old has had problems. It forced us to seek help, and it forced us to take a long hard honest look at ourselves as a family. I think it has strengthened us." The Olshers handle the mechanics of the household very simply: they ask. And they expect the children to understand if parents are tired, or if there are special projects like the recent thorough garage-cleaning that demanded all day from all of them. "The children are really cooperative," says Mrs. Olsher. "Twelve-year-old Cindy reads to five-year-old Steven, and Scott goes with his father to the office on Saturdays. He fills in as an office boy, he really earns a little money, and he's delighted to eat lunch out with his father."

"Children need a day to do nothing in," says Mariame Emig, the bath takeover

The bath is at last being given the room it deserves. Here are three designed to be lived in—and four specialists to tell you how and why taking a bath can do wonders for you

Bathing for health and pleasure—new tips from doctors

"Wet heat is wonderful therapy for aching joints and muscles. The advantage of a warm bath is that the heat transfers easily and penetrates better into the body tissues than dry heat. Take warm baths, not hot. The temperature of your skin is approximately 67 degrees, so a bath of 80 or 90 degrees is quite hot enough. If you make the water too hot your body is overwhelmed and cannot accept the heat. Remember that when you sit in a bath you are sitting on the sciatic nerve. So if you are treating a lower back or sciatic disorder (and even if you're not!), put a cushion or foam rubber pad on the bottom of the bath to protect you from the hard surface."

Joseph Kahn, Physiotherapist

"Experiment with hot and cold water in short bursts to stimulate circulation and make you feel good. Find a soap that is skin compatible—pH balanced—particularly if you are in a hard water area. Remember that a warm bath interferes with digestion so avoid eating in the bath. Your bath is a time to relax, to meditate, to invigorate, to appreciate yourself. It's your own singular experience to enjoy."

Dr. Alan Levy, Levy Shea Exercise Studio

"Baths are especially good for aching feet. Massage your feet while you are taking your bath for quick relief. See that your bath temperature and the outside temperature do not vary too much. If you take a warm bath and then go out into the cold air you are not doing yourself any good. If the weather is very warm, make your bath water a little cooler—this is more refreshing and your body will be exhilarated. Try taking a shower first, to get clean and stimulated, and then taking a bath to relax—in clean water! For a real tone-up, after the bath take another quick cool shower to finish off."

Dr. Nathaniel Gould, Orthopedic Surgeon

"If the water is hard, use a water softener. Hard water contains minerals and salts, which, combined with ordinary alkaline toilet soaps, form an insoluble salt round the tub and prevent efficient cleansing of the skin. For dry or sensitive skin, try oilated oatmeal or cornstarch added to your bath water. It's a fine powder available at your drug store. If you put oil in the bath, use one that is dispersible, that is, it disperses in tiny droplets through the water and penetrates dry skin rather than staying on the surface where it would simply leave dirt on the skin. Read the label to find if the oil is dispersible—it will say so."

Dr. Samuel M. Peck, Dermatologist

Bath oasis for a busy woman

A place to work, relax, a place for health and beauty

This multipurpose bath is divided by the sofa—one half with desk and bath, opposite page, the other for making up and relaxing, opposite page, far right. It's a fascinating mixture of the feminine (flattering warm colors, frilled curtains, pretty dressing table), and the very practical (desk, bookshelves, telephone). Here you can "write your letters, read magazines, do your needlepoint, take a bath, do your exercises, plan projects in front of the fire," declares designer Françoise de la Renta.

Françoise de la Ren —interior designer busy international hostess, wife of dress designer, Oscar de la Renta.

"My theory of bathrooms is about privacy, about being alone. If you are married and have children, or if you live with another person, or even with a dog or cat, most of the time these people or animals have access to you. The only place where you can really close your door is in the bathroom. So instead of having an extra sitting room or dressing room, or a big bedroom and tiny bathroom, I think that one bathroom can do the job of all these. You can close your door, first of all to have privacy, but also to take off all the close fitting clothes we all wear during the day, and feel quite free. Allow yourself one hour a day of solitude. Anyone can do it—just put a little furniture in your bathroom, even a stool or a pillow, and some magazines—hen, at last, you can be yourself and relax."

John Dickinson, architect and interior designer, talks about the bathroom designed for living

"I have designed bathrooms about as big as a minute, and there is nothing wrong with them except that you hustle in and hustle out. They offer neither room nor reason to linger. But given the space, a bathroom can be as alluring, as comfortable, and as solacing as a beautiful living room or bedroom. It should be an indulgence. I like pictures in bathrooms, flowers, a carpeted floor, maybe a fireplace. If you're a tub buff, a telephone where you can get at it, a little television that will sit on the tub or a table, and a standing lamp to read by. Ideally, a dressing room and closets should be incorporated somehow, like a wing or an annex, and the water closet, as architects like to call it, should be in a cubicle of its own. Psychological privacy. The building materials can be anything at all, and the less stereotyped, the more interesting."

The plan, below, is a complex made possible by space derived from a former bedroom—the new tub area; the original bath—now the shower, closets, toilet cubicle, dressing area, and an expanded hall—now a little study quite open to the master bedroom and the bath proper.

Designed for Dr. and Mrs. Leo Keoshian for their newly remodeled house in San Francisco, the bath is a typical example of Mr. Dickinson's use of unusual materials—or if they are not unusual, he makes them look as though they were. The walls and ceiling, for example: Plain white plaster, they are painstakingly painted to look like what he calls faux cracked marble. "Carole Lansdown did them. She can make anything look like the Parthenon." Everything is Dickinson-designed—tub and washbasin console of stainless steel, "put together like jewelry," the plaster tub-side table with its hoof feet, the brass towel warmer, the stone-colored carpeting with its white and garnet border, the white-lacquered closets, the study desk of garnet lacquered wood, the chaise covered in stone-colored wool, the identical lamps, "they're plaster, but look like stone," the white-lacquered bed with carved, Etruscan claw feet.

TOM YEE

Piero Pinto, architect and interior designer based in Milan but with clients all over the world, talks about the new concept of baths.

"I think that the two most important rooms in a house are the kitchen and the bathroom. The latter—once considered merely a hygienic and precise space—has now invaded the surrounding rooms to become larger and open, more suitable to the modern way of life. Planning a bathroom is very important. After all, it is where you start your day, where you can exercise or relax, where you prepare yourself before going out. And in the evening it is a place to unwind after a busy day. I believe that as people come to accept more and more this concept that a bathroom is a live-in room, walls and divisions will no longer have reason to exist—and houses of the future will be planned with this dramatic new concept in mind. In fact, it is already happening—and it is a very exciting development in the way we live."

HOUSE

A brilliant, active couple, Trudy and Marvin Schlachter (he's president of Chess Janus record company, she's a photographer) were Fire Islanders for years. ("We met there on the beach so it had special meaning for us.") But as their family grew, they began to think about building a larger house. They found land looking on to a creek, and commissioned architect Norman Jaffe to get to work. "They are modern, lively; the house had to look forward, but also to be respectful of the environment," he said. He created a low, horizontal design, which practically melts into the landscape and doesn't shout "contemporary" against the placid frame of nature. Yet it is the essence of contemporary building. By wrapping the earth around and designing big roof overhangs, he provided protection in these energy-conscious times. "Contouring the land keeps in heat in winter and cools the structure in summer." The Schlachters care about music intensely, playing anything from Vivaldi to Elton John almost all the time. Marvin Schlachter is always bringing home new releases, so quadraphonic stereo has its place here as much as a sofa. The turntable, amplifier, tape deck, records, and cassettes are housed in a neat black Formica unit along one living room wall. Three of the speakers are built into the wall, the fourth is freestanding in a corner. The house is actually a four-part orchestration of rooms. "It is an 18th-century house that has become apartments, renovated with no imagination at all, you know, when my client bought it," says interior designer François Catroux, who turned its bland and awkward modernity into an integrated living place with soft, simple sophistication. Doors and windows all are curtained to the ceiling, which masks the varying heights of the openings, makes the low ceilings seem higher, and "gives a feeling of French countryhouse comfort," says Mr. Catroux. The dining room is a small room, simply handled—a table and two sideboards with tailored cotton skirts, white painted chairs—a background designed for candlelight, for comfortable dinners and bright conversation. Walls are covered with matchstick blinds bought by the yard that also make windows seem taller than they are. They match the sisal carpet. Curtains are white canvas caught by metal clasps.

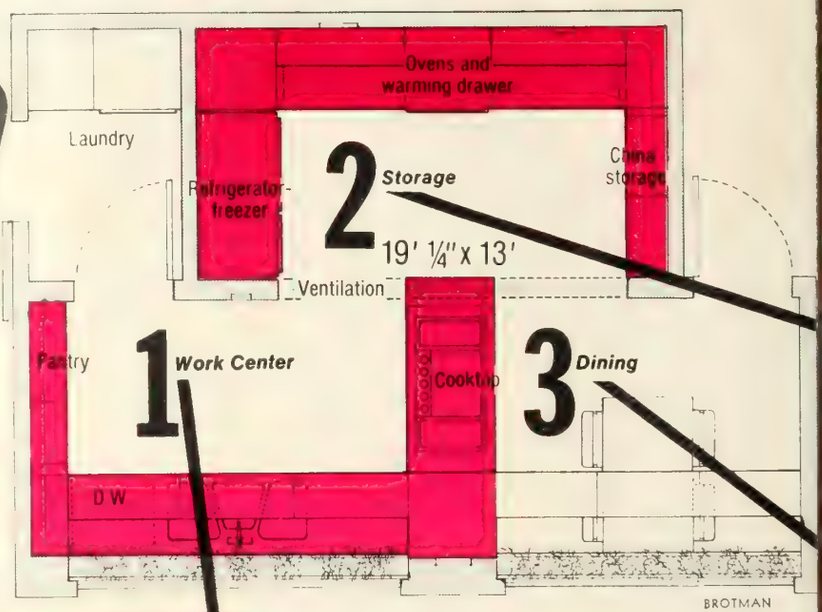
Color Coded Kitchen

to make your cooking and entertaining a whiz

This is an innovative kitchen, ball-bearing smooth in performance, designed to be installed in an area roughly 15 by 20 feet in a new apartment building. Three House & Garden colors are used not only for color's sake, but also, by combining them differently in the various areas, to give each space definition, a change in character.



There are two main working areas, a laundry, a dining area, and storage planned so everything is where you want it when you want it. Some countertops, ceilings, and floors are Ultramarine Blue, some Sun Yellow or (excepting ceilings and floors) Pompeiian Red. Only cabinets—barring laundry, where they are white—are consistently red. Kitchen would work equally well in a new house or, through remodeling, in an old one or apartment. Designed by architect Stanley Tigerman, incorporating Thermador and Waste King equipment, St. Charles cabinets.

Where everything is

In the plan, the two red U's define three main areas. Sunlight comes from a single wall of windows shaded by aluminum louvers by Acme-Artforge. At window-sill level, planters for flowers and greenery. Cooling, heating, and a Thermador exhaust system (ventilation for cooktop) are in an overhead beam called an air bar. All ducting and wiring is in ceiling of area 2, 1 foot lower than in area 1. Difference in heights is equalized by area 1's stovepipe downlights. Area 2's ceiling lighting is recessed. All lighting by Lightolier. Running the window length of the room are out-of-the-way upper cabinets for anything not in constant use.

In all areas, textured steel cabinets are by St. Charles.

Specifically, in area 1:

Thermador ceramic glass cooktop with four heating units, a griddle, a grill, a warming tray. Waste King dishwasher and food waste disposer, the latter in the center unit of the Kohler triple sink. Built-in toaster by Thermador. Wall pantry for canned and dry foods; storage for pots, pans, lids, bottles, and root vegetables.

In area 2:

Side-by-side freezer-refrigerator by Sub-Zero. Thermador microwave, warming, and self-cleaning ovens stacked in a single unit. A fold-up hanging scale, a Thermador built-in electric can opener. Flour and sugar storage drawers, storage for a variety of baking pans, china, glass, and all electric appliances.

In area 3:

Dining table and chairs for four. Shallow drawers for linen and silver in cooktop peninsula.

Dishwasher

Untraditionally but effectively, the dishwasher has a textured enameled steel front in the same red of the cabinets. Interior is stainless steel—bright idea

Cooking center

Kitchen color and kitchen storage can be as personal as a cook's cooking—and as varied. But no one ever denies the step-saving blessing of convenience. For example: below, the cooking center, doors closed. Right: The same, doors open. At left, three drawers for pots and pans, grids for the cooktop grill, hot-dish trivets. At right, three tray-drawers, perforated for air circulation, for root vegetables. Top drawer holds kitchen towels, pot holders. In the counter angle, drawers for knives, spatulas, wooden spoons, whisks, and kitchen tools in general. Left: Outside looking in. Through the louvers and (at the moment) azaleas, a view of the dining area and the table set for luncheon.

Glass and china storage

lassware cabinet is designed in two sections: one, a flexible er of shelves, flat against the wall; the other, a hinged, ving-out section, open on each side, with its shelves rimmed ith protective flanges to keep glasses from sliding. Adjustable ina cabinet shelves can be set at any height to accommodate rious shapes with no waste space; cups are held safe and und in neatly compartmented racks.

Cabinet with table setting makings is only a step from the dining area

Pantry in the wall

A miniature supermarket, pantry follows the same design principle of the glassware cabinet: four swing-out sections with see-through shelves hold practically a canned harvest. All rear shelves are adjustable to the various heights of cracker and cereal boxes, Mason jars, condiments, detergents, packaged nuts, dog food, baskets—you name it.

Service door next to pantry for convenient deliveries

Baking

pans, molds, soufflé dishes
Lower cabinets hold revolving swing-out shelves for electric appliances; plug-in strips are in wall. In a switch from area 1, ceiling, floor, countertops are yellow. Micarta countertops and backsplashes; vinyl flooring by Herbert Bright.

Strategic span: a pastry counter between ovens and refrigerator

The answer to every cook's dream—all the storage you need, right where you need it

The laundry, a griddle, and a wall scale

The laundry, right, is the fourth of the interlocked spaces that form the kitchen complex. The "stacked" design of the Space Mates washer and dryer is a space saver: the unit takes up only 27 square inches of floor space. Compartments above hold towels and cartons; the adjacent broom closet houses familiar helpers—vacuum cleaner, ironing board, dust pan, a pail. Far right, top: The center portion of the cooktop goes up, the griddle is put in place, then comes breakfast. When this section of the cooktop is down, it becomes a warmer for food that must wait a while. Far right, bottom: The platform of the wall scale (a must for meticulous cooks) folds down exactly like an inner-door bed, and weighs in grams and ounces up to 7 pounds.

Our Traminer grapes are good enough to be called Gewürz.

There is a story behind Almadén Gewürztraminer.

Long ago on a stony hillside of the Austrian Tyrol the subtly aromatic Traminer white wine grape came into being. From there it spread to the greatest vineyards of all Europe.

Soon wine makers discovered that under ideal conditions of soil and climate a rare strain of Traminer would be produced—one that surpassed the Traminer with a pronounced spicy flavor and a full, flowery aroma. The Germans quickly christened it "Gewürz," or spicy, Traminer.

Years later, we found the elusive growing conditions for this special breed in a tiny corner of the Almadén region of Northern California. In fact, our shy-bearing, pinkish-grey champion is one of the few grapes worthy of the name Gewürztraminer.

See for yourself. Only a fine grape can produce a fine wine. Almadén

Canning! Pickling! Preserving!

Tips, techniques, unexpected recipes

by Jane Ellis

JAMES MATHEWS

Equipment needed for pickling, preserving, and canning

■ FOR PREPARING FOOD: Jar and jelly glasses—a variety of sizes made by Ball, Kerr, and Le Parfait, cutting board, paring knife, measuring cups and spoons, strainer or colander, blender, food chopper or grinder, cheesecloth and string for spice bags. ■ FOR COOKING: Long-handled metal and wooden spoons for stirring, deep enamel or stainless steel pans or kettles, stoneware or nonmetalized containers, glass or pottery or enamelware for vinegar or brine solutions. (Do not use copper, brass, iron, or galvanized utensils for pickling as it will affect taste and color.) ■ FOR FILLING JARS: Rubber spatulas, jar lifters, wide-mouth funnel, ladle with a lip, potholders, and clean damp cloth.

Sterilizing Glass Jars

Be sure all jars and lids are perfect. Discard any with cracks, chips, dents, or rust.

Wash jars, lids, and bands in hot soapy water and rinse well. In a deep kettle, cover jars with boiling water. Boil for 15 minutes. Leave in water until ready to use. Drain and fill at once.

Note: Water should reach 212° to sterilize. As dishwashers reach only 180°, they should just be used for cleaning.

Closing Glass Jars

There are 3 types of closures: metal screwband and flat metal lid with sealing compound. Wipe jar rim clean. Put lid on, with sealing compound next to glass. Screw metal band down tight. Do not tighten further after removing from canner. Remove metal bands as soon as jars cool. Check seal. If seal is not good, liquid will leak out without band; if band remains on jar, it may explode. Metal lids with sealing compound may be used only once.

Porcelain-lined zinc cap with shoulder rubber ring. Fit wet rubber ring down on jar shoulder, but don't stretch unnecessarily. Fill jar; wipe rubber ring and jar rim clean. Screw cap down firmly and turn it back ¼ inch. As soon as you take jar from canner, tighten cap to complete seal. Porcelain caps may be reused if in good condition, rubber rings should not.

Glass-hinged lid with rubber ring. Fill jars up to the engraved capacity line, but make sure the rim and rubber ring remain clean. Close jars making sure the rubber ring is well fitted into inner lining of lid and fasten clamp.

Preparing Fruits and Vegetables for Canning

Choose fresh, firm, perfect, fruits and young, tender vegetables. Sort them for size and ripeness; they cook more evenly that way.

Wash small amounts of fruit and vegetables thoroughly under running water, don't soak; they'll lose flavor and nutritive value. Handle gently to avoid bruising.

Processing

Use boiling-water bath for fruits, tomatoes, and pickled vegetables. Put filled glass jars into canner containing hot or boiling water. For raw pack in glass jars have water in canner hot but not boiling; for all other packs have water boiling. Add boiling water, if needed, to bring water an inch or two over tops of containers; don't pour boiling water directly on glass jars. Put cover on canner. When water comes to a rolling boil, start to count process time according to recipe directions. Boil gently and steadily. Add boiling water during processing if needed to keep containers covered. Remove containers from canner immediately when processing time is up.

Use pressure canner for all other vegetables. It is essential to follow manufacturer's directions for your canner, and be sure it is in perfect condition before using.

Test Seal

To test a jar with flat metal lid, press center of lid, if down and will not move, jar is sealed. Or tap center of lid with spoon, if clear ringing sound, seal is good; dull note indicates poor seal. Test seal on glass jars with porcelain-lined or hinged caps by turning jar to be sure there are no leaks.

Stencil your own labels

The American Stencil Kit, above, includes stencil shapes, markers, instructions, and design chart. Write Stencil-Magic, 8 W. Nineteenth Street, New York, N.Y. 10011. $5.50 postpaid.

To Store

Wipe jars with clean, damp cloth. Label with name of recipe and date. Store in a dark, dry, cool place where there's no danger of freezing. Freezing may crack the jars or break the seals allowing bacteria to enter, which may cause spoilage.

Pickles and jams are the easiest to keep, so store on high shelves.

Try to can for a year's supply. Pickles improve with age, but most other things just get dusty.

Can in season to take advantage of prices.

Before Using

Check for signs of spoilage; a bulging lid, leakage, mold, off-odor, unusually soft, mushy. If there is even a slight indication of spoilage, do not taste. Dispose of produce and wash and sterilize jar.

Pickling Tips

Use the varieties of cucumbers grown especially for pickling.

Select slightly underripe fruits since they retain their shape and texture.

Use pure granulated pickling salt or uniodized salt. (Iodized table salt causes pickles to darken.)

Use soft water since minerals in hard water may interfere with the pickling process or cause pickles to darken. If soft water is unavailable, boil water; then let it cool and remove scum.

Preserving

To make jellies, jams, and preserves, fruits are cooked uncovered in a large 8- to 10-quart kettle until it is ready to set or gel, then ladled into hot sterilized jars and sealed. No further processing is needed because of high sugar content. Most jelly glasses are sealed with a layer of melted paraffin.

AUNTIES PEPPER RELISH

by Wanda Kielblock

12 red peppers
12 green peppers (or 24 green peppers may be used) boiling water
3 large, or 6 medium onions, chopped
1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon salt
2 cups vinegar
1 tablespoon mustard seed
1 tablespoon celery seed

Put peppers through a meat grinder, using a medium blade. Cover with boiling water and let stand 5 minutes. Drain mixture and again cover with boiling water and allow to stand 10 more minutes. Drain. In a saucepan add peppers, onions, sugar, salt, vinegar, mustard seed, and celery seed and bring to a boil and boil for 15 minutes. Put the pepper relish in jars and seal. Makes 4 pints.

CALAMONDIN ORANGE MARMALADE

from Zelma Clark

1 quart Calamondin oranges, washed 1 tablespoon baking soda boiling water
water
sugar

Place fruit in a kettle and add baking soda and boiling water to cover. Cover kettle and let stand for 10 minutes. Drain. Wash fruit thoroughly several times in cold water. Cut oranges into rings or small pieces with a sharp knife and remove seeds. Measure fruit and return it to kettle. Add 1 cup water per 1 cup fruit. Bring mixture to boil and simmer until tender (about 1 hour). Cool. Measure marmalade stock and return to kettle and add 1 cup sugar to 1 cup stock slowly, stirring until dissolved. Bring mixture to a boil and boil rapidly until jelly state is reached. To prevent marmalade from scorching, stir constantly with a wooden spoon the last 5-10 minutes. Remove kettle from heat and cool for a few minutes to expel all bubbles. Pour into sterilized jars and seal immediately. Makes about 1½ pints jelly.

ZUCCHINI PICKLES

1 quart Heinz Distilled White Vinegar
2 cups granulated sugar
¼ cup salt
2 teaspoons celery seed
2 teaspoons ground turmeric
1 teaspoon dry mustard
5 pounds zucchini (5-6 inches), unpeeled, cut into ¼-inch slices
1 quart onions, thinly sliced (4-5 medium)

In a large kettle add vinegar, sugar, salt, celery seed, turmeric, and mustard and bring to a boil. In a bowl place zucchini and onions and pour boiling liquid over them; let stand 1 hour, stirring mixture occasionally. In a saucepot, bring mixture to a boil and simmer for 3 minutes. Continue simmering while quickly packing 1 clean hot jar at a time. Fill to within ½ inch of top making sure vinegar solution covers vegetables. Cap each jar at once. Process 5 minutes in boiling water bath. 6-7 pints.

Yukky. Yummy.

Peaches preserved in ordinary canning syrup for 12 hours.

Fruit-Fresh®. You need it for canning, freezing, and fresh fruit.

If you want all the fruit you serve to look and taste its freshest, what you really need is Fruit-Fresh. Because Fruit-Fresh contains a special ingredient that locks in the natural, "just-picked" color and flavor. Which means no more brown, mushy-looking peaches.

Fruit-Fresh is economical, too. A 5-oz. can will preserve up to 75 lbs. of peaches. Here's how: For Canning: simply add Fruit-Fresh to the regular syrup. For Freezing: add Fruit-Fresh to the syrup or dry sugar. For Fresh Fruit: sprinkle Fruit-Fresh on your just-sliced fruit before refrigerating. Sound good? It tastes delicious.

Keeps fruit looking and tasting fresher.

CROWN ROAST OF PORK

1 crown roast of pork from young pork (flesh should be grayish pink; fat, white and firm)
2 cloves garlic, slivered
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon thyme
fresh ground pepper
1 medium onion, coarsely chopped
1 carrot, coarsely chopped
1 stalk celery, coarsely chopped
¾ cup beef consommé
¾ cup chicken consommé
2 tablespoons currant jelly
1½ tablespoons arrowroot
broiled apricots and slivered preserved ginger or sautéed apples

Preheat oven to 500°. Cover rib tips with aluminum. Cut several thin cuts in meat and insert garlic, rub with lemon juice. In a bowl mix salt, thyme, and pepper together and rub surface of pork. Place metal container in center of crown to hold its shape. Place roast in the center of oven for 20 minutes. Add vegetables to pan, cover and turn oven to 350°. Continue roasting for 40 minutes. Uncover, place on lower rack and continue roasting until internal temperature is 170°. (Roast is self basting.) Remove meat to serving platter, add consommé and jelly to juices. Deglaze. Strain off excess fat. Mix arrowroot with a little cold water, add to juices and cook until thickened. Serve with hot broiled peeled apricots and slivered preserved ginger, or freshly sautéed apples around the outside and glazed onions and sautéed mushrooms in the center. If you like, spear each rib with a canned kumquat.

CORN OYSTERS WITH GREEN CHILIES

2 cups fresh corn, scraped off the cob and drained
2 egg yolks
¼ cup green chilies, seeded and chopped fine
½ cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 egg whites, beaten stiff bacon drippings or other fat

Mix corn, egg yolks, and chilies. In a separate bowl mix flour, baking powder, and salt, add corn mixture, fold in egg whites. Cook by spoonfuls on a griddle or skillet in hot fat, turning once, until golden brown. Serves 6.

SAUTÉED MUSHROOMS

¼ pound butter
1 pound fresh mushrooms, washed, dried, and quartered lemon juice
salt and pepper to taste

In a pan melt butter and add mushrooms over high heat, add a squeeze of lemon. Over medium high heat sauté for 3 minutes. Cover for 1 minute. Season with salt and pepper. Be careful not to overcook. Serves 6.

ASPARAGUS

¼ cup butter
2 quarts asparagus, cleaned, washed and cut on the bias into 2-3-inch pieces
2 tablespoons water
⅓ cup heavy cream
¼ cup parsley, chopped

In a pan melt butter. Turn temperature to high heat, add asparagus and sauté for 1 minute. Add water and stir with a fork constantly for 1 minute. Cover and cook for 1 more minute. Add cream and parsley, toss and serve. Serves 6.

I passed up reducing sessions and lost 77 pounds.

By Jerrie Wooley — as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

Hardly a sitting-pretty pose, but at 197 lbs. this was my best angle.

Some things you can afford in life, and others you can't. Me? I couldn't afford to get fatter than 197 pounds. Nor did I have the money for those group sessions where they talk you into reducing. But I was determined to lose weight.

I'd been overweight for as long as I could remember. Fact is, I used to think I'd been born with a lot of "fat cells". But the real reason was I couldn't walk away from my mother's cooking. So by the time I got to eighth grade, I weighed near 160 pounds.

My mother finally took me to a doctor and he gave me reducing pills. They helped me lose some, so I could graduate in a "skinny" dress. But shortly after graduation, I gave up the pills and started eating and gaining all over again.

Why, I even got married fat. Young, too. At the age of seventeen. My life from then on was one diet and reducing pill after another.

At 170 pounds, after my second child was born, I developed bulging varicose veins — which called for an operation. "But not till you lose a lot of weight," the doctor warned. I got so discouraged at this point, I went home and eventually ate myself up to 197 pounds. It was terrible.

Now that I'm 120 lbs., it sure feels good to get into junior-size clothes.

Even my uncle who comes to visit us only once a year noticed it. "Are you staying in the kitchen because you're ashamed of how you look?" he yelled from the living room. That hurt. But that's what got me into action.

I'd been reading those ads about that reducing-plan candy, Ayds®, and when a nurse friend suggested I try them, I bought a box of the vanilla caramel kind at our local store.

I'm a great label reader. And when I read that Ayds contain vitamins and minerals, but no drugs, I started on the plan with hope. Stubbornness, too. I was determined to prove to my family I could lose weight without spending a lot of money on weekly sessions.

On the Ayds plan, I took one or two Ayds before meals with a hot drink and they really helped me cut back. However, it wasn't until I'd taken off 19 pounds that I realized how it showed. We were at my sister-in-law's for dinner and being from the country, she sets a big table. Well, I didn't want to insult her by turning down seconds, so I owned up to reducing. She said: "We kind of noticed you were losing" and didn't force me to eat after that.

Of course, my doctor was delighted. Losing over 70 pounds on the Ayds plan sure made my varicose veins operation easier. They had to wrap me in bandages from my thighs down, but at least they didn't need a crane to get me up.

When I finally got down to 120 pounds, I could hardly believe it myself. But the biggest thrill is to walk into a store and, thanks to the Ayds plan, now find racks of clothes that'll fit me.

Note: For a free, fact-filled 32-page booklet on overweight, its causes, and how Ayds works to help you lose weight, send 10c for postage/handling to Campana, Dept. HG-075, Batavia, Illinois 60510.

GLAZED ONIONS

2 tablespoons butter
2 teaspoons sugar
2 cups frozen cooked onions, defrosted salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

In a pan melt butter and add sugar and onions and quickly sauté until onions begin to brown, stirring with a spatula. Correct seasonings. Serves 6.

BIBB LETTUCE MIMOSA

4 heads Bibb lettuce, washed and crisped
1 egg yolk, hard-cooked and riced ⅓ cup salad oil drop of olive oil
2 tablespoons lemon juice
salt and freshly ground white pepper
3 small avocados, halved

Toss the lettuce with egg yolk and a salad dressing made of salad oil, olive oil, lemon juice, and salt and freshly ground pepper to taste. Top the salad with small avocado halves. Serves 6.

RICE WITH PINE NUTS

¼ cup butter
2 tablespoons onion, minced
1 cup rice
2½ cups beef or chicken consommé
½ cup toasted pine nuts
¼ cup parsley, chopped
salt and pepper to taste

Preheat oven to 350°. In an ovenproof dish melt butter and sauté onion for 1 minute. Add rice and consommé and cover dish and bake for 45 minutes. Stir in pine nuts and parsley and correct seasonings. Serves 6.

CHEDDAR APPLE PIE

6 large Delicious apples or enough to pile apples high
1¼ cups sugar
½ cup plus 2 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon lemon peel, grated
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 unbaked pie shell
½ cup New York State sharp Cheddar cheese, grated ¼ cup melted butter
sour cream

Preheat oven to 400°. Peel, core, and slice apples thin. In a large bowl toss apples with 1 cup sugar, 2 tablespoons flour, cinnamon, lemon peel, salt and pour into pie shell. In a separate bowl mix remaining flour, sugar, cheese, butter; sprinkle over apple mixture. Bake 40 minutes. Serve warm with sour cream. Serves 6.

BAGNA CAUDA

½ cup butter, melted
½ cup olive oil
2 2-ounce tins flat anchovies, drained, rinsed, and coarsely chopped
3 cloves garlic, finely chopped
2 drops Tabasco

In a saucepan heat butter and oil over a low heat and add anchovies, garlic, and Tabasco and simmer mixture, stirring constantly; do not let mixture boil. When ready to serve, pour into an enamel saucepan, or a flameproof earthenware casserole over a chafing dish burner or a candle-warmer. Serve a variety of vegetables and breadsticks to dip into the hot sauce. Serves 8-10.

ROLLED BREAST OF VEAL WITH FRESH BASIL

1 pound ground raw shoulder veal
½ pound pork sausage meat
1 cup cream
2 tablespoons parsley, chopped fine
4 tablespoons mixed fresh herbs (chives, oregano, thyme, sage, rosemary, tarragon), to taste
salt and pepper, to taste
1 breast of veal, boned reserve bones
8 thin slices (about ¼ inch) boiled ham cut into thin strips, fat removed and set aside
1 cup white wine
2 cups hot veal or chicken stock

Preheat oven to 325°. Mix veal and sausage, cream, parsley, herbs, salt, pepper. Lay breast out flat on table, spread stuffing evenly over surface. Cover stuffing with ham strips, roll veal up, tie with string. Cover surface of veal with ham fat. Roast 1½-2 hours in shallow pan, with veal bones strewn around edges. When the meat starts to brown, baste with hot white wine and the hot veal and chicken stock frequently. Serves 8.

Irresistible diet foods

■ "Anyone dieting for cosmetic reasons should accept the fact that a low-calorie diet alone will not do much for inches; just as exercise alone does not do much for weight reduction, but you do need both!"

■ "Breakfast is a personal thing for most people, but I recommend fresh fruit or juice, 1 egg or 2 ounces cottage cheese, and 1 very thin slice dry toast to give a good start for the day."

■ "A demitasse cup of soup is a good pick-me-up. Keep one of beet yoghurt soup, for instance, in your refrigerator."

■ "Any salad dressing can be cut down with water to decrease calories. It is only the flavor you want anyhow, and a teaspoonful on a small salad is enough. Everyone has a tendency to overdress a salad."

■ "Use grated citrus fruit peel to flavor vegetables. Grated vegetables such as carrots, beets and radishes add both color and flavor to vegetable dishes."

Thousands of readers answering our questionnaire have told us how their households are liberated

When we invited readers to reply to our questionnaire "How liberated is your household?" last January, we wanted to open up a dialogue with them. And we certainly did. Thousands answered, many with letters expressing their feelings in depth and detail. These answers told us they are adjusting to changing roles, living on the leading edge of social trends. Most—almost three-quarters—feel their households are liberated in the way they want them liberated, they are satisfied with the division of labor and responsibility. "Our household is completely liberated in that there is nothing I wish to be liberated from in my lifestyle. I enjoy our home and everything I do in it and my husband feels the same. We're very lucky. . . ."

"We split duties. I cook, she washes up. She cooks, I wash. I do wish she would vacuum more—but then, it's more important to me than to her so. . . ."

"It takes a lot of learning to find out what your or your partner's priorities are—is a clean house more important than clean clothes or good food? Be cool till you learn."

"Our 'division' of labor has changed back and forth depending on outside responsibilities. What is true is not necessarily unchangeable."

"Satisfaction has evolved from years of refinement, heated 'discussions'—and we each still reserve the right to go on strike to get our points across."

"Being liberated is a state of mind, not an exercise in pursuing accomplishments outside the home. It's having the option of choosing. My choice has changed and I wish those who choose to accomplish outside would appreciate those of us who choose to accomplish inside the home."

And almost all of our readers report they are doing more at home especially—more crafts, more gardening, more cooking. A craftsroom or studio was the room most wanted by more than half, followed by a greenhouse or garden room and a home office.

Readers also report more sharing. Of financial responsibility—in more than half the households there are two incomes. Finances, credit cards, bank accounts are managed jointly in still more. Of decisions—whether it's the color of the rug or the move to a new house, they are made jointly in half the households. Even some sharing of chores—but less and with only a third able to count on paid help, this is the major source of dissatisfaction of those dissatisfied. "I am a feminist but because we can afford paid help to do the household dirty work, we have not been forced to change roles much."

"I wish other members of the family would do more without being asked."

"My husband doesn't notice what needs straightening or cleaning around the house. So although he is willing to help I always have to point out what needs to be done."

"Having been liberated for so many years—would just love the idea of being unliberated, to be taken care of and not have to shoulder half or many times most of the responsibilities, children, and business."

But even a great many who feel less than liberated see progress. "I want the children and my husband to participate more and am gradually training them."

"We're working toward a 50-50 sharing of care of children and house, and of earning the money."

"My family doesn't share enough chores or responsibility. We discuss it and we are slowly becoming a happier group of people."

Most agree that, as one put it, "it's not who does what, it's the attitude that matters."

LEMON TART

For pastry dough
3 ounces butter
7 ounces flour
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
pinch salt
3 teaspoons water
2 tablespoons sugar
For custard
5 eggs, well beaten (by hand)
1 large lemon
¼ teaspoon lemon extract
1⅛ cups sugar
1 cup sour cream
whipped cream topping

Pastry dough: Take butter from refrigerator, let soften. Put on mound of flour; add oil and salt. Dilute sugar in water, set aside.

Mix butter, flour, oil, and salt by hand. Add water and sugar. Shape into a ball, handling as little as possible. Let rest 45 minutes.

For custard: Mix all ingredients by hand.

a large mixing bowl stir to-ther 2 cups flour and yeast. In a ucepan combine buttermilk, wa-, shortening, sugar, and salt and ace over low heat until warm 20-130°). If the buttermilk curdles, don't be concerned. Add liquid to flour mixture and beat with an electric mixer ½ minute at low speed. Scrape the sides of the bowl. At high speed, beat for 3 minutes. Stop the mixer. Stir in the balance of the flour, a half a cup at a time, first with a spoon and then by hand, until a soft dough is formed. Turn the dough onto a heavily floured work surface and knead 8 minutes (6 minutes with a dough hook) until dough is smooth and elastic. Form into a ball, cover with a tent of wax paper or towel and let rest for 20 minutes. Punch down the dough and knead 30 seconds to press out the bubbles. Divide the dough into 6 equal parts, roll each into a 14-inch-long rope. Lay 3 ropes side-by-side and weave them into a thick braid. Pinch the ends together and turn under slightly. Repeat with second piece. Place on a buttered baking sheet. Place a length of wax paper over the loaves and put them in a warm spot (80-85°) to rise until doubled in size, about 45 minutes. After the dough has risen for 25 minutes, brush with warm water and leave for remaining 20 minutes. Preheat oven to 400°. If you wish, brush loaves again with warm water and sprinkle with sesame or poppy seeds or both. Bake in the oven for 30 minutes. Shift loaves around for even baking and bake for another 15 minutes, or until loaves are golden brown. Test one loaf by tapping bottom crust with a forefinger. A hard hollow sound means bread is baked. If not, return to oven for 10 minutes. Remove loaves from oven, brush with water immediately. Place on a wire rack to cool. 2 1-pound loaves. ■

CRANBERRY CATSUP

from Aileen Knobloch

4 pounds cranberries
2½ cups water
2½ cups vinegar
2 teaspoons cloves
2 teaspoons allspice
½ teaspoon mace
1 stick cinnamon
3 cups brown sugar

In a large kettle add all ingredients except sugar. Simmer mixture until fruit is soft. Rub mixture through a sieve. Return mixture to kettle and add sugar and cook until thick. Seal in sterilized jars. Makes 3 pints.

PLUM GUMBO

by Mollie E. C. Webster

3 pounds ripe plums, cleaned and pitted
1 pound seeded raisins, chopped
2 oranges, sliced thin (leave skin on)
3 pounds sugar
pinch of salt

In a large heavy saucepan place fruits, sugar, and salt and slowly cook until the sugar dissolves; bring to the boiling point and stir mixture constantly until it begins to stick. After 15 minutes put a small amount of the jam on a small plate, chill as quickly as possible. If jam crinkles when touched, it is ready to be poured into jars. If it does not crinkle, continue to cook for another 10 minutes or until test sets. Pour jam into sterilized jars. Cool. Cover jars and tie down and label. Making gumbo in small amounts preserves its fresh flavor and color. Makes 8 6-ounce jars.

APPLE CHILI SAUCE

from Aileen Knobloch

4 pounds apples, cored, peeled, and finely chopped
4 pounds tomatoes, stemmed, peeled, and finely chopped
1 pound onions, peeled, sliced, and finely chopped
1 pound sweet green and red peppers, stemmed, seeded, and finely chopped spice bag: 2 tablespoons whole all-spice, 1 tablespoon whole cloves, 1 stick cinnamon
2 cups cider vinegar
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons mustard seed
1 tablespoon salt
optional: about 1 tablespoon dry mustard and/or pepper

Place in a large kettle all fruits, vegetables, and spice bag and cook, uncovered, for 1½-2 hours, stirring often. Add vinegar, sugar, mustard seed, and salt and cook until mixture is quite thick. Taste while cooking, and if a sharper flavor is desired, add dry mustard or pepper or both. Pour into sterilized jars, seal. Makes 5-6 pints.

TOMATO SAUCE

oregano, to taste

In a large kettle add ingredients and cook for ½ hour. Pass mixture through a food mill (coarse disk) and return to kettle. Bring to the boil and fill hot sterilized jars. About 2½ pints.

CHINESE PEAR PRESERVES

6 fresh California Bartlett pears pared, quartered, and cored
3 cups sugar
¼ cup chopped crystallized ginger
3 tablespoons lemon juice

Cut pears crosswise into thin slices to make 4 cups. In a saucepan, alternate layers of pear slices, sugar, and ginger; drizzle with lemon juice. Cover pan and let stand 4 hours or overnight. Cook slowly uncovered, about 1½ hours until pears are transparent and syrup thick. Pour into sterilized jars, seal. Makes about 1½ pints.

CHAMPAGNE ORANGE JELLY

1 cup orange juice
1 cup Great Western New York State Extra Dry Champagne
3 cups sugar
6 ounces (½ bottle) fruit pectin

In a medium-sized saucepan combine orange juice, champagne, and sugar and bring to a full rolling boil stirring constantly. Add the pectin and bring to the boil again. Remove the pan from heat and skim off any foam that exists. Pour the jelly into 4 sterilized 8-ounce glasses.

FRESH NECTARINE JAM

1½-2 pounds fresh California nectarines
¼ cup lime juice
1 8-ounce can applesauce
1 package powdered pectin (1¾ ounces)
5½ cups sugar
paraffin

Rinse nectarines, remove pits and chop unpared fruit to measure 3 cups. Place fruit in a saucepan with lime juice, applesauce, and powdered pectin. Bring mixture to a hard boil over high heat and add sugar, and bring to a hard boil and boil for 1 minute. Remove pan from heat. Skim off foam. Stir mixture occasionally and skim for 5 minutes. Ladle into jars and top with melted paraffin. Makes 5 8-ounce glasses. ■

"I saw and felt results in the first 3 days."

NO RIGID DIETING...
NO COMPLICATED EXERCISES...
This ingenious '5' Minute Total Body Shaper Plan, designed for busy people like you, has you starting to lose inches and pounds immediately...in the privacy of your own home. It's Safe...Medically Approved...and Guaranteed!

Here are the 6 reasons why this plan works fast to start you looking years slimmer...in 14 days!

1. It Concentrates Its Slimming Action On Your Fatty Areas, Waist, Hips, Upper Thighs, that give you an aging look. Because it works most of your muscles gracefully all one time—not body part by body part—the Plan stimulates faster slimming action to help you start fashioning a more youthful looking figure in 14 days.

2. Simple to Use. No disrobing. Attach it to any door knob, stretch out comfortably on the floor. Do one '5' Minute continuous, rhythmic, enjoyable exercise, twice daily, whenever you have the time, even while watching TV.

3. Designed to Slim Fatty Problem Areas. Choose 4 different '5' Minute exercises, each created to help slim down the problem fatty deposit areas of your figure in 14 days.

4. No Rigid Dieting. We suggest you temporarily eat 20% less until you reach your normal weight, without giving up any of the foods you love—eat Ice Cream, Cakes, Pasta, whatever! (It's all in the guide.)

5. Safer and Saves Time. No more running to gyms for complicated, exhausting workouts that can strain you. This simple '5' Minute Plan, that you do at home, leaves you refreshed.

6. Weighs Only 10 Ounces. Fits any wallet size case. Stores anywhere. Travels with you so you never have to miss a slimming session. Remember, it's the daily sessions that firm, shape and fashion you a more youthful looking figure.

It's Fun With Results...."5" Minutes And Out.

THE SECRET WHY IT BEATS FASTING ALONE, MAKING YOUR FIGURE LOOK YEARS YOUNGER.

Fasting Programs, when causing weight loss, unlike our plan usually burn off more active tissue (muscles) which can cause your skin to wrinkle, muscles to sag and create dragging fatigue. Our Plan increases active tissue growth—through the use of the '5' Minute exerciser—while concentrating greater fat loss by (exercise and temporary 20 percent food reduction) making you look years younger as you slim. Within the first '5' minutes you use the exerciser, you start burning off fat, speeding up your metabolism to help burn up stored calories, releasing excess water. Helps curb your appetite without suppressants. Increases energy and well being. It's so simple and enjoyable a plan to follow, we guarantee you can stay with it remaining slim without re-gaining those inches and pounds. It can put an end to your "gain-and-loss-cycles".

USE OUR '5' MINUTE TOTAL BODY SHAPER PLAN FOR 14 DAYS AND WE GUARANTEE YOU THESE RESULTS:

"You Will Lose Inches and Pounds. Improve Your Vitality, Energy, Fitness, Posture, Work Off Body Tensions, Feel and Look Better and Younger — All To Your Satisfaction Within 14 Days — If You Follow Our Instructions — Or Your $9.95 Will Be Refunded."

EXPERTS AND CUSTOMERS AGREE:
It's the no-nonsense way to shape up fast!
Scientific reports and many of our 600,000 customers inform us that sauna wraps, inflated belts, weighted belts and other 'effortless exercisers' are of little or no value in firming, shaping and beautifying your figure. "YOU MUST WORK OFF THE INCHES," experts say. We believe, and results prove, our's is the simplest, safest, most enjoyable Plan to do it. We Guarantee It. Here's a sampling of what our slimming customers tells us that happened to them while using the Plan.

Name	Pounds Lost	Inches Lost (off waistline)	Time
G. C.	25 lbs.	5¾ in.	(14 days)
M. F.	32 lbs	6⅜ in.	(24 days)
W. E.	15 lbs.	3 in.	(14 days)
M. B.	22 lbs.	8 in.	(21 days)
C. J.	10 lbs	6¾ in.	(14 days)
P. O.	10 lbs.	6¼ in.	(14 days)
J. C.	10 lbs.	5 in.	(14 days)

They were measured by experts before and after 14 days. The results verified, some notarized. Your results may vary depending on how overweight you are and how much time you devote to the exerciser. The customers quoted spent 5 to 10 minutes, twice daily and reduced their food intake —temporarily—by about 20%, but none gave up the foods they love.

DO IT NOW! It's America's most successful figure shaper. 600,000 customers have purchased our '5' Minute Plan to slim down fast. Results are proven and some notarized. Our guarantee to you is in writing. Experts agree our plan works—and works fast. Now, can you think of any reason for not ordering your '5' Minute Body Shaper Plan and start slimming down today?

Satisfaction Guaranteed!

Use our improved '5' Minute Total Body Shaper Plan for 14 days! See what it can [illegible]. If it's not what we say it is, simply return [illegible] for your $9.95 refund.

Hawaiian "Good Luck"

ti plant

Guaranteed to grow!

The native Hawaiians believe the Ti Plant has a mystical voodoo power. The leaves were worn to dispel evil. It is planted to bring GOOD LUCK, LONG LIFE and LASTING LOVE. The Ti Plant has been used for medicine, candy, food, alcoholic drinks, and the sexy Hula Skirt.

The Ti Plant grows out of a log — so fast that you can almost see it grow! All you do is put the Ti log in water and watch it grow! When it sprouts, put it in a pot. The bigger the pot, the bigger it will grow . . from one to six feet tall. You can have the size you want. Grow it in sun or shade — it blossoms! The Hawaiian Ti Plant makes an ideal gift. Send good luck to your friends and loved ones.

Choice of red or green leaves; guaranteed to grow or free replacement!

respect for the woman who does ually, he adds, some men are ıctant to help change the house-ping situation because they fear ɔss of masculinity, particularly hey have been brought up to ieve that domesticity is "woms work." Dr. Weinstein, a bach-r now after eleven years' marri-

, believes his partnership failed ause he fell into this trap. "I s a chauvinist, if you will, but wife didn't see it like that.
did all the things that she was l a wife should. I think we were ch too tied up with each other, as time went on we needed to sue an independent course. If I rried again I certainly would nt the woman I married to have independent life of her own, hin the sharing of marriage."
for household chores, he insists, hink it's just a matter of organiion and scheduling. It doesn't her me now if the bed is unde, though it would have be-
. I think if I were living with ıeone who is pulling her equal ght in the relationship and conuting in every sense to the intenance and support of the ısehold, it simply wouldn't be issue. You get out of the master-ant setup, which is really de-ıctive to both people, and cerily not what I would want now."
ırchitect Russell Childs is into second marriage, after seven rs of bachelor living follow-his divorce, and has put a ıpletely different sort of part-ship into operation. His wife, ten, is an interior designer and share a partnership in busi-
, too with another architect, ley Armstrong. "I have relaxed whole sense of priorities," he
. "I remember having a big haha about taking out the age at one time, in my first riage, but I don't think that ever been a problem with Kir-
. It just doesn't bother me any
e. I've modified my behavior ıround. I even take my muddied boots off before I walk on the white bedroom rug, unless it's an emergency." When they did once have a conflict, both were working at the office late and Kirsten left an hour earlier to shop the supermarket for supper. "Russell always expected at least a two course meal at 10 or 11 at night. I felt that was too much, so I said, all right, you do that and see how you manage." Reversing the responsibility for two weeks, Russell did all shopping and cooking and Kirsten stayed on at the office. "I had a wonderful time working quietly into the late evening, and then I came home and found pizza! In two weeks we ate every supply in the house, there wasn't one can left. We ate out almost three meals a week." Added Russell: "I understood what a lot of thought went into that organization of food preparation." The Childs give a business dinner party about once a week, share the work involved in entertaining. She cooks and shops, he does last-minute pickups, and buys the liquor. They both do the dishes. Again this is a new experience for Russell. "My general philosophy is to let things pile up, but I've learned at home anyway that it is more effective to clear up as it happens. Now I'm very conscious of bathroom puddles and mop them up afterward."

Frank Woodard, married five years to Judy (both are in banking), reflected in a parallel way: "My attitude about keeping the apartment clean and taking care of it is that it's like taking care of yourself. It's my environment I want to keep it clean. It's like brushing my teeth every day or soaping my body. Most of my friends feel the same. This is my house and I live here, too, I want to enjoy it and take part in the upkeep of it."

However, this is relatively new thinking on his part he is ready to admit. He adjusted when his wife got a job a year after they were married. "You've got to work out a pattern to suit your lifestyle," he added. "The big part is not to have any preconceived notions." When they first were both working, they'd come home and find nothing in the refrigerator for supper, so they decided to split up the meal responsibility. Now he cooks and shops Monday to Friday, and she does it on weekends. Added Judy: "His cooking is more creative than mine, we eat better because there's more variety. His mother was a good cook and showed him how to make showy things, soups, casseroles, and lots of good dishes." They clean the apartment together once every two weeks. "That way it gets done quicker and we can go out and do something else. It sounds very organized, but we're not. Neither one pushes the other."

Donald MacNary is a husband who took over the total running of the house and children when his wife went back to school to study for a master's degree. He was a vice president in a big corporation, going through a midcareer crisis and decided to "fall free and see where my nose took me." The contrast in housekeeping he found "very pleasurable. I had plenty of time to myself, which I never had before. I would walk to town, browse in the library, it was absolutely delightful, a super time for me to be myself, have internal dialogues when I really needed to do that. Using my experience in general management, we started shopping against menus plotted out for the whole week, so we only had to go to the supermarket once a week. Sure I felt itchy and depressed and snapped at people at times, it was scary and I needed courage. My wife and I became different people before our own eyes, so we are essentially reconstructing our relationship and starting our second marriage. That's why the whole thing turned out to be so fascinating." Mr. MacNary looks ten years younger than his forty-five years, jogs three times a week, feels "beautiful," has set up a new business in partnership with a psychologist counseling other men who want to make midcareer changes. Ellen, his wife, now with a part-time job in education curriculum, shares the chores with him. He cooks mostly, the children clean up. She has taken over the checkbook. She'll clean the kitchen floor, he'll do the icebox, stove, and oven. "It depends who gets bugged by what but we have a fairly relaxed attitude about what has to be done." He says his year's spell at housekeeping vastly improved his life with his three children. "My eldest one says to me when I was doing my old job, I wasn't really with them, then. I feel the stereotyped roles are eroding for both partners. You should have seen me five years ago. Now I'm really on top of the world, and I've never had a better life."

The houseworking husband does need reinforcement and praise, Katy Becker remarked. Her husband Philip, an advertising copywriter, pitches in at weekends. "I'm pretty fussy, but I've decided not to be so fussy. I don't shout about spots on the windows when he's cleaned them, I leave them that way, hoping there'll be an improvement next time." About to launch out into the working world after six years' of motherhood, taking care of two children, she is determined to reframe her ideas. "Probably a lot of the housework just won't get done. If I can make enough money, I'll have somebody else come in and do it. I don't want to spend the rest of my life just dusting. My children are secure and I would feel better if I were working. Before, when I needed help I felt I couldn't ask because that made me a nagging wife. Then I got used to saying, hey do this or would you mind vacuuming the rug?"

Philip, quite obviously respectful of her assertive ways nodded: "I shall compensate when she goes out to work. Doing the dishes is good therapy for me anyway." ■

Evergreens that look like cypresses... Gardening with railroad ties... When to harvest vegetables... A new kind of pyrethrum insecticide

Tying in keeps old evergreens looking new

Rows of arborvitae frame two sides of the lawn at the Richard V. Hares' house (see page 34). They are 35 feet tall—they have grown 10 feet in the last 10 years—and, because of a wiring technique Mr. Hare devised, they are erect and dense. When the Hares bought their Long Island place eleven years ago, they found that most of the trees had developed three separate trunks. Branches were spread and separated by age and neglect. Mr. Hare, on a step ladder, above, decided to improve their contour. Starting at the bottom he tied the trunks together every 6 feet with a single knotted loop of smooth rubber-covered wire. The wire is about ⅜-inch thick, gray or black for camouflage. Problem limbs were treated individually and tied to the strengthened trunk. No wires show, and the trees regained their shapeliness. Mr. Hare checks the wires from time to time to be sure they do not cut into the branches or slacken, but he has not had to do top-to-toe tying but once, and he never prunes or shears. Hollytone fertilizer, applied every second year, helps keep the trees green and healthy.

Arborvitae trees look like Italian cypresses in the Richard V. Hares' garden, below. He trains them into narrow spires by tightening multiple trunks and drooping branches with rubber-covered wire.

Railroad tie gardening

In the McBratneys' garden (page 54), retaining walls are stacked-up railroad ties. Walls of this type are considerably less expensive to build than walls of conventional stone or brick. Nowadays, 8-by-8 timbers are used rather than actual railroad ties. Pinned together by heavy spikes or rods driven into predrilled holes, the timbers may be stacked to any height. Treated with creosote or some other wood preservative, they weather to a pleasant brown-gray color that blends well with earth and plants. However, since a certain amount of the chemical used as wood preservative is bound to leach out with rainfall, plants should be kept several inches away from the timbers. Creosote is particularly harmful to plant roots, so a strip of gravel or other drainage should be placed at the wall base, between planting and the wall itself. The McBratneys' garden was designed by Allen Haskell of New Bedford, Mass., who has been a consistent prize winner at the Boston Flower Show. Mr. Haskell's 1975 flower-show garden made handsome use of everyday garden vegetables—lettuce, Swiss chard, and parsley—in a variety of containers. Enough salad greens for any small family could be grown in this way—good to look at and good to eat as well.

Salad greens are right at hand in pots and bowls on a wood-decked terrace.

An old-time bug killer has now been improved

Pyrethrum has long been acknowledged as just about the best of all insecticides. It is effective on a wide range of plant pests, yet has no effect on birds and other warm-blooded creatures. Unfortunately, pyrethrum has become increasingly scarce and expensive, since it is extracted from a kind of chrysanthemum, which severely limits the supply. However, industrial chemists have been at work on the problem of making a synthetic pyrethrum and have finally succeeded in producing one. This is known as resmethrin SBP 1382, and is now becoming available for use by home gardeners. Tests by the U.S. Department of Agriculture have shown that this synthetic pyrethrum is as good as, if not better than, the natural product. It has turned out to be particularly effective against that almost ineradicable pest, white fly. Made generally available by the B. G. Pratt, Co. under the name Whitefly Spray, it may be found in garden supply shops and hardware stores throughout the United States.

Pick vegetables when they're at their best

It's time to start cropping the vegetable garden. Carrots are sweetest and most flavorsome when no more than finger size. Beets are delicious when they're no bigger than hazel nuts, cooked tops and all. Your thumbnail is the best guide for judging the edibility of summer squash, zucchini, and cucumbers. If the skin of any of these cannot be easily pierced by a thumbnail, pick them anyway but put them on the compost heap, not the dinner table. Peas are at their best when the pods are no more than half filled out. As for sweet corn, if the kernels don't spurt milky juice under nail pressure, leave them for the birds. Incidentally, corn husks may be gently split apart to check on the kernel's maturity without harm to the developing ear. Simply split the husks about a third of the way from the top, using thumbnails again, and if the ear is not mature enough to use, leave it another few days.

she's away, he gives parties. "Since I work with people all the time," she says, "I value my privacy at home. For Philip, it's the other way round. His work is solitary—so he likes company." This is a fine example of a couple working out their separate needs in a way that both feel fulfilled and more relaxed and close when they are together. There are, of course, more subtle ways of appreciating separateness—the uniqueness of "me" and "you" takes a whole lifetime to develop and discover.

4. Observe other couples. You can learn from them. People imitate other couples, particularly, of course, their own parents, the first couple relationship anybody experiences. Talk to your parents and find out what happened in their relationship. Use that information in your own life.

5. Try an "instant replay" of a quarrel or misunderstanding to learn how it happened. Go over it, act it out again without the emotional overtones. People learn enormously from seeing how they act, rather than just experiencing it. You often think or intend to say something, and yet your partner sees and hears it quite differently. Sometimes it takes a third person to help you see what's happening. Listen to what your friends or children say—and you may find the cause of the misunderstanding. In family therapy, videotape is being used frequently for just this purpose. A camera in the room tapes a couple in a characteristic quarrel or moment of communication (positive aspects are also recorded). Then the tape may be played back to the couple, so that each sees him or herself as someone on the outside of the relationship looking in. Just having this opportunity of "seeing yourself as others see you" can begin to make a difference in a couple's feelings and behavior.

6. Work out a specific agreement with your partner to divide labor at home. If you feel the division is unequal, work it out verbally or by writing it down. Don't just leave it to chance. Then you both know where you stand. "When I first started working again I was very self-conscious about dividing the household labor," Martha Grausman admits. "The demands of being a wife, mother, and dancer were very great. But my self-consciousness was destructive—I felt guilty and it made things worse." The Grausmans worked it out in the end without having to make a contract—but it can help very much, particularly in these days of new household freedom.

"One of the difficulties of the new liberated household is the emphasis on superficial things, such as who does the dishes and who washes the clothes," Dr. Podesta points out. "These questions can become overwhelming to a relationship, and make the couple forget what they really want to do. A verbal agreement can get all these details out of the way, freeing the time to enjoy one another more—assuming, of course, that a couple is ready for this greater intimacy."

Being a couple today has changed dramatically from our mother's day, mainly because now women, as well as men, are concerned with fulfillment as individuals as well as through the family. That is why "knowing thyself as separate" is such a vital principle. "The difficult thing is letting things evolve naturally, without having to throttle each other about who does what," the Grausmans say. "Everyone makes his or her own mistakes. There isn't any easy way out. You have to have patience and desire to make it work. Now I think we have achieved a balance—like becoming good dance partners together."

Dance partners. So it now seems that the Random House Dictionary definition was right, after all! The delight you can enjoy in being a couple springs from the delight you enjoy in being yourself and in bringing your own creativity to the partnership—so it's true that two's company, but never a crowd.

who has four and a full-time nursing job, "but I need the help. So we write weekend work lists for everybody. If a child works Saturday he doesn't have to work Sunday. I try to match the job to the ability and interest of the child, though that doesn't always work. Last week, for instance, Karin [thirteen] mopped the kitchen floor, Mimi [twelve] dusted the sideboard, the coffee table and the desk—which might not seem like much, but you've got to clear off everything to dust them—Mark [ten] vacuumed the halls, and Christa [seven] cleaned the baths." The system grew hit-or-miss as the family explored its collection of temperaments. Mark and Mimi, for instance, work well together. So do Karin and Christa—but other combinations can give rise to arguments. So each pair alternates in taking care of before and after dinner chores. Gus Emig does a lot of the shopping with either of the two older girls. On weekends when Mrs. Emig works, they help him cook one dinner. The other is do-it-yourself. Even the horse has a rotating schedule of people to feed and exercise him. "Three things make the system work," says Mrs. Emig. "You have to make a fuss over the children when they do things—it's much better than screaming when they don't—you have to spell things out, and you can't be too meticulous."

"It's fair," says Karin. "Besides, sometimes we trade jobs if we don't like what we have to do. When I was younger I always liked it because sometimes I just got bored and it was something to do. When I have my own family I'm going to even out the work, too, so when I get home from work the house doesn't look like a hurricane hit it."

"The original idea was my husband's," says Gail Starkey, a teacher with two children. "At first I was opposed, but finally Stanley sat us down, and we wrote out everything the cleaning woman had done and divided it up among us. We took the money we had used to pay her and used it to pay ourselves—$4 a week each, to be used only for big things we really wanted." That was six years ago. Since then Mr. Starkey and twelve-year-old Michael have bought themselves a pool table, Mrs. Starkey has a sonorous grandfather clock and, like sixteen-year-old Eva, a 10-speed bike.

A chart keeps the jobs straight. Mr. Starkey takes care of bedroom and bath, makes and changes the bed, spot-cleans, dusts, and does the windows when they need it. Mrs. Starkey mops and waxes the tile floors, dusts, does refrigerator, laundry, and lawn. Eva keeps her own room, and her half of the playroom, and the kitchen clean, helps with meals, vacuums. Michael is responsible for his room, the other baths, the cat, his half of the playroom, and a set of yellow vinyl chairs.

"It takes only two or three hours a week," says Mrs. Starkey, "and I really think it's good for all of us. The children were starting to say 'Oh, just leave it for the cleaning woman,' and that wasn't right."

"We want the children to join our lives," says Marjorie Wood. "Bob and I didn't want to ignore them or to turn our lives over to them. So we've tried to raise them to be the kind of children who are nice to have around. They have chores—their beds, taking out the garbage, table setting—because they're family members. Beyond the obvious, I appeal to their better natures and that usually works because they really want to help, to please. All you have to do is gear the job to their level. For instance, when Cindy (now ten) was two, she loved to dust the coffee table. So I took everything off and let her dust it." Tasks geared to ages is the key to another family tradition: making presents. It leads to delicious secrecy as well as family solidarity. "I got some felt," says Cindy, checking to see that her mother is out of the room, "and I borrowed Daddy's glasses case and I copied it, and sewed it together, and then I cut out her initials and pasted them on. I tried it out, and it fits. Now don't tell." Meanwhile Eric, seven, is making a flower collage out of colored clay.

All four families have found ome common denominators to haring the responsibilities of a ousehold with the children. hey'd agree that these things are mportant:

Start early. Even three-year-lds can set tables, though it may ake them three times longer.

Don't discourage volunteers. Be-ween eight and twelve children eem to go through a super-helpful tage when they want to learn and o copy their parents. Cindy Wood, or instance, considers it a privi-ege to be allowed to iron her fa-her's handkerchiefs, "and Eric's he expert on cooking eggs."

Spell it out. Whether it's on a ist or a chart, or in a request, take ime to make sure that all the peo-le involved know what's wanted.

Don't spare the praise. (And en-orce the consequences, if neces-ary, consistently: "No TV," says Mrs. Emig, "unless they have a eally good excuse.")

Try democracy. "The children ave a great deal of say about their hores, and their lives," says Mrs. Olsher. "If it's not too serious, we ry to let them make their own nistakes—although we have the inal say, of course."

Create and support a sense of family uniqueness, a set of family traditions.

Keep the lines of communication open.

It's been said that we're a very youth-oriented, child-oriented culture," says Keith Daugherty. "When everything's aimed at serving children, the needs of the adults become kind of incidental. I don't agree with this. I think children should fit as participating, contributing members of the family, that each individual within the family must have a separate life but that they've also got to participate, contribute, react, and enrich one another.

"Communication is the grease. People really do need to talk straight with one another about what needs to be done, and why, for the family. All too often, if you wait until the heat of battle is there and you're really upset with one another, everything explodes. But there really are opportunities to work together. A family is like any other system. It requires planning. There has to be some kind of signaling system within the family, I think, that says 'this is really important; you've got to listen.' " ■

obe after adobe has been leased offices by lawyers, engineers, erchants, and architects. Others use a medical center (John einbeck once lived and wrote re), a library, a play house, a staurant, city offices, including e Mayor's, the Women's Civic ub, the Old Capital Club, which a men's luncheon club, a com-unity hall, and the headquarters the Monterey History and Art ssociation.

Many of these adobes from the ry beginning have had varied reers, the range spreading wider an a Spanish fan. For example, ne French Consulate, originally e home of a Gallic bon vivant, is w leased to the Girl Scouts, nile the Casa Pecheco, today a en's social and athletic organiza-n, enjoyed an assorted life from ouse of easy virtue to a hospital. nd the First Theatre, where 19th-ntury melodramas are per-rmed every weekend, started as saloon and a whalers' boarding use.

The Monterey History and Art ssociation, established in 1931 to eserve historic Monterey, spon-rs the 3-mile route through Old onterey. "The Path of History" simply marked by a bright pi-ento-red line painted down the nter of streets that weave rough the town and around cor-rs of Spanish, Mexican, and merican Colonial history. Just llow the narrow red line.

At each point of interest a aque explains the historical and chitectural background. An easy rect guide for the visitor, this th can be covered leisurely by ot, bicycle, or car. The time ele-ent, the pace is a personal choice. it to savor slowly is Spanish, so ny not?

You might want to tour Larkin ouse where once at a gala party e imaginative Mrs. Larkin ought in large pumpkins to serve extra seats amid her formal ew England furniture. Or why t sit for a pleasant moment in e garden of the Robert Louis evenson house where the calla es grow high and with graceful andon?

Monterey has the largest col-tion of restored adobe buildings the United States, probably the rld. There are forty-two build-gs on its "Path of History" and rty-six of them are adobe. Over years various groups have ight to save them. The Customs ouse, the oldest historic govern-nt building on the Pacific Coast, s the first in a long line of sur-al of the fittest.

The American flag first flew in California over this site. In 1900 the Native Sons of the Golden West acquired temporary control of the Customs House from the federal government. But it wasn't until the 1930s that a group of concerned citizens raised the money, about $4,000, to prevent the government from selling it as surplus. The majority of the money came from three prominent citizens who used their bonuses saved from World War I. Today it has been restored, refurbished, and deeded to the state and is designated as State Historical Monument No. 1.

Another group, The Women's Civic Club, purchased the adobe House of Four Winds in 1915, and it has been restored in the spirit of the 1850s. Unlike dominoes, the adobes did not fall, for Monterey citizens recognized their legacies from the past very early indeed.

The Monterey History and Art Association, the City of Monterey, the Museum Board, the Monterey Foundation, the Abrego Club, the Monterey Savings and Loan Association, and the National Trust for Historical Preservation have all helped save the adobes from destruction. Many private individuals have restored adobes, deeding them to the State of California. Funds from William Randolph Hearst saved the First Theatre. Mrs. Mayo Hayes O'Donnell has given her adobe house, Casa Soberanes, to the state as a historic monument. "Although it is owned by the state, the City of Monterey still charges me taxes for living in it," she laughs. The sala or drawing room of the house has been copied as an example of an early adobe in the Thorne Collection of Early American Homes in the Art Institute of Chicago.

"We formed a human wall against the bulldozers," remembers Mrs. C. Tod Singleton, a member of the Monterey History and Art Association since 1948. "We surrounded Fremont Headquarters when we heard it was to be pulled down to make a parking lot for the Post Office." The Monterey History and Art Association received the devastating news at 8 one morning, proceeded to make a people-wall, raised $21,000 in pledges, called Washington, and the next day the bulldozers were called off. Now carefully restored, it is leased as law offices.

Seven years ago an ordinance was passed by the city that prohibits any remodeling of the inside as well as the outside of any adobe or structure within the Historic District without approval of the Architectural Council of the City of Monterey. These preservation organizations are highly regarded by the community. To illustrate, Mrs. Singleton explains that only a few months ago the Pacific Gas & Electric Company wanted to install some traffic signals outside the boundaries of the Historic District, but they still called the Monterey History and Art Association for approval.

To finance their projects, the Monterey History and Art Association depends on dues, bequests, and the generosity and loyalty of their members, now numbering about 2000. Every year on June 3 the association celebrates Monterey's birthday in the garden of Pacific House, once an adobe hotel for seafaring men, with a Merienda, or outdoor picnic. On June 3, 1770, Don Gasper de Portola and Father Junipero Serra landed at Monterey and claimed California for Spain.

Another important date is usually the last weekend in April when the Monterey History and Art Association sponsors an Adobe Tour. This year it was titled "Sailors and Shawls," with sixteen of the houses on the tour. At each house, the table was set as it might have been in the 1800s with appropriate place cards of leading citizens of the time. The tour raises up to $9,000 to aid the association's work in preserving the adobes of Monterey.

"Red Tile Tour" takes you to Santa Barbara's adobes.

Further south, along the California coast, the adobes of Santa Barbara have known not only the vicissitudes of disregard, but also the vengeance of an earthquake, which shook the city fifty years ago.

This force, in a way, started the rebirth of a once-Victorian Santa Barbara all that much sooner. There had been rumblings before from concerned citizens worrying about the disappearing adobes, the vanishing lines of their city's early Spanish character. In 1922, Mr. and Mrs. Bernhard Hoffman purchased the Lugo adobe adapting it as their office. This began the movement in Santa Barbara to preserve the old adobes in the city, and to erect new buildings that reflected, retained the Colonial atmosphere. The same year the Community Arts Association and Plans and Planting Committee were formed with the Lugo adobe as headquarters. The city's first Planning Commission and building ordinances arrived in 1923, followed by zoning in 1924. Santa Barbara was trying to salvage its past, finding its way step by step. And then a giant step, the earthquake of 1925.

In the weeks that followed, hope and hard work prompted a phoenix to rise. During the first eight months, some 2000 plans passed through the newly formed Architectural Board of Review. "They were the sentinels of our architectural future, and they never let down their guard," remembers an elderly native.

As a result of the constant care and strict but wise guidance of the Architectural Board of Review and the Plans and Planting Committee, Santa Barbara is now a splendid city in the sun, Mediterranean in architecture, colorful and green as a garden. Fan palms line the streets and leafy trees umbrella public benches—a welcome accessory as Santa Barbara is a walking city. (Nine landscaped parking lots and one tile-roofed garage offer free parking for 90 minutes.)

To walk is the best way to see the adobes that have survived, how they've spent their years, and how they function today. Not as abundant as in Monterey, an adobe culture still remains that mingles well with the planned harmony of the rebuilt Santa Barbara.

El Pueblo Viejo, or Old Town, fosters most of the adobes and helps them flourish. In 1960 an ordinance was adopted by the City's Architectural Board of Review that limits buildings permitted in this area to three styles —California adobe, Monterey Colonial, and Spanish Colonial. Any new buildings must be approved by the Board and the Historical Landmarks Advisory Committee.

The "Red Tile Tour," a charming way to wander around Old Town and peek into the past, was created by Mrs. Marilyn Randle, a member of the Santa Barbara Chamber of Commerce. "I first came here as a tourist and asked myself what I wanted to see in Santa Barbara. Adobes, of course, but so many had been lost in the earthquake or fallen before the bulldozer. I wanted to encourage visitors to walk into our history, to see our adobes."

The tour covers twelve city blocks and passes by several adobes that have been preserved as private houses, and some that have new roles. From Massachusetts came Daniel Hill, building a fine adobe in 1826 with the first wooden floor for an adobe in Santa Barbara. In much later years of decline it was a Chinese laundry, but beautifully restored today it is the center of the Santa Barbara Foundation. The Lugo adobe, the first to be preserved, is now a gift shop.

Threatened with destruction, the "Historic Adobe" was moved brick by brick to its present site, and is now a men's riding club. Colonial John C. Fremont's headquarters were here after he and his troops caught Santa Barbara's Mexicans "sleeping in the sun" on Christmas Day, 1846. And while now an antiques shop spreads itself elegantly over the "Orena Adobe," this house and courtyard were once the active home of Don Gasper Orena and his wife while raising thirteen children.

The backbone or perhaps the beginning of El Paseo, a pedestrian shopping complex, is the Casa de la Guerra, the original adobe house of the Commandante of the Presidio in 1827. Swinging around the courtyard, El Paseo extends from the Casa de la Guerra with open arms, rows of shops. Shops of many kinds are found under the arches of the Andalusian-inspired buildings that blend so well with the main house, the adobe.

Offices including one of a United States congressman look down on the courtyard where you can lunch among the orange trees, or read the book you've just purchased in a tiny shop of stucco. Now owned by the Santa Barbara Trust for Historic Preservation, El Paseo was built before the earthquake by Bernhard Hoffman who was also the first chairman of the Plans and Planting Committee.

The present chairman of this prestigious committee is Dr. Pearl Chase who has been continually involved in the affairs of Santa Barbara for seventy-four years. Her accomplishments are long and legendary and she believes in the contributions of private citizens. She says, "Government officials are really temporary—they come and go—and this constant turnover means that many citizens' organizations have far greater continuity and relative importance in community affairs. Don't assume leadership will come from the professions; you won't find it there. If you're to succeed, you must be led by citizens and citizens groups with the interest and support of key public agencies." ■

Thomasville interprets a Country French classic.

La Galerie Provençale... it's almost like dining in an 18th-century château.

Its natural country airs are so right for here and now. Note the authentic design detail: deep-relief carving, exquisite use of cane, graceful custom hardware. It's "that Thomasville look" with a charming French accent. The finish is Vintage, a rich fruitwood tone with the luster of a fine antique . . . or take your choice of two enchanting paint finishes . . . all available in an extensive collection of pieces for living room and bedroom as well as dining room. For names of Thomasville dealers who carry La Galerie Provençale, call this toll-free number anytime: 800-243-6000 (in Conn., 800-882-6500). Write for our Thomasville Homemaker's Guide. KitchenAid Disposers Can Get You Out Of This Jam.

Only the KitchenAid stainless steel disposer unjams itself at the touch of a button. The unique Wham Jam Breaker button.

Press it and wham! Stubborn jams disappear!

But you won't have to use this unique feature very often. Because the KitchenAid disposer is very hard to jam in the first place. It has the most powerful motor in any home disposer. And it chews up things many other disposers can't handle.

For extra assurance, the KitchenAid disposer is warranted for five years. If it should fail during the first year, it will be repaired without charge. During the next four years, you'd be charged for labor only.

See your KitchenAid disposer dealer. He's in the Yellow Pages under "Dishwashers." Or send the coupon.

French Writing Table

We would like to know more about the style of this desk. What is its place of origin?

J.R.S.—Lincoln, Ill.

Your Louis XVI style writing table is a fine reproduction of a Bonheur de Jour, so called because of the speed with which it achieved success. It was introduced in France about the mid-18th century. Its distinguishing feature is a recessed superstructure.

Rococo Revival Clock

We do not know where this clock came from nor have we any idea how old it might be. Can you tell from the mark anything about it?

G.L.P.—San Gabriel, Cal.

Your Rococo Revival mantel clock of asymmetrical outline was made in France after 1889, perhaps about 1900. It was imported by the still-existing J.E. Caldwell & Co., Jewelers, Silversmiths, and Antiquarians of Philadelphia, Pa., who succeeded Bennett & Caldwell in 1848.

Photographer's Chair

The antique dealer from whom I purchased this chair called it a "Photographer's Chair." What is the reason for this term?

G.G.—Saint Martinville, La.

Toward the end of the 19th century, wicker furniture intended for indoor use was usually of a "fancy" or novelty character. It was a popular prop for early photographers specializing in portraiture, particularly of children.

Russian Sculpture

I was given this bronze statue and would like to know its background.

P.D.P.—Washington, D.C.

Your bronze is the work of the Russian sculptor Ievgueni Alexandrovitch Lanceray (1848-1886), who was one of the leading bronzeurs of the 19th century. It was cast in 1874 by Chopin. Czarist Russian objects have become quite collectable. (Continued on page 10)

"If anyone had told me a few years ago that I would be an Interior Decorator, I would have said you're crazy!"

Mrs. Faye C. Haynie
An outstanding LaSalle graduate from Madisonville, Kentucky

"Less than a month after I mailed my final lesson I was hired by a decorator firm. What makes my career so special is that I choose my own hours . . . and I feel so rich when I compare my earnings with what I used to earn," writes LaSalle graduate, Mrs. Faye C. Haynie. "If anyone had told me a few years ago that I would be an Interior Decorator, I would have said "you're crazy!"

you have a natural love for attractive homes, ıy don't you become an interior decorator? ere's how one woman made her dream of a nderful career come true.

It seems only yesterday that Mrs. Faye Haynie Madisonville, Kentucky was working in a job e didn't like . . . as a million other women do. Today, she enjoys a good income in an excit- career of her own . . . having the time of her e as an interior decorator.

How did Mrs. Haynie accomplish this racle?

One day she answered an advertisement of Salle Extension University, a correspondence stitution, describing the attractions of a career interior decorating.

When she realized how much fun it could be learn decorating in her spare time at home, e decided to enroll. That was the beginning of whole new life for her, and one of the reasons her happiness today.

Mrs. Faye Haynie's true life story illustrates e opportunities that a talented woman with ining can enjoy in a decorating career. Ob- usly, LaSalle cannot promise job placement predict the degree of success that a student ll achieve. But of this you can be sure — Salle training is an ideal way to prepare for decorating career. Why not send for the free oklet offered today?

LaSalle training has helped many women crease their decorating skills. LaSalle could lp you do it, too. Why don't you send for the oklet offered below?

An ideal career for women

ıere are few other fields to match the pleasures d rewards that a woman—whether married or ıgle—can enjoy as an interior decorator. Con- ler for a moment:

Decorators can put their natural talents and eative urge to use in designing beautiful and citing rooms for clients.

Their hours are often spent shopping for the usual. In glamorous showrooms, antique ops and galleries. Selecting whatever is lovely d unique . . . in fabrics, furniture and cessories. Applying a "decorator's touch" to autify a home, a suite of offices, a hotel or artment lobby. Whatever the assignment, a corator earns money for work she enjoys.

Best of all, in addition to the satisfaction and feeling of accomplishment their work provides, decorators have many opportunities to meet interesting people. Clients often become friends.

Some of today's decorators began their careers by helping acquaintances to redecorate, by working in department stores, galleries and studios.

How you train at home

The LaSalle Course in Interior Decorating has been prepared to give you practical, complete and up-to-date preparation for this exciting modern career. Lessons come to you by mail; they are as fascinating as the work itself. Much of the study material included is unique in a course of this kind. You get fine quality sketching equipment, coloring materials, stencils that make it easy for you to draw room plans, and much more.

Step by step, you are shown how to develop your creative ability. You are taught the principles of color and design and the historic background of today's decoration. You are trained in the selection and use of furniture, fabrics, accessories, lighting. You learn how to achieve beautiful settings to delight your clients and build your reputation.

Even before you have finished the course, you may want to apply your new knowledge to glorifying your own home.

At each step, you are given practical assignments which are then carefully reviewed by your instructors and returned to you. You are coached with care for your work as a decorator.

The LaSalle Course in Interior Decorating is backed by more than sixty years of leadership in the field of home education. More than 2,000,000 people have enrolled for home-study courses with LaSalle.

8th Century English reproductions.

The original of the japanned Queen Anne Secretary replica, shown here in one of our showrooms, was commissioned by the Duke of Marlborough in about 1700 for Blenheim Castle. Its lacquer colors are softened by skilled hands to a mellow patina.

The original of the Regency Bamboo Chair was brought to New York —to a shop on 57th Street—by a knowing connoisseur. Only by making models of its delicate original parts could the sculptural curves, sweeps and pitch be duplicated.

The Bachelor's Chest, like much Queen Anne furniture, is enriched by rare walnut. Once called Persian, the trees which produced this wood were planted in England by the Roman conquerors. Today it can only be found near the Caucasus, where soil, wind and rain conditions remain perfect for producing its special character.

These are but three reproductions from our Baker collection with the enduring qualities which make the originals so valuable: proportion, detail, finish and authentic material.

Eighteenth Century English and other Baker collections may be seen at select stores and, through your interior designer, at Baker, Knapp & Tubbs showrooms in the cities listed below. A 400-page two volume casebound catalogue of over 1000 Baker designs is available for fifteen

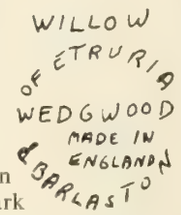
German Silver Casket

Can you help me trace the origin of my silver casket, which is about 8 by 8 by 6 inches in size? From what period does it derive?

M.S.—Vancouver, B.C., Canada

Your silver casket that is enriched with vigorously modeled acanthus foliage, various figures from mythology, masks, and several other popular Renaissance motifs is of German origin. It dates about 1810.

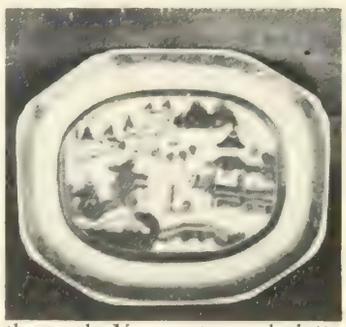
Wedgwood Mark



What can you tell me about my set of dishes from this mark? Do you know anything of its history?

E.W.—Corpus Christi, Tex.

Your printed mark, first used about 1940, bears the names of Josiah Wedgwood's former and present Staffordshire factories: Etruria, founded in 1769 and replaced by Barlaston in 1939. The mark is found on Queen's Ware, an ivory or cream-colored earthenware perfected by Josiah Wedgwood. In 1765 he accepted an order to supply a tea service to Queen Charlotte, wife of George III. This and subsequent orders pleased her so much that she authorized him to call his cream-colored earthenware "Queen's Ware."



Chinese Platter

Can you tell me anything about my Canton blue china? Is it old? Where was it actually made and by whom?

D.J.S.—Stevensville, Mont.

Canton blue and white ware was not made at Canton but at potteries near Canton as well as at Ching-tê-Chên, although much of the painting was done at the port of Canton, where families, including the children did the work. Your octagonal platter, or tureen stand, is of 19th century manufacture. Pieces marked China were made after 1890.

European Bed Warmer

I was told that this bed warmer is of English origin, but I'm not sure. Is it English, and can you ascertain how old it is?

Your copper bed warmer is not English. It is of European manufacture and probably dates about the middle of the 18th century. Copper hot-water bottles, such as yours, were popular with the Dutch, but one that is furnished with what appears to be an original wood handle is quite rare.

Chinese Vase

My Oriental vase has two narrow circles in blue across its base. What do they signify?

W.P.S.—Sunriver, Ore.

The empty double circle in blue on your Chinese vase is often found in K'ang Hai wares (1662-1722). It is stated in the T'ao Lu that in 1677 an edict was issued prohibiting the use on porcelain of the reign-name of K'ang Hsi lest the ware be broken and the Imperial name profaned in the rubbish heap—hence the empty circle where the mark should have been.

How to find more country in the country this summer

A hand-written collection of ideas with charming illustrations, Simple Living by Jacques Massacrier (Links, $7.95) is the perfect summer paperback "for those who want to reintroduce... simplicity...into daily life." It tells you everything from how to read weather from the clouds, cure insect bites, tan leather, waterproof your own clothes, do your own carpentry and masonry, even how to repel pests from your vegetable garden with "enemy" plants.

The endless "sofa" that arranges any way you want—even wall-to-wall

Design your own seating arrangement with modular seating with pillowy attached cushions. Pushed shoulder to shoulder here, a corner unit (about $198) plus two armless chairs (about $165 each) plus an ottoman (about $88). Upholstered in a vervy cream-and-rust-colored cotton print with a Zepel finish. "Pillow Talk" seating group by Kroehler. Abraham & Straus, Brooklyn.

TED HARDIN

Pushbutton sewing with a new electronic sewing machine that "remembers" 25 different stitches

The whiz of the works is a tiny 8,000-transistor chip that eliminates over 350 mechanical parts and stores a "memory bank" of 25 different stitches, many multipurpose. Among them—stitches for blind hemming, basting, darning, fagoting, elastic fabrics, charming decorative border stitches, even 1- and 2-step buttonholes. You just select your stitch on the illustrated pushbutton panel, and the machine delivers it automatically as you sew. Part of flatbed tilts away for free-arm surface—great for sewing sleeves and cuffs. The Athena 2000 by Singer is about $800; aluminum bone-color exterior.

A highlight of a motor trip from Freeport to Mt. Desert Island—two spectacular gardens

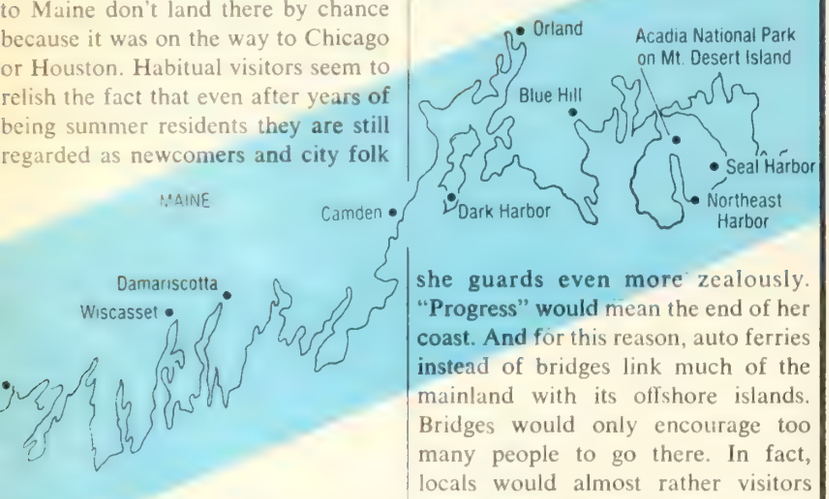
By Nancy McCarthy Richardson

Natives of Maine see the world differently from you and me. Perhaps that's because Maine is physically very different from even the other New England states. It's simply not on the way to anywhere else. People who go to Maine don't land there by chance because it was on the way to Chicago or Houston. Habitual visitors seem to relish the fact that even after years of being summer residents they are still regarded as newcomers and city folk by the locals. This attitude may even be part of what draws people to Maine year after year in search of a simpler, more out-of-doors summer life. Visitors enjoy the local dialect and local ways, which exclude much of what is held elsewhere to be progress. They welcome the switch from city skills and other forms of competitiveness to skills that have to do with boats, raking blueberries, the woods, a knowledge of winds, tides, local weather patterns. It's a place that for many is synonymous with peace, privacy, and cool summers.

Maine is not crowded, especially in winter, and summer brings such a brief and sweet reprieve that even quantities of summer visitors leave only a momentary impression by contrast to the relentless cold season. Even crime there has its own flavor. The major offenses have to do with dogs that run deer, poaching, stealing lobster pots or cutting lines, rustling timber.

Islands, car ferries and an in-and-out coastline

The coastline contributes greatly to the air of secrecy and privacy so instinctive to Mainers. It at no point makes a straight line, rather it jogs and backtracks to such an extent that a journey from one village to the next, as the crow flies, becomes four times the distance if one takes a coastal road. Large peninsulas reach down into the Atlantic and little broken-off bits make the thousands of islands, most still wild and uninhabited, that poke up anywhere from a few hundred yards to several miles offshore. Though Maine has good examples of Colonial and 18th-century architecture and has taken steps to preserve them, it is this coastline and its islands that she guards even more zealously. "Progress" would mean the end of her coast. And for this reason, auto ferries instead of bridges link much of the mainland with its offshore islands. Bridges would only encourage too many people to go there. In fact, locals would almost rather visitors drive boats up and down the coast than cars.



Besides most towns in Maine still have no stoplight and the crush of summer traffic regularly overwhelms any provision made for it.

The wonderful thing about Maine, however, is that one doesn't have to have spent every summer since childhood to get a feel for it and also to see, buy, and imitate some of the best there is to offer in the way of living and entertaining. These things are not hard to find because they've been the best for years, though they often have a camouflaged, purposely nondescript air about them. In a several day driving trip I followed the coast from Portland to Mount Desert Island, stopping only for the "musts" recommended for such a short trip. Here are some of the highlights. It is a trip that

FOXFIRE, THE STORY OF PLAIN LIVIN

How to do all sorts of things from cooking wild greens to building a log cabi

By Kenneth Ba

Foxfire is the name of a tiny organism that glows in the dark in the coves of the Appalachian Mountains. It is also the name of three books compiled from articles in a magazine called Foxfire written and published by the teen-age students of Rabun Gap-Nacoochee School in Rabun Gap, Georgia.

In 1966, six weeks after he had begun teaching English at the school, Eliot Wigginton, fresh from Cornell, became painfully aware that his students found both Shakespeare and their instructor bores. Deciding that the only way to catch his bears was with honey, he marched into class the next morning and said, "How would you like to throw away the text and start a magazine?" And that is how Foxfire began.

The inspiration came from Rabun Gap itself. Off in the hills that surround the town are some of the most fascinating people alive. For generations, they have grown or raised almost everything they eat. They can make almost anything, including the tools to make it with. Proud, undauntable, wise, they are unbelievably self-sufficient—and they are happy.

Once Eliot's students (most of th had relatives in the mountains) agr that writing a magazine about t forebears would be more fun t Silas Marner, they took to the h with tape recorders, notebooks, cameras. They also raised the mon $450, to print the first issue (copies sold out in a week), and to Foxfire has subscribers in all f states, a dozen foreign countries, has inspired similar student publ

Latest discoveries from Dr. Ernest Hartmann's Sleep Laboratory at Boston State Hospital

By Caroline Seebohm

Most people now know that there are two types of sleep, REM (Rapid Eye Movement, or Dream) and non-REM, that these two states of sleep alternate throughout the night about every ninety minutes, and that we need both types of sleep for physical and mental well-being. But did you know that there are two types of tiredness that are directly related to these two states of sleep?

Why do you sometimes feel tired when you've been sitting down all day? Do creative people need more SLEEP than others? Why is a good SLEEP refreshing?

The secrets of a good night's sleep

What tiredness means

"Tiredness is not easy to study," explains Dr. Ernest Hartmann, Director of the Sleep and Dream Laboratory, Boston State Hospital, and Professor of Psychiatry, Tufts University School of Medicine. "But I feel that there are two distinct kinds of tiredness. One comes after physical activity, when you have not been very emotionally or intellectually involved, but it's been a day of sport or physical action. This kind of tiredness feels quite pleasant, and means that you usually fall asleep quite quickly. In children, this simple tiredness is just a "wearing out" without mental involvement, and also means that they fall asleep quickly.

"The second kind of tiredness is probably much more common in our civilized world. This is a mental and emotional tiredness that usually comes after a day of stress or worry. This is characterized by a generally unpleasant feeling—you become irritable, angry, overwhelmed by things around you, depressed, and so on. There are physical manifestations, also—your muscles become tense, you have headaches. And unfortunately, this is a tiredness from which you do not necessarily fall asleep easily. You will lie in bed worrying, tense—too tired to go to sleep. This is particularly noticeable in children—this kind of tiredness makes them scream and become infantile and it's more difficult to get them to go to sleep. This kind of tiredness also seems to make adults regress—you become childishly cross, oversensitive, like a spoilt child."

It is Dr. Hartmann's conclusion, after much study, that for the first kind of tiredness, the physical tiredness, you mainly need non-REM or slow-wave sleep; and for the second, you need REM or dream sleep.

This immediately leads to the next conclusion—that sleep has two different but connected restorative functions.

How sleep restores you

"The first restorative function is body sleep," explains Dr. Hartmann. "The body having worn out its musculature, or the tissues having been burned up, slow-wave sleep may play a role in restoring these muscles and tissues as well as preparing you for dream sleep. The other kind of sleep—dream sleep—seems more to have a restorative function for the brain, for knitting up the 'ravell'd sleave of care,' in Shakespeare's most apt expression—integrating material that has been left over from the day, for instance. It's not pure memory reorganization. It's more like this—if something happened during the day that has emotionally stirred you and brought up old memories and pulled things out of place, unfiled and a little disturbing, sleep not only restores, it also integrates the day's happenings.

"We have noticed, for instance, that if you are particularly worried or under emotional stress, you tend to need more sleep—or at least sle more—to integrate these difficulti When things are going well, you sle less. You then have less need of t restorative qualities of sleep.

How to use sleep

"Since sleep has these integrati restoring qualities, why not take a vantage of it?" asks Dr. Hartma "If you have to write a paper, for stance, or get some complicated w done, don't try to do it before y go to sleep, but arrange it, look o the material, and have it in your he before sleep, and you'll find in t morning that the work comes mu more easily.

"We have observed that creat people particularly tend to use sle for these helpful, clearing-the-he qualities. Therefore certain creat people tend to need more sleep b cause they use it more. Practical p ple are often short sleepers becau they work so efficiently and organ their time so well during the day t they do not need to "waste time" ganizing themselves while they sle

How long you should sleep

The average person still tends to thi of sleep in terms of how many ho he should sleep. But a man can sle three hours a night and wake up fe ing perfectly refreshed. And t much sleep can be bad—it decon tions the body too much. So you s it's not the (Continued on page amount of sleep you should be thinking about, but the quality of it—the balance of REM and non-REM sleep banishing your two types of tiredness and integrating and restoring your mental processes.

Perhaps knowing that sleep has these restorative functions will help you if you find it difficult to fall asleep. Mountain crafts and foods, planting by the signs of the zodiac, corn shuckin's, banjos, and dulcimers

onsiderable crop, the books cover n astounding number of subjects. ere are some of them: log cabin uilding, hog dressing, mountain rafts and foods, hunting tales, ith healing, moonshining (illegal, ut a fine art), ghost stories, plant-g by the signs of the zodiac (it orks), recipes using spring wild ants, spinning and weaving, corn uckin's (these are gala doings), agon making, animal care, banjos nd dulcimers, hide tannings, and utter churns.

The chapter on log cabin build-g is so comprehensive, so beauti-lly detailed and illustrated, that you want a log cabin, here's how get one. As Eliot says, "To those ho would look on such a project a farce, or a chore not worth the me, we have little to say. We eak to the individual who feels at someday, somewhere, the use the instructions contained in ese pages will be a source of tre-endous satisfaction." They would deed. Just to read them makes e itch to build something—if only tree house. Not everyone is inter-ted in how to put together a but-r churn, but should you be, Fox-e 3 will tell you exactly how. Al-ost everyone would be amused ith the idea of making a corn-uck mop or doll or hat, and al-ost anyone can—with Foxfire 3. ne same volume has instructions r building a smoke house, very lpful in this day of smoking hams d turkeys in your own backyard. man named Dave Sturgill and s sons make mandolins, guitars, ddles, dulcimers (the kind that are ucked, not the zither type), and njos—their best seller. For $35, ou can send for a do-it-yourself t that includes instructions as ell as materials: cut-out pieces of llow poplar (all routed, marked r holes, etc.), the fret wire, strings, nsion blocks, nails, screws, and e plastic head. It's a very good njo, worth learning how to play you can't already.

There are countless recipes for erything from sassafras tea (a eat "sweater-outer" of fevers) to rsimmon-nut bread. Here's that cipe: ⅓ cup shortening, ½ cup gar, two eggs, 1¾ cups flour, 2 aspoons baking powder, ½ tea-oon salt, ¼ teaspoon soda, 1 p mashed persimmons, ½ cup opped hickory nuts or black wal-ts. Cream shortening, add sugar and eggs, beat well. Sift dry ingredients, add to creamed mixture alternately with persimmons and nuts. Pour into greased loaf pan and bake at 350° for one hour. The combination of persimmons and black walnuts sounds delectable.

Wild berries and fruits abound in Foxfire country, and all of them are made into jams and jellies and cordial-like drinks. Wild pasture and swamp roses are considered a great delicacy and both the petals and hips (the latter extremely high in vitamin C) are turned into sweet concoctions. Non-mountain dwellers can use cultivated roses such as the dog rose, the sweet briar, and the multiflora. The recipes in volume 3 work for all. Rose hip soup—yes, soup—jam, and jelly, rose dew, a flavoring made from rose petals (you must gather them in the morning) pulled to pieces, combined with 2 cups of sugar to 1 cup of petals, and packed in jars. Two months later, an elixir will have been distilled, which is drained off and bottled—a kind of attar of roses to be used as a flavoring for drinks and whipped cream. A little more down to earth are rose petals dipped in whiskey, then batter, and fried in deep fat—a scented version of fried squash blossoms.

Now. What do the Foxfire books have to do with the Bicentennial? As a recording of an American way of life, everything. As Eliot Wigginton says, "These grandparents were primarily an oral civilization, information being passed through the generations by word of mouth and demonstration, little of it is written down. When they're gone, the magnificent hunting tales, the ghost stories, the intricate tricks of self-sufficiency acquired through the years of trial and error, the eloquent and haunting stories of suffering and sharing and building and healing and planting and harvesting—all these will go with them, and what a loss."

But thanks to the books, it has not been a loss, but a singular gain, and we are the richer for it. Along with the "affairs of plain living" and with telling us how to build a log cabin or make a Friendship quilt, they lift the spirit. ■

Material in this article was taken from Foxfire 1, 2, and 3—the latter to be published later in August By Doubleday & Company, Inc.

Along the coast of Maine can be totally reassembled at home with the catalogues and books that document what I saw.

In the first place, if you're amused by the local language, send for a book called Maine Lingo by John Gould, Down East magazine, Camden, Maine, $11, 40¢ postage.

My first stop was L.L. Bean in Freeport not far from Portland. Open 24 hours a day, it's a huge barnlike warehouse-department store with all the specific equipment and clothing one might need on a vacation in Maine. There is a huge room of tents as you enter, another of canoes, others upstairs full of tackle bags, fishing rods, hunting gear, sleeping bags, decoys, gun cases, compasses, whistles, knives, boots of all descriptions, in addition to fleece-lined moccasin bedroom slippers, chamois shirts, and other things men love to get at Christmas. Write L.L. Bean, Inc., Freeport, Me. 14032, for a catalogue.

Next up the coast, Wiscasset and Damariscotta, two tiny and very pretty villages with big drive-through charm, were very active in shipbuilding in the 19th century. They sit on little hills that slope down to the water and are made up primarily of small white houses built before the Civil War. Once active in West Indian and transatlantic trade and even trade with the Orient, both are now popular summer resorts. The area is full of antiques shops. The Maine Antique Digest published monthly in Waldoboro, Maine for 50¢ a copy tells where to find shops, auctions, and other sales.

In nearby Round Pond, the Granite Hall store has delicious homemade penuche fudge, homemade peanut butter, sharp cheeses. Gay's Grocery in Damariscotta has the makings for picnics and also a basket to put them in—ask for a piece of their blueberry custard pie. Continuing north one goes through Camden, another picturesque town where the local river flows—rushes—under the main street and out to the bay. There is a huge marina here, and besides vast water parking lots for visiting boats, one finds the home port for the big restored schooners that take visitors up and down the coast.

Not much farther north is Lincolnville where the car ferry leaves regularly for the island of Isleboro and the summer community of Dark Harbor. Don't miss the ferryman, Captain Hinkley, who's been there for decades and his Dalmatian Dot, who's been there for less. Dark Harbor is full of the big summer houses, called cottages, built just before and after the turn of the century. Many of them are in full view from the water as the ferry approaches the island and the harbor. Once on the island, though, it is harder to see them since they are hidden down driveways and behind trees and bushes.

The main reason to come to Dark Harbor is to stay the night at one of these big cottages—the Isleboro Inn—once the summer house of a family called Mitchell who built it in 1916. The bedrooms are large and comfortable in an old-fashioned summer way with marvelous old rag rugs on the floor. On warm summer nights everyone eats outside under a big yellow awning on a big terrace full of white wicker. The sunset is the biggest attraction at this point, which is enhanced by ordering whatever fish is fresh that day—usually a baked swordfish, haddock, or halibut. The lawn terraces steeply down to the water and often there's a boat at one of the four guest moorings. There's a tennis court, waterskiing, and a croquet court right down by the water. When the nights are cool, several big fireplaces warm the big downstairs rooms. If you take the ferry back to Lincolnville at lunchtime the following day, have a lobster at the lobster pound restaurant close by the ferry dock. The highway from this point is full of cars with canoes lashed to the roof and station wagons with dogs in the back. It seems that lots of dogs vacation in Maine.

Up the road in Orland is the headquarters for H.O.M.E., Homeworkers Organized for More Employment, a cooperative of more than a thousand Maine craftsmen. In a series of barnlike buildings, a remarkable range of handmade things spread out on table after table—dolls, birdhouses, patchwork, balsam wreaths, painted shells, candles, knitted socks, moccasins—all the product of long snowbound winters. Though many of the craftsmen need more direction in design, H.O.M.E. is definitely worth a stop. Perhaps someone there can tell you who makes rag rugs to order.

Just beyond Orland, head east down a peninsula to Blue Hill, where there are two families each famous for its pottery. The shop of one is called Rackliffe and the other Rowantrees. All the glazes come from mineral deposits—old mines, bogs, quarries—close to Blue Hill. Some of the two-color pieces look like the kind of thi sold at Diane Love in New Yo Each fills mail and phone orde Write in care of either one, Bl Hill, Maine 14614. 207-555-12 gives local phone numbers.

From Blue Hill one can Cadillac Mountain to the north the coast. It rises from the cen of what looks like another lo peninsula but what is really Mou Desert Island. Acadia Natio Park is in the center of the isla and all around its deeply indent coastline are the resorts known Northeast, Seal and Bar Harbo The Asticou Inn in Northeast Ha bor is a big old-fashioned summ cottage long ago adapted into summer inn. The terrace of the i and most of the bedrooms have view down the length of the sma ish harbor that is often full boats. The dining room, which still papered in what looks like 1930s Chinese wallpaper patte serves unbeatable peach muffins breakfast time. Abel's Lobst Pound on Route 198 is where t locals go to eat clams and lobste It will also prepare lobster hot take out or will ship it packed ice. Call 207-276-5837 for info mation. On the main street Northeast, a Mrs. Purvear has shop that carries afghans, quilts, special tarragon mayonnaise, da and pumpkin breads as well as lemon bread that is very, ver moist because she pours lemo juice mixed with sugar—lots of —while the bread is still hot. Sh will also make a scallop stew fro a local recipe that takes three da to do. She recommends this ste with her blueberry muffins and green salad as a good menu for cool-day lunch party.

The Jordan Pond House, a farm house built in 1840 with later addi tions, sits in the center of th Acadia National Park. Its restau rant has been going since 1895 Though lunch and dinner are deli cious, tea time is a local traditio because of the popovers and home made strawberry jam. The restau rant also makes its own ice creams In summer the flavors come fro fresh strawberries, peaches, an raspberries and in the fall th maple walnut ice cream is mad from its own maple syrup. Th recipe for peach ice cream is in little cookbook sold at Jorda Pond House called The Country Inn Cookbook put out by the Berk shire Travellwe, Stockbridge Mass. 01262. Meadowcraft. What more can you say?

Just a few things.

You can say here's one of our new French baker's racks. Wrought iron. Finely crafted. All black and scrolly and banded in solid brass.

You can say it's just one of dozens of designs included in America's finest collection of casual furniture.

You can say all these things about Meadowcraft. You can say all these things. Because they're true.

stones for doorstops, round baskets with covers that would be perfect for sewing. These and other baskets are made by the Penobscot Indians that Thoreau visited and wrote about in the 1850s. The balsam pillows here are marvelous, the scent they exude being perhaps the essence of Maine. The day I was there they told me that the pillows will keep their scent indefinitely if kept wrapped airtight in a plastic bag, and also will revive if left on a window sill on a damp day.

Here, at the end of the trip, I ran into two gardens, both open to the public and quite worth a trip in themselves. The Abby Aldrich Rockefeller garden is open on Wednesdays during July and August. An Oriental garden in plan, it has a wall of stucco and stone veneered with a yellow Chinese tile that rings off part of a shadowy, piny Maine wood. Within the wall and down a path lined with low bushes and Korean temple figures in stone is the most Oriental part of the garden. Just green and white, peaceful and shadowy—a contrast to the garden's large main "room" open and flooded with sunlight and flowers of all colors. On one side they're mauve, white, violet, purple, and pink. On the other, red, blue, and yellow flowers are all jumbled together in one long deep bed as though they were growing densely and wildly in some summer meadow. It's a garden full of ideas to scale down and imitate at home: the high encircling wall, the contrast between shade and sunshine, between all-green and a color-box of color, between pastels and primaries.

The Thuya Garden, on the Ocean Drive leaving Northeast Harbor for Seal Harbor, is open daily. It's the smallish pleasant garden of a typical large summer lodge-cabin built in the twenties. To see both the lodge and garden gives an instant impression of summer life in the northeast as opposed to summer life on the Cape or on Long Island. The garden gates and little garden pavilions are built from local white cedar. Grass paths and small ponds separate beds planted solidly in peonies or delphinium or phlox, aconite, or snake root. Go early in the morning when the grass is still wet.

The Bangor airport is an hour's drive from Bar Harbor where one can drop rented cars and fly out on big Delta jets to Boston and beyond. There is also a small Bar Harbor airport that is closer but often closed by the weather. ■

When you've got a simple thing like the Pap test,

it's criminal that any woman should run the risk of undetected cancer of the uterus

The Pap test is a simple little internal checkup that takes your doctor practically no time at all.

It can detect cancer of the uterus—one of the most common cancers in women—in time to do something about it.

Imagine, that's all it takes: a simple Pap test once a year. Isn't it incredible that some women just don't get around to it?

Look, right now, while you're thinking of it, why not call your doctor and make an appointment for a Pap test?

Don't be afraid.

It's what you don't know that can hurt you.

Super canning expediters

plus kitchen helpers, wrapping shortcuts, bug chasers, storm defenses, and more

By Mary Elizabeth Falter

I've spent the whole summer canning, preserving, and making jelly—something I've always promised myself I'd do but never have. This year, however, with more time on my hands and the need to conserve more important than ever, I've been at it since the first strawberries in June.

The most important thing about all this is finding an inexpensive source of prime fruits and vegetables, and then organizing yourself so efficiently that canning becomes sort of a part of your summer life.

As we no longer live in the country where we always had a vegetable garden, I scour the back-road fruit stands and do trades with friends who have prolific fruit trees or berry bushes (so many jars for the privilege of picking). Next comes the equipment. I cleared a cupboard in the corner of the kitchen and keep everything together. I've always hung onto my grandmother's jam kettle and the baby bottle sterilizer, and these and the other necessary tools are right there.

When I was shopping for jars at the hardware store, I discovered a line of very helpful canning tools. They're called Earthgrown Canning Accessories, made by the Leisure Technology Incorporated in Minneapolis. I think one of the best items is a funnel that's 50 percent larger than most used for this purpose and has a wider mouth. In its stem is a built-in measurer that assures the proper amount of headspace in each jar as it's filled. There's also a very practical jar wrench set, which opens and lifts both single and two-piece lids, a handy no-slip jar lifter, which is also very useful for many other kitchen jobs, and a jelly strainer and bag—all in dark green heavy-duty dishwasher-proof plastic. The tongs and wrenches are covered with a rubberized material that matches.

Note to talcum powder users: It's just as easy to splash on the after-bath powder while standing in the tub rather than on the bathroom floor. In the tub, the extra powder can be swished right down the drain whereas dusting it off the floor is an annoying chore.

The Burkhardts certainly found an amusing and practical way to house stereo and taping equipment. No wife, including Joan, is crazy about having a lot of loops and wires and wheels and discs (par for the course in most sound systems) draped all over the living room. It's not only messy but also makes an otherwise attractive room look rather like a strategic command center. Anyway, the Burkhardts solved the problem when they found a wonderful old 1915 mahogany "His Master's Voice" standing Victrola. They put it in a corner of the living room and Bill took out the old turntable and speaker and all the little shelves that held records in the bottom half. He put a modern turntable in the top, the amplifiers in the midsection, and the tape deck in the bottom half. The two stereo speakers are quite unobtrusive on the floor under tables. Caruso would never recognize himself.

I'm always pleased when I find a useful object that's not only pretty but also very versatile. Yesterday, I was in my favorite kitchen shop and noticed a clear glass mold—round and sort of swirly with a hole in the middle. In fact, that's just what it is—a handblown import that's a little more than a mold. It's ovenproof so you can bake in it, too, and I can certainly see it making a very pretty centerpiece holding fruit with a small bouquet tucked in the hole in the middle. It comes in two sizes.

With two of the children away at school and most of the family scattered all over the country, we seem to do a lot of package wrapping. In fact, we have an old picnic table in the basement with a roll of brown paper fastened to it and a ball of twine on a nearby hook. We also have a commercial brown paper tape dispenser with a compartment for water that theo-

Paint applicator for masonry

Designed specifically for painting concrete block, cement, brick, and stucco, this paint applicator has long, tough fibers in the pad that stand up to rough textures of cement, brick, and stucco and the uneven porous surface of concrete block and its recessed joints. The Red Devil's pad insures even coverage and can be quickly changed for different color paint jobs. Extension handles fit the applicator for hard to reach areas. $5.95 at hardware, paint, and department stores.

Lubricating paint

A graphite product protects against rust and abrasion on garage door tracks, sticking windows, door hinges, latches, and other moving parts to insure easy operation. For wood, plastic, or metal surfaces, it won't rub off or attract dirt and dust as oil does; heat, cold, pressure, or corrosion won't affect it. Sprayed on garden tools, bicycle or motorcycle chains, barbecue parts, snow blowers, boats, Slip-Plate is both lubricant and rust preventive. A 14-ounce aerosol can is $2.99 at paint and hardware stores, $3.99 from Superior Graphite Co., 20 N. Wacker Drive, Chicago, Ill. 60606, including postage and handling.

Smoke detector fire alarm

The first whiff of smoke sets off a loud, shrill horn blast. A sensitive photoconductive cell registers the presence of smoke and activates the alarm. Wall or ceiling mounted, the off-white Scout unit is 3½ inches wide, 5½ inches high, 1⅜ inches thick. It plugs into a 110-120 volt AC electrical outlet for a single installation, or can be wired singly or for multiple installations. A red power light indicates the unit is on, the alarm sounds until smoke clears or you pull an off switch. Solid state, it is listed by Underwriters Laboratories and has a one year warranty. $43 from Edwards Co., Inc., Norwalk, Conn. 06856. ■

Health & Comfort

Impressive statistics reflect a growing nation-wide interest in health and body consciousness:

The International College of Applied Nutrition has quadrupled membership in the last four years. Some of these eminent MDs advised Senator Richard Schweiker on his bill to direct $50 million toward improving nutrition education in the medical colleges.

Now about 40 million adult Americans—1 in every 2 households—take a daily vitamin. Vitamin Information Bureau's executive director John Wright remarks: "The health food and vitamin industry has grown to a $300 million a year business."

This year, the National Nutritional Food Association registers 4,000 health food stores across the country. Spokesman Dr. Arnold Pike, host and producer of TV's "Viewpoint on Nutrition," confirms: "Health food shoppers are no longer labeled cranks. The ecology movement has changed public awareness. People want to know what is junk food and what is not."

Dr. Laurence Morehouse's book Total Fitness, forecast to sell 250,000 copies by year's end, jumped to the best-seller list two weeks after publication last March and is still on the list as we go to press. (More on him, page 52.)

A recent Gallup Poll showed that 30 million American households now have vegetable gardens. Vegetable seed sales jumped 40 percent last year.

Dr. Timothy Johnson's TV program "Housecall" draws 160,000 viewers weekly, holding its own, on prime time, against national network shows, on Boston's WCVB TV channel 5. One of his health dramatizations on heart disease won an Emmy nomination, was booked by ten major markets. (No wonder McGraw-Hill anticipates success for his new book, Doctor!, just out.)

73 percent of House & Garden readers answering our February questionnaire on weekend living use the weekend to relax and unwind and pursue healthy activities. 60 percent do sports, 59 percent garden, 61 percent entertain more on weekends.

HEALTH and COMFORT go together. Physical fitness makes you feel better. Physical comforts increase your sensation of well being. This issue is devoted to both subjects. Turn the pages for some exhilarating news and discoveries.

HOW SOME FAMOUS AND VERY ACTIVE PEOPLE EAT TO START THE DAY

At home, tennis pro Chris Evert eats a piece of melon walking from room to room. When she's playing, it's an energy giving cheese omelette and a melon slice; no tea or coffee. Jimmy Connors's breakfast varies with his tournament schedule, too. When he's playing he just has a glass or two of orange juice, cereal, 2 scrambled eggs.

Opera diva Leontyne Price eats half a grapefruit with a medium rare beef pattie and 1 Carr's water biscuit for a 10 o'clock breakfast that carries her through until dinner; with it, black coffee.

Rudolf Nureyev drinks 2 pots of tea plus a large glass of orange juice and occasionally eats toast and an egg.

Paul Newman drinks orange juice and coffee as do Alan King and Margot Fonteyn. For Ann-Margret, nothing, and for Alfred Hitchcock a cup of Sanka.

Light breakfasters, Gregory Peck and his wife Veronique like at least three fruits, preferably mangoes, papayas, cranshaw melons, or pink grapefruit. They pluck a lime from their own tree to squeeze on everything. They drink Lipton's tea made with Sparklettes water plus honey and a lime slice.

Gayelord Hauser, in his prime at eighty, breakfasts most mornings on half a papaya, café au lait with no sugar, 2 soft-boiled eggs, a slice of whole-wheat toast with sunflower butter (his blend of butter and sunflower oil) and honey. Sometimes he chooses his "Lifesaver" breakfast, a favorite with Greta Garbo, too. In a blender whiz a cup of orange juice with 1 tablespoon each of lecithin, fine bone meal, brewer's yeast, and wheat germ. Then add a tablespoon of sunflower or sesame oil.

"Breakfast should give you one fourth to one third of your daily protein and calories, plus some of the other essential nutrients"

A fresh pear starts the day for director Billy Wilder and wife Audrey. A great cook, Mrs. Wilder likes to make shirred eggs in ramekins for breakfast and serves them with chorizos, diced cream cheese, and cilantro. With this, buttered pumpernickel, coffee.

Fred Astaire when he's home has a boiled or scrambled egg, buttered toast, and orange juice and later in the morning, perhaps coffee.

Always on-the-go, Bob Hope likes orange juice and stewed fruit to start the day; drinks Kava and milk.

HOW VERY ACTIVE PEOPLE START THE DAY continued

"After the teen-age years, adults should cut down on eggs and bacon," maintains Harvard's Dr. Jean Mayer who chooses instead whole-wheat toast with cheese or a whole-grain cereal. He drinks lots of orange juice and tea with milk. For those who can't face breakfast, Dr. Mayer suggests a mid-morning peanut butter sandwich.

Photographer Horst eats a boiled egg with the yolk just starting to set, sprouted rye toast, orange marmalade, and black coffee.

Billy Jean King makes herself ham and 2 eggs with whole-wheat toast, and sometimes drinks coffee or milk. A lettuce salad, two poached eggs, and a glass of orange juice is heavyweight champion Mohammed Ali's lightweight breakfast.

A health salad for breakfast is a favorite with Truman Capote who might serve it for a morning party, too. He likes shaved carrots, artichoke hearts, and asparagus tips tossed with a mixture of yoghurt and bouillon.

A quarter papaya, a half grapefruit, or a baked apple and 2 tablespoons of diet cottage cheese is Helen Corbitt's weekday breakfast. Miss Corbitt (food consultant to The Greenhouse spa) poaches cored apples in water with Sweet 'n Low until soft; sprinkles with sugar and juice, pops into hot oven 5 minutes. "Sundays I splurge and have an omelette with 1 egg and 2 whites for extra protein," says Miss Corbitt who perks it up with chopped chives, green onions, or fresh mushrooms.

"The average person burns about 3000 calories a day. About 800 are used up during 8 hours of sleep"

"If I don't have a big breakfast I fall apart in a few hours," says super model Lauren Hutton who gets up early for freshly squeezed orange juice, lox, bagel and cream cheese, tea. She sometimes concocts her own cereal from a bowl of Total by adding granola, dates, raisins, nuts, and soybean lecithin.

"It's always a battle of the bulge with us," says Julia Child explaining her low-calorie breakfast with husband Paul. "We drink one of our 8 Chinese teas and eat fresh fruit—apples, oranges, melons, whatever is in season. We also like hand-squeezed orange juice with some oil from the rind." On Sundays the Childs have a special bacon and egg breakfast, toast and rolls, sometimes scrapple.

"I have the same breakfast each morning," says actress Karen Black. It's half a grapefruit followed by Uncle Sam's cereal with cream and sliced strawberries or bananas followed by a four-minute egg with salt; tea with lemon.

When tennis star Arthur Ashe is playing in a hot climate, he'll eat "runny" scrambled eggs and potatoes, preferably boiled. He drinks orange juice and milk plus two "super duper" vitamin pills. When he's not playing he feasts on pancakes and waffles.

One half grapefruit, 1 poached egg, and a slice of bacon is the breakfast ritual for Mary Tyler Moore. Angie Dickinson sips a glass of distilled Arrowhead water with her vitamins.

Pearl Bailey eats oatmeal, drinks coffee. Nancy Ruwe, social secretary to Mrs. Gerald Ford, likes to zip up her orange juice in the blender with a banana and powdered milk.

Breakfast for House & Garden's nutrition consultant Eloise R. Trescher always starts with fruit; "I prefer solid food to fill me up, juice just trickles through." Then in summer cold cereal (Product 19 or Shredded Wheat) with the equivalent of 1 pint of skim milk (powdered milk at double strength) and berries, bananas, or sliced apple. Mrs. Trescher might have instead whole-wheat toast spread with cottage cheese and topped with raspberries or strawberries. In winter, oatmeal sprinkled with Sweet 'n Low plus the concentrated milk or a slice of whole-wheat toast topped with shredded cheese and a poached egg.

"During sleep, the body's cells repair themselves twice as fast as during waking hours"

Tomato juice with a squeeze of lemon is breakfast for dancer Paula Kelly plus coffee with a good chunk of honey in it and milk.

HOW TO BUY A MATTRESS that's just right for you, plus some advice from an orthopedist on how to sleep on it Fastening the innersprings: Special systems compensate for sag, regulate firmness, adjust mattress response. Here, each spring has a case. By Simmons.

Innerspring? Foam? Water bed? Or something else? More than 80 percent of mattresses sold are innerspring. The complex sandwich of springs and padding is put together thus: first a core of 300 to 900 steel springs to give the mattress firmness. The heavier the spring, the firmer the mattress. Then a layer of tough insulation to separate padding and springs. Then one or more layers of upholstery, usually cotton felt or polyester foam (to smooth the surface, provide resiliency, comply with government inflammability regulations). Horsehair, used in a few mattresses, is soft, allows good air circulation. On top, ticking usually quilted. Foam mattresses are light, adaptable, nonallergenic, can be made to any required firmness. Polyurethane foam may last only about five years, but a new synthetic foam, carbamate, has many of the advantages of hard-to-get latex. Most waterbeds now come with safety liners and heaters. Because they support without pressure, some hospitals use them for long-term patients. You can expect to pay from $100 to $500 for a mattress. "Extra firm" and "super firm" merely mean the mattress is harder than the manufacturer's "firm" model. Many manufacturers offer brochures full of mattress-buying information. For addresses, see page 131.

Don't Do

TED HARDIN

Don't just push and prod when you test a mattress. Lie down on it, with your bed partner. Stretch out. Relax.

Dos and Don'ts of Mattress Buying and Care

Do think of yourself first. Are you a restless sleeper? Quiet? Bad Back? A spouse who's half (or twice) your weight? Do hunt until you find a mattress that fits. Don't be a Spartan: "firm" can be too firm; "full size" means only 27 inches each for two people. Don't fall for a pretty pattern on the ticking, but Do look for lots of quilting. Do buy mattress and box spring together. They're built to cooperate. Do inspect the warranty. New federal regulations state that it must spell out details in plain language. Materials and workmanship may be warrantied from one to fifteen years—longer in the better mattresses. Do lie down. Do break it in right. For its first six months turn it monthly, end for end, top to bottom; after that twice a year. Use a mattress pad. Air it monthly with the windows open if you can and vacuum it with the upholstery attachment to keep down house dust mites (yes, mites). With good care, you can expect at least ten years service from a good mattress. How to tell when you need a new one? When you start to wonder if you need a bed board. When sleep just isn't what it once was.

Too hard: A wavy spine won't let muscles rest. Just right: A straight spine unwinds.

Beds and your nose: What the allergist says

If you have headaches and you snore and wheeze and it gets worse at night and you have dark circles under your eyes even when you're rested and you were a colicky baby, you may be one of the 15 to 20 percent of everybody who's allergic, says Dr. Claude A. Frazier, allergist and author of Parents' Guide to Allergy in Children. Bed and bedding need special attention for those with housedust, feather, mold, or fiber allergies. Avoid tufted mattresses. Prevent dust with rigorous vacuuming, even inside box springs. Use well-washed bedclothes. Wrap everything in protective covers (available from Allergen Proof Encasings, 3 Park

BEDS AND BONES: WHAT THE ORTHOPEDIST SAYS

"A healthy individual can sleep on anything," says Dr. Robert G. The mattress should be very firm, no more than 5 percent of the body sinking into it, with extra support where the pelvis rests (an orthopedist will prescribe the proper kind and size for your problem). You know the feeling—climbing into bed after a long day, looking forward to putting your head on the pillow and drifting off into a wonderful, deep, long, soothing sleep, and instead lying there with your head in a whirl, your body tense, waiting in vain for the gift of sleep to come.

Well, you cannot buy sleep. You cannot coax it, cajole it, even trick it into casting its spell over you. But you can practice certain routines that may bring sleep a little closer to you—routines that doctors in Sleep Laboratories in Boston, Philadelphia, and New York have discovered can really help you fall asleep. Some of their suggestions are completely new ideas—others are old wives' tales with a new twist. But one of them might just work on you that sleep-inducing magic everyone longs for.

Relaxation

"The basic reason many people can't sleep is some type of muscle tension," says David Davis, director of a private sleep laboratory in New York City and consultant to Mount Sinai Hospital. "The first sign of anxiety, hostility, or fight-or-flight, right from primitive times, is expressed in your facial, neck, and jaw muscles. Next time you become tense or hostile, notice how it first manifests itself—you clench your teeth and tighten your jaw muscles. You'd be surprised how many people try to go to sleep at night like this.

"When you go to bed, to relax, let your jaw hang down." Unclench your jaw, consciously, and fall asleep. (Notice how people who fall asleep sitting up often end up with their mouths hanging open—utterly relaxed.) The key to breaking the muscle tension that stops you sleeping is relaxing the muscles.

Sleep-food

You have probably heard that a hearty meal makes you drowsy because the blood leaves your head and goes to the stomach to help digestion. Well, that's completely false, according to Dr. Ernest Hartmann, Director of the Sleep and Dream Laboratory, Boston State Hospital, and Professor of Psychiatry, Tufts University School of Medicine. He, and many of his colleagues, believe this drowsiness is actually caused by an amino acid, L-tryptophan, in foods such as meat, cheese, milk, and eggs. It's in everybody's diet to some degree, and most people take 1-2 grams of it every day. When L-tryptophan is taken into the body, it is converted into serotonin, a brain chemical that effects sleep. (It appears to be the ratio of L-tryptophan to other amino acids that creates this effect.)

"A high-protein meal of meat, cheese, or eggs—and a glass of m —contain enough L-tryptoph pure form to get you to fall as says Dr. Hartmann. "The source of L-tryptophan is t meat—that may be why people to fall asleep after Thanksg dinner! In our studies we found a dose of 1 gram of L-trypto will cut down the time it tak fall asleep from twenty to ten utes in our laboratory condi Of course, we isolated it and it in its pure form—in food it petes with other amino acids one hopes that one day it can l fered as a sleep inducer at your store. Its great advantage is tha only do you get to sleep soone you do so without the distortio sleep patterns that are produce most sleeping pills. For now, a protein meal or snack before yo to bed may help induce sleep."

Bedtime drink

Warm milk—from what has said about L-tryptophan, it is that milk, which contains L-try phan, is a sleep inducer. Warm also has a soothing effect.

Camomile Tea—this has a tradition of being a relaxing soothing sedative drink. But scientific proof has rece emerged: Lawrence Gould, and colleagues, writing in the nal of Clinical Pharmacology,

So camomile ust be reckoned with as more ust a folk tale.

l—this is a central nervous sedative—"it puts the higher enter to sleep," explains Dr. Mendels, director of the Laboratory, Veterans Admin-n Hospital, Philadelphia, ofessor of Psychiatry, Univer-Pennsylvania. "It is a very edative and many people will small tot of something before go to bed; and while one want to recommend this as ne for everybody, it may be ernicious than some of the g medications people take."

Sounds

ms, such as the sounds on a ave a hypnotic effect and are sleep," says Dr. Mendels. "It nonotony of it—anything mo-us is sleep-inducing. you can find a monotonous r rhythm to play at night, this ell help you."

ther recent sound discovery was made by an obstetrician at Tokyo's Nippon Medical College. To calm babies in order to examine them, he placed a tiny microphone inside the uterus of several pregnant women and recorded their internal body sounds. When he played back the amplified sounds to groups of screaming infants, almost every single one stopped crying and then dropped off to sleep! The sounds have now been produced in Japan by Toshiba-EMI on a record and cassette, entitled "Lullaby Inside Mum"—a great success with new parents to get babies to go to sleep! (Capitol Records will release it in this country this summer.)

Exercise

"For most people who are in good health, if you go out and exercise to the point once a day or once every other day where you can raise your heart beat to over 160-180 and work up a good sweat, you'll find that within a few days you'll need less sleep and you'll sleep better," declares Mr. Davis. "This is not to say that every night just before you go to bed you should run around the park. The exercise should be in the morning or early evening, or whenever it's convenient during the day."

Beds and pillows

Beds are a question of personal taste—there is no rule about them. "What you must do is find what is most comfortable for you," says Dr. Mendels. "The most important thing in bed is not to toss and turn. If you are restless, sit up, turn the light on, and read for a while, or get up and do something else. Tossing and turning tends to aggravate the cycle of not sleeping—you become more tense and make the situation worse."

Mr. Davis suggests that if you are not sleeping, take away your pillow. "Taking away your pillow may help you relax your neck muscles." Relaxing your neck is the crucial part, however you do it. The Japanese, for instance, sleep on wood block pillows, which may be their way of relaxing their necks.

Napping

There are people who can nap for just a few minutes and wake up feeling rejuvenated. Other people nap and wake up feeling terrible. "The best explanation for this is that we have an inherent rhythm in our make-up. We have a cycle of REM or nonREM sleep, each occurring every ninety minutes or so. Now it seems this cycle not only occurs at night but also during the day—for the full twenty-four hours in fact. Look at the average office routine: One comes to work at 8:30 or 9, an hour and a half later he stops for a coffee break. Then he goes back to work and another hour and a half it's lunchtime. He comes back and at 3 o'clock there's another break. Without knowing what we are doing, we have organized our lives to a rhythm. (Jet lag is a perfect example of what happens when that rhythm is disturbed.)

"If you have a nap at the right point in your cycle, then it is very refreshing. If you wake up at the wrong phase in the rhythm, you feel terrible. If you do wake up at the wrong time, all you have to do is go back to sleep to finish the cycle."

Sleeping pills

The last resort. Every doctor consulted agreed on the imperfections of sleeping pills. What many regularly prescribed sleeping pills do is disrupt your cycle of sleep, so that your REM sleep is often reduced considerably. The effect of this is that when you stop taking the pills, you get what doctors call

HOW PEOPLE ON THE GO GO TO SLEEP

Carol Burnett needs eight hours of sleep. But she also needs old movies. She calls it work—ideas for take-offs in television skits—but watching them from her king-sized bed is her favorite relaxation. If the Late Late Show is a great 30s or 40s classic, she just sleeps late in the morning.

Mary Tyler Moore is organized. In bed about 11, up in the morning by 7 or 7:30. "I never start a nap," she says, "because I want a full, solid night's sleep and, for me, naps interrupt the pattern." A hard mattress, one very thin hard pillow.

Frank McCarthy, major general, producer of "Patton," can do with four hours of sleep but likes eight, "from midnight to 8 A.M., when nothing much is going on. I never take naps in the daytime. I'm afraid I might miss news, or something with friends." He wears a sweatshirt to bed, to pamper his bursitis.

"Breakfast in bed is solitude," says actress Gena Rowlands. Her husband, John Cassavetes, is a very early riser. The children go to school, and there she is, with black coffee, fruit, and the paper.

Actress Karen Black sleeps whenever she possibly can, all day on days off. "I need more than I can ever get, and I've gradually developed an ability to sleep at will. Two pillows. One is under my head, the other protects my knees."

William Frye, who produced "Airport '75," needs nine hours sleep. What he can't get at night he makes up in after-lunch naps on weekends.

"Great men must suffer, so you might as well join them," says Cousin Brucie Morrow, who as a front-rank ABC disk jockey is almost a professional insomniac. His mattress sags (his wife has the bedboard). But thinking about tomorrow puts him to sleep. In five hours he wakes without an alarm.

"How do I sleep? With difficulty," says Jane Howard, author of A Different Woman. "You know, Gilbert and Sullivan, 'Repose is taboo with anxiety.' Beer. That's a sedative. I was once going to write a book with a friend, to be called I'll Sleep on That, an anthology of worthwhile things to read in bed. Like the Metallurgy Journal. I'd like to know some tricks for staying asleep. I wake up before I want to."

Catfish Hunter is a farmer when he isn't playing baseball for the Yankees. Whatever the season he gets enough physical exercise that sleep is never a problem for him. He likes a hard bed though he's never changed a hotel room because of the mattress, rises early in the off-season to do all his own chores on his 110 acre farm in North Carolina.

"I can't go right to bed when I come home from work," says Clive Barnes, dance and drama critic for the New York Times. "I read, or watch late night TV. I've got a curious sleep pattern—I have to turn on my left side first, but I can only sleep on my right. I don't get a great deal of sleep, five or six hours. I don't

Milk for a real lift.
Milk for a liquid lullaby.
Milk contains over 100 nutritional elements.
Are you drinking as much of this wonder-working food as you should?

By Eloise R. Trescher, R.D.

energizing, tranquilizing Milk

There is a bumper sticker I've seen recently that reads—"Only love beats milk." It is usually a mother's love that supplies or starts a baby drinking milk. From the beginning of time man has subsisted on the food that his particular environment provides. Throughout the world, milk has been the food for infants and baby animals, given by their mothers. Yet only for the very young is milk a "perfect food." Early in life diet must be supplemented by other foods to furnish iron and vitamin C (ascorbic acid), two vital nutritional constituents in which milk is low. Breast fed infants need a supplement of vitamin D as well. How early depends upon your pediatrician. Many commercial infant formulas contain all necessary nutrients.

Why is milk so important? Although it is not a perfect food, it more nearly fulfills that definition than any other. And the most significant contribution of milk to the diet is calcium. There is more calcium in the body than any other mineral. Approximately 99 percent of this is concentrated in the bones and teeth while the remainder is in the blood and other tissues essential to our well being.

We need a generous supply of calcium every day to maintain bones and teeth, to help blood coagulate, to regulate heart beat, and to aid in the proper functioning of other muscles and nerves. If you're upset, try drinking a glass of milk. It's a liquid lullaby, with a calming effect for many people. The protein of milk is of the highest quality. It contains all of the essential amino acids necessary to build, repair, and maintain body tissues, to fight against infection by forming antibodies, and to make hemoglobin, which transports oxygen to the cells throughout the body and carries away carbon dioxide. Milk contains well over 100 nutritional elements, each making a valuable contribution to our diets.

Each of the foods in the following list contributes essentially the same amount of calcium but vary widely in their protein and calorie content. For the most part, this is derived from Home & Garden Bulletin No. 72, published by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Many milks today are reinforced with vitamins A and D. Vitamin A, some of it in the form of carotene, gives whole milk its creamy color. However, the amount of carotene in milk varies from season to season depending upon the animal feed. And so vitamin A is added to many milks to insure a dependable source of this vitamin throughout the year.

Vitamin D, so important for calcium utilization, is provided largely by the sun and fish liver oils. To make sure there is enough vitamin D in milk 85 percent or more of all milks are fortified with 400 units of vitamin D per quart. This is the amount recommended by the Food and Nutrition Board of the National Research Council, and endorsed by the Council on Foods and Nutrition of the American Medical Association, and the American Academy of Pediatrics.

Just how much milk is recommended daily

The U.S. Department of Agriculture suggests the following amounts in its booklet Family Fare, Home & Garden Bulletin, No. 1.

Children under 9	2 to 3 8 oz. cups
Children 9 to 12	3 or more
Teenagers	4 or more
Adults	2 or more
Pregnant women	3 or more
Nursing mothers	4 or more

Easy-to-serve food for easy weekend parties—lunch outdoors, one really interesting main dish rolls to the table on a cart

BEADLE

"Look after small details and the party takes care of itself. For hot food, plates must be really hot. For cold, they should be absolutely cold"

Drinks on the lower porch, dinner on the upper porch, overlooking the lake; dancing later. This is the kind of weekend party Mr. and Mrs. Ben Wyker like to arrange for friends at their house in the Adirondacks. Mrs. Wyker—well known, as Judith Garden, for her talent with flowers—is equally gifted at entertaining. "I plan parties out on paper. This might take only two or three hours, but I spend the next two or three days checking it over. Notes contain everything, right down to the plates on which food is served. Certain dishes say summer more than others, like salmon mousse with cucumber salad. Sometimes we start with crabmeat in a chafing dish with drinks. Chicken Kiev, potato puffs, salad. For dessert we might have grape brulée, English fruit trifle, or raspberries and cream." Recipes page 85.

Breakfast in bed is all-American pancakes, fresh strawberries, butter maple syrup. Then there is an English picnic, set on bright napkin squares on the grass. Finally a delicious kitchen supper, with a switch of cuisine to zesty Italian food and hot home-made bread. Guests are to be pampered at the house of David and Wendy Steavenson. Says the hostess: "I like to do something special for friends. I've got the right kind—the same treatment comes back to me!" It's all done without fuss, or extra help. "Just highly organized, well ahead of time. If everything is chopped, washed, bagged, and put away before guests arrive, you can still enjoy the party." All fruit and vegetables come from the garden. Carefree vegetable garden planted in walk-in wire box where crops are safe from raccoons and other hungry wildlife PLAN: 1. Tomatoes tied to mesh sides on southern end of enclosure, and to wires strung between inner posts not shaded by corn. Varieties: Early Girl, VF, Sunray. 2. English broad beans, also called fava. 3. Broccoli, some collard greens. 4. Corn, the most important crop: Early Golden Giant, Honey and Cream, Golden Cross Bantam. 5. Spinach, bush beans later. 6. Leeks. 7. Kohlrabi. 8. Radishes, lettuce, endive, peppers. This wire garden is designed to last at least 30 years and withstand heavy snows. Cedar posts are 4-by-4 inches, 8-feet tall. Rafters are double 2-by-4s braced in a T form. The vinyl-covered mesh has 2-inch holes because smaller holes hold snow. All wood is stained with protective Cuprinol.

Those small black-masked bandits of suburb and countryside, raccoons, inspired the architecture of this garden —they and the woodchucks, rabbits, birds, and even horses that used to bound through vegetable rows planted in this green meadow in Connecticut. Fed up but not fed well, this gardener decided to solve the problem by fencing not only the sides but the top. To foil burrowers, wire also runs 18-inches down into the ground. In essence the idea is a big wire box. Similar success could be had on a small scale by putting wire-frame boxes over blueberry bushes or strawberry rows just before harvest time. (If you are new at gardening and don't know when berries are about to reach perfection, a little bird will tell you, probably with his mouth full.) Other garden defenses that sometimes work are netting, replicas of scary owls or hissing geese, moth balls or cayenne pepper scattered among the rows, or a custodian dog or cat. For a harvest to be worth fighting over, a gardener must first work for good soil and good crops. This garden has been enriched with 2 inches of compost and 2 inches of manure every fall. In spring the soil is turned with a Rototiller, with a reverse gear for sharp corners. Seeds are planted and additional boosts of 5-10-5 fertilizer soon help to produce a succession of bumper crops.

Below: 50-by-80-foot wire enclosure has two gates that lock and are wide enough for tiller and wheelbarrows.

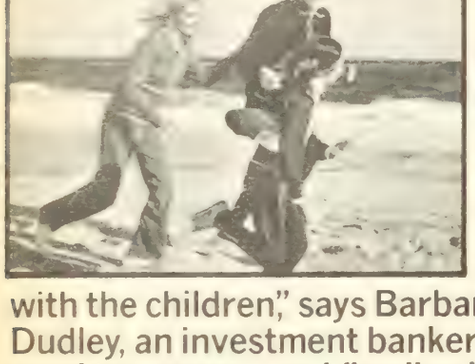
Unwind

People spend their days of freedom in very different ways depending on their tastes and temperament. For those who live in a rural area, the city can add spice and movement. Some seek adventure. Others need simply quiet and fresh air.

Change-of-pace ideas from families who've found interesting ways to unwind and refuel

By Françoise Sciaky



We like our weekends to be full of exercise, plenty of sleep, and lots of time with the children," says Barbara Cates. She, her husband Dudley, an investment banker, and their three children aged ten, seven, and five live in an apartment in Manhattan. In winter the family skis. They take off Friday evenings for the Catskills, where they rent a house in a club, "family-oriented, a couple of hours' drive from the city." As soon as the skiing season is over, they head for a Long Island beach on weekends. The emphasis is on swimming and tennis all day, with Saturday evenings geared to entertaining or going out. "We like to keep dinner parties small and casual," says Mrs. Cates. "Weekends are for relaxation and I try to simplify housekeeping as much as possible."

Maurice Abravanel, a genial 6-footer and his diminutive wife, Lucie, live in Salt Lake City. Mr. Abravanel is the conductor of the Utah Symphony Orchestra.

"I get up every day at six and Saturdays and Sundays are no exception," he says. "We tour a great deal and those traveling weekends are full working days. Even when we stay in Salt Lake City, I work on Saturdays," he continues. "An orchestra is a six-day week.

"On Sundays, we relax, even though I still get up at that 'impossible' hour. I walk around the house on tiptoe, close the doors softly so as not to awaken my dear wife, and read the paper."

"Because a getaway weekend is so rare, it is very precious —I want to be out of doors, away from the telephone"

After breakfast, the Abravanels drive up to the mountains. Snow Bird is a favorite resort of theirs. "We take the gondola and look at the view and skiers. That's our exercise," says Mrs. Abravanel. "Then we have lunch on top in a little inn. This excursion constitutes a complete change of pace for Maurice. He needs it. Early in the afternoon, we come back to the city."

Once at home, just like every other day of the week, Mr. Abravanel takes a nap in his studio, located in the basement of their one-story house. "He has never wanted to move because he loves that room," explains his wife. The conductor's kingdom houses his musical scores, a big table to lay them out on, the piano, records and recordings, and the hi-fi set. "Everything there is in terrible disorder," she says. "The closets and shelves are empty and what is meant to be in them is on the floor."

On Sunday evening, they sometimes go to a movie, or go to see friends—or have them over for dinner. "Sunday nights are good for entertaining, because we're rested.

"Everything here takes place early. People come at around 6 for drinks. I find twelve guests a good number, because I can seat everyone around one big table. After dinner, I serve coffee, tea and mint tea. These relaxed Sunday parties are different from the frequent last-minute affairs I have to put together for musicians who come on a sudden visit and who arrive here exhausted after evening rehearsals or concerts."

Reeve and Georgie Schley and their two small children live on a farm in New Jersey. Reeve designed their wood frame and glass house and Georgie painted it. The Schleys do not relax weekends: On the contrary, Reeve, a landscape, portrait, and still-life painter and Georgie, who organizes the family's life to fit Reeve's professional needs, work and entertain for business purposes on Saturday and Sunday.

"That's when people who buy paintings and who are potential buyers are free," says Reeve, a burly, freckled redhead, who wears fine, unrimmed glasses. "If I'm doing a portrait, the person comes to my studio, which is just across the brook from the house." If the subject is a child, Georgie, a brown-eyed ash blonde, who has stamina for two, entertains the parents and gets a meal going "so that everybody," she says, "will have something to do when Reeve has finished or is taking a break. One recent weekend, we had two luncheons and two dinners, all having to do (Continued on page 133)

Relax

20 minutes of meditation to feel great every day

A technique you can teach yourself, outlined by Dr. Herbert Benson, that can reduce stress, beat high blood pressure, help maintain a healthy he

Interview by Beverly Russ

EDITOR'S NOTE: Beverly Russell has be following the work of Dr. Herbert Ben and his colleagues at Harvard Medical School for the last three years. Investig tions that started out by measuring hyp tension and heart disease led to the disc of an important physiological reaction, which Dr. Benson has named the relax response. Papers have been written on t response and published by significant pu cations including Scientific American, Psychosomatic Medicine, Psychiatry, Harvard Business Review, and the Wall Street Journal. This November, Dr. Ben book The Relaxation Response, a comp summary of all his work, will be publish by William Morrow.

We all know why we should relax, to reduce stress, beat high blood pressure, the bane of our fast-paced society, and maintain a healthy heart. But how to do it successfully is sometimes another matter. ay we may feel the need for something e than a good night's sleep to keep a calm ıe of mind, and the body and nerves free ı knots and tension. Searching for alter- means of relaxation, Dr. Herbert Benson, ırvard Medical School Professor and car- ogist, Director, Hypertension Section, ı Israel Hospital, Boston, and a team of archers, have investigated mental tech- ıes. And they've discovered some very resting facts.

tudies show that the human being possesses laxation response—a mental tool that can ısed effectively to soothe and pacify nerves muscles and generate a comfortable feel- of serenity. In fact, it's a refreshing pause ny time, no matter how you feel! To turn this relaxation response, all you need to n is an easy formula for putting your d to rest:

A comfortable position
Sit in a comfortable chair.

2
A quiet environment
ɔose a quiet room away from interruptions and noise.

A mental device
n off everyday thoughts by closing the s and focusing either on an object (in the d's eye), such as a flower, a place, or a son that makes you happy. Or repeat a d you like the sound of over and over.

A passive attitude
cipline yourself to reject ordinary thoughts hey come up by concentrating on the object or word.

5
this routine daily—ideally twice a day—for twenty minutes each time.

t all sounds so simple. Why haven't we n doing it before? We have known about insists Dr. Benson. "Techniques have sted for centuries for this type of relaxa- ı. There is a repetitive verbal sound in yer especially in the Catholic religion. And Jewish religion has a similar type of yer. In our investigations in the laboratory have found that such prayers elicit the axation response. They take you easily ɔ the meditative state, or an altered state consciousness. Many of these useful pray- have been neglected."

What actually happens in the meditative state or wakeful rest as it is also called, that produces complete relaxation? Oxygen consumption decreases—"in three or four minutes of meditation you are down to levels that would take four to six hours to reach through sleep," says Dr. Benson—respiratory and heart rates decrease. What these physiological changes add up to is a marked state of decreased sympathetic nervous system activity. In other words, significant bodily relaxation is triggered off through brain reaction.

TED HARDIN

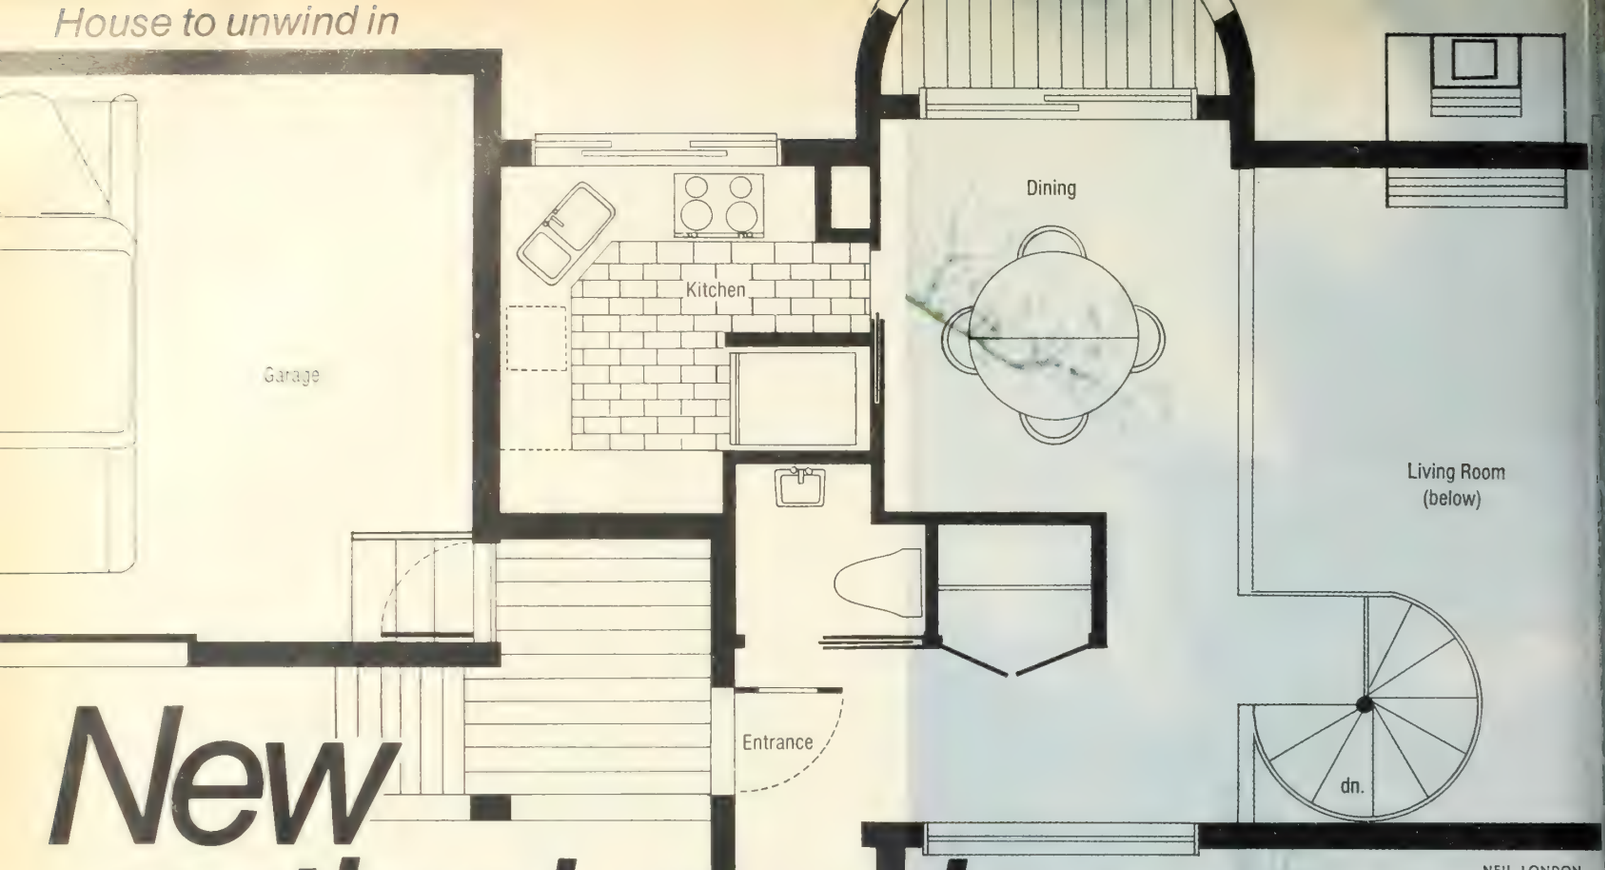
Dr. Benson in the laboratory. Subject using his relaxation technique is wired up to machine, which measures body metabolism.

Now there are different methods of mental relaxation offered by a variety of groups in America today. These methods include Yoga, transcendental meditation (TM), Zen, biofeedback, sentic cycles, self-hypnosis, mind control, Arica, Kundalini. In Dr. Benson's opinion these mental-training groups have all developed a means to a similar end. They are merely offering different ways of training the mind to turn on the relaxation response. If you take up TM—as apparently 450,000 Americans have already done—you may be asked to go to several preliminary lectures, then an initiation ceremony, at which time you pay $120 and obtain a mantra, or word, which is yours personally and is used at home to guide you into the meditative state. A certain mystic quality surrounds TM because of the secrecy of the mantra. However, Dr. Benson concludes that any word repeated over and over will provide the same effect. "Breathe through your nose," he says, "become aware of your breathing. As you breathe out, say the word 'one' silently to yourself. With practice, the relaxation response should come with little effort." If you don't like the word "one" you could substitute "love" or anything else that suits your fancy, adds Dr. Benson. It will have the same result.

Dr. Benson stumbled on mental relaxation first of all by studying hypertension, which causes high blood pressure and heart disease. "We found we could train animals to increase blood pressure and to lower it. While these studies were underway some young people came to me and claimed they, too, had control over their blood pressure and wished to be studied. They practiced TM. I was rather skeptical at first, but at any rate we studied these individuals. Our findings led us to measure other methods of mental relaxation." It is Dr. Benson's conclusion that all these methods of deep, conscious relaxation can only have therapeutic benefit and help us cope with our environment and avoid taking the toll in terms of high blood pressure, strokes, and other hazards.

Apart from feeling more relaxed and less knotted up, people using this mental tool describe other benefits, too—increased clarity of mind, increased productivity in their daily lives. "Many claim to lose their neurotic tendencies and say they are better able to cope, that they decrease their dependency on alcohol, sleeping pills, and other drugs and even cut down on smoking," adds Dr. Benson. "In no way is meditation a substitute for good sleep," he goes on, "but it is a distinct state, which is unique and separate from sleep."

It seems clear that we should all learn to make use of this remarkable asset. As Dr. Benson suggests: Why not take a daily relaxation-response break instead of a coffee break?



NEIL LONDON

New vertical house

on a vertical lo

With an adventurous, but practical design, the owners of this house made a steep two acres work as well as and seem as private as twenty

The family who own this house bought a steeply sloped, rocky piece of ground with frontage on a pond, shared with three other families. The plus of summer swimming and winter skating compensated for lack of land. And the challenge of building (both husband, William Rosenfeld of Rosenfeld, Harvey, Morse, and wife, Serpil, are architects) was pure pleasure. First requirement was low maintenance—hence unstained cedar walls and a lead-coated copper roof. They also wanted low energy bills—which led them to research and install a $2500 electric heat-exchanger system for heating and air conditioning "much cheaper than putting in a furnace and less expensive to operate and maintain." Last year's total running costs (including lighting and heat for cooking) were a mere $550. Other ideas thoughtfully incorporated into the design plan: parents' bedroom and bath on the top, fourth floor ("we don't like children cruising through our room"), and the living room proper one level beneath the kitchen-dining area ("we're not people who live in the kitchen").

Appropriate architecture for a wooded, country glade, the cedar house, right, projects into trees. The curved "silo" contains spiral stairs to three levels. Entrance up steps to right of garage, provides a front door on the second level. Below left: Living room deck faces pond, sheltered master bedroom deck, at top, catches same view. Sloping roof and chimney delineate living room, below right.

ELLIOTT ERWITT

One big 2-level space for cooking, eating, living

For the Rosenfelds, relaxing in this house definitely has special meaning. They spent fifty-two weekends making it liveable, finishing off the building themselves, after initial foundation work, framing, and insulating was done. "We nailed up Sheetrock, painted walls, did all the built-ins ourselves. Serpil knows how to handle power tools just as well as I do," says Bill Rosenfeld. "But in the clouds of dust there were times when we wondered if we would ever sit back and unwind on the sofa." When inside was finished, they went outdoors, planting fruit trees and a vegetable garden—they care about quality food. More recently, in a joint venture with neighbors, fifteen hens have been added, to guarantee a supply of fresh eggs. Occasionally friends will weekend with them, for there is one guest room on the same floor as the girls' room. On these occasions, Serpil, born in Turkey, may put together a meal of Turkish hors d'oeuvres, delicious stuffed artichokes, cold bean salad, chicken with walnut sauce, which is eaten with raki, the Turkish equivalent of ouzo. To the children, the whole atmosphere of their country place resembles a tree house, an escape for fun and games, away from real life. In fact, they've already put forward a tantalizing suggestion: "Why don't we spend two days in the city and five in the country every week, instead of the other way around?"

A house to unwind in

New solar house draws warmth from sun into one big room where everyone gath

Even the snow cooperates to conserve energy in this house, and big insulated panels drop down to hold heat in the living room at night

To get away from it all, on a snow-covered mountaintop in Vermont wh the view rolls on for miles. To be truly independent, on your own, harmony with the elements. This solar-heated ski house comes as cl to that ideal as a house with modern comforts is likely to. The sun, s architect Robert F. Shannon of the People/Space Company in Bost provides half the heat and hot water. Walls are padded with extra insu tion, flat roof uses the blanketing snow to hold heat in. Even the firepla circulates hot air back into the room rather than up the chimney. reduces heating bills by half," says Mr. Shannon, "and yet I think t solar elements—400 square feet of collector, 320 square feet of reflecto only added about $1000 to the cost of building." The glass-faced bla aluminum collector panels were once printing plates. Three bedroo are downstairs to lift the living room windows further into the view. C ors are vacation-cheerful, and the furniture is leisure-time indestructib

1. The south-facing solar wall comes in four sections. House to unwind in

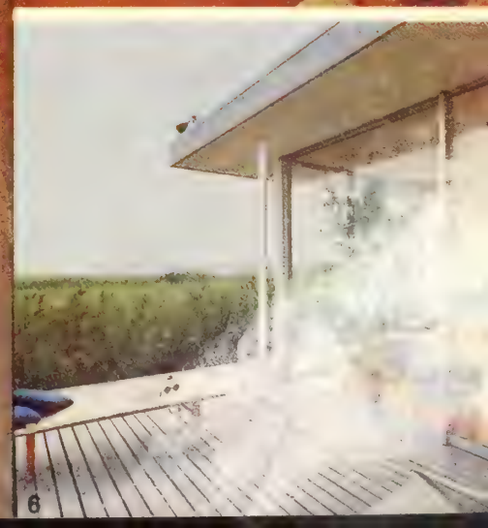
New easy-maintenance house wit a light-filled living center

With skylights overhead, and only glass to separate inside from out on two walls, the living-dining-entertaining room gives the feeling of always being outdoors

Skylights, shown by dotted lines, define two axes of house. Hall widens to accommodate laundry, heating facilities, and wall curves to contain fireplace and chimney, "and to bend the light," says Miss Carder. Curve is echoed in dining room cabinet wall. Den has built-in banquettes that pull out for guest beds, children's bedrooms have built-in bunk beds.



Glass walls barely intervene between an arm of the Atlantic Ocean and the living room where Mr. and Mrs. Colgan Schlank and their children spend their summer weekends. "It's a super feeling," she says, "like being outdoors all the time. You get up in the morning with birds and sunlight all around." The house imitates the skyline, long and lean. It turns its back on the public community—no windows on the inland-facing south side—and opens up inside for entertaining friends and neighbors. Skylights drop sun and shadow through the ceilings in living room, above, long hall, even over the baths, see plan, left. Every room, especially bathrooms where salt and sandy feet are washed off, has immediate access to the outside. Bedrooms are small, merely for sleeping. The sun sets over the vegetable garden, just outside kitchen and dining room windows. "Our big extravagance was glass, almost half the outside walls," says David Nahon, with Martha Carder architect for the house. "But since most of them face northeast there's little glare—and there's all that view." The house fits so well into its seascape that seagulls drop clamshells on its flat roof.

1. A curved cabinet wall separates living and dining rooms, allows friendly flow for parties. 2. Rooms are stepped back to give each its own door to the deck. 3. From front door, one sees straight through to Clam Cove, where the Schlanks fish. Trellis overhead courts shadows. Louvered door leads to bathroom anteroom, where there's a shower. House is built on pilings. 4. Doors to den, where a fireplace makes autumn evenings cozy, and living room. 5. A bed, table, mat, some bright colors, the master bedroom. 6. Sundeck blends with living room. For building facts see page 131.

"Keep big trees 'ventilated' by thinning and topping branches from time to time. Then the wind can blow through the tree a little more easily instead of knocking it down"

retically dampens the tape as you pull it out. It always seems to be in need of water and, as time goes on, the brush that does the wetting gets scummy and doesn't dampen evenly. Instead of the constant struggle, we now use 3M Package Sealing Tape. The 1½-inch width seems very practical and it's a package tape that always seals firmly on contact and meets government postal regulations—even for overseas shipping.

Last night's violent wind storm woke us up at three o'clock and made us wonder if we were having a hurricane. The trees bent and swayed outside and the windows shook so hard we were afraid they wouldn't hold. Then Tom remembered his sailing days and went about the house opening some windows on the east side of the house a few inches and a few on the west side as well. As the wind was blowing strongly from the east, this gave it a chance to blow through the house and may have saved the windows. Of course, open doors too between the east and west sides to maintain the cross ventilation in the house during a wind storm.

Another thing to remember: keep very big trees "ventilated" by keeping the branches thinned and topping them a little from time to time. Then the wind has a chance to blow through the tree a little more easily instead of knocking it down, particularly after a rainstorm when the ground is soft.

There's a new degreaser on the market called Grease Relief and we think it's terrific. In a sturdy red bottle with a trigger release, it's a spray-on liquid for any kind of grease problem in the laundry, kitchen, workshop, or in general cleaning. For the stove top, broiler pan, or greasy pots, spray it on directly and then rinse with hot water. Or add it to the dishwater to help cut the grease.

In the laundry, spray it directly on grease spots, collars, cuffs, and areas that often resist regular laundry soaps and detergents. And it's a great addition to the cleaner you use for washing walls and woodwork where there's bound to be a film of grease.

August, our favorite month for picnics and barbecues, always seems to be the month when the mosquito and ant populations peak. I was delighted to discover a new insecticide—Shell's Outdoor Fogger that kills and then repels (for up to four hours, according to the package) these unwelcome guests. Shell also makes House & Garden Insecticide, Flying Insect Spray, and Ant & Roach Insecticide, and what I love, with grandchildren around the house all summer, is that all have a "Child Protector-Top" designed to keep the spray valve from young fingers.

The Candle Shop has some terrific terrace lights—they look like little flowerpots, but they're filled with a special candle wax and wick that will burn for five hours. The tall flame is windproof and also acts as an insect repellent. Six to a box, they're called Faroy Garden Flares and come from Housin, Texas. Not for indoor use.

Have you ever taken a swe or a soft wool dress off a har only to find puffy little wings the shoulders where the hanger poked it? This can be very disco aging when that is the garment want to wear and you're in a hu However, I have found a solut to sleeves marked by closet ha ers. Besides investing in pad hangers as a preventive, the p can be removed by sponging th gently with a washcloth wrung in hot water. Summer soups from fruit to nuts

by Doris Tobias

Summer soups are made of sun and soft zephyrs, soothing as a running brook, buoyant as a hummingbird's wings.

Chilled fruit soups are main-European in origin, using ripe, seasonal cherries and berries—frosty blueberries and purple-passion plums, succulent peaches, nectarines, creamy pears.

Summer fruit soups are thin-textured but rich with unexpectedly piquant flavor; marvelously refreshing. Traditionally, they're accompanied by delightfully special bread—black raisin pumpernickel, thin sour rye, homemade fruit breads, hot, crusty biscuits. Follow the soup and bread with a light summer salad, cheeses, fresh fruit, and beverage for an imaginative warm-weather luncheon. Serve the chilled fruit soup to conclude a summer night's dinner.

The soups are super pickups when poured icy cold from a pitcher after a set of tennis, an afternoon swim, or a session tidying up your garden. And they provide a pleasant prelude to somnolence before retiring.

And for that inevitable rainy day, a walnut or peanut soup is a warming way to chase away that gray feeling. Sunday brunch becomes a gala event when you start off with consommé Bigarade, tangy with fresh orange . . . and served with croissants hot from the oven.

Serve fruit and nut soups with panache. Use your prettiest tureens and bowls. Pour chilled soups into Chinese porcelain bowls, crystal punchbowl glasses, stemmed wineglasses, or brightly colored pottery mugs.

Make it gala by ladling from a large crystal punchbowl or footed giant brandy snifter.

Garnish with imagination. Float one shelled almond in a bowl of peaches and cream soup. Plunk a fat red cherry, stem and all, in the center of the cherry soup. Place thin rounds of unpeeled lemon on rims of glasses of blueberry bisque. Dust the freshly poured plum potage with finely chopped walnut.

Pile unshelled walnuts and almonds in a shallow, handwoven basket and use as a centerpiece for your brunch table, with bunches of fresh blooms on either side.

Fill a mushroom basket with oranges and lemons. Tuck bunches of fresh watercress at the ends and place at one end of your table.

EACHES AND CREAM SOUP

antastic when made with fresh, eestone peaches or nectarines.

2 pounds fresh peaches, peeled, and pitted, cut into quarters ater
cup sugar
ice of half a lemon or 4 gratings of whole nutmeg or ¼ teaspoon powdered itcher of heavy cream or vanilla ice cream, melted to pouring consistency risp, thin cookies

a saucepan place peaches with ater to cover, sugar, lemon juice, utmeg and bring to the boil and immer until peaches are tender, bout 15 minutes. Cool. Purée in lender or pass through a sieve. Chill thoroughly and serve in parait glasses. Pass a pitcher of heavy ream or vanilla ice cream. Serve s a dessert, with cookies. Serves bout 4.

GOOBER SOUP

Exotic and spicy, a peanut soup rom the heartlands of Africa.

3 cups rich chicken stock
1 cup peanuts, finely ground
½ teaspoon salt
5 or 7 grindings of black pepper several dashes of hot pepper sauce
3 tablespoons ketchup
½ cup dry white wine
green scallions, cut in rounds

In a large saucepan bring stock to the boil. Lower heat to simmer and add peanuts, salt, pepper, hot pepper sauce, ketchup, and white wine and simmer soup for 20 minutes. Taste to correct seasoning. It should be spicy. Serve piping hot garnished with a few scallions. Serves about 6.

VICHYSSOISE AUX POIRES

Delicate, with the subtle flavor of fresh summer pears, rich with cream and potato. An elegant variation on the vichyssoise theme.

2 large potatoes, peeled and cubed
2 leeks, cleaned (slice off all but 2 inches of green, leafy parts and make several slashes about 1-inch deep in both ends—hold under cold running water to get rid of all the sand), and diced
water
1 cup rich chicken stock or canned bouillon
3 ripe pears, peeled, cored, cubed salt and freshly ground pepper
3 cups light cream
fresh chives, chopped
sweet paprika

Place potatoes and leeks in a saucepan, cover with water and cook until tender, about 15 minutes. Drain. Place potatoes and leeks in the blender, add stock or bouillon and purée. Add pears to blender mixture and purée until smooth. Season with salt and freshly ground pepper. Stir in light cream and chill soup several hours. Serve garnished with chives and a dusting of paprika. Serves 4.

BLUEBERRY BISQUE

Subtle, smooth, and scrumptious.

2 pints blueberries or huckleberries washed and picked over juice of 1 small lemon
4 cups water
2 or 3 cloves
1-inch piece of cinnamon stick a few gratings of nutmeg very fine granulated sugar, to taste plain yoghurt
grated orange peel

Place in a saucepan blueberries or huckleberries, lemon juice, water, cloves, cinnamon, and nutmeg. Cover and cook over medium heat until berries are soft. Strain soup and taste. It should be tart. If it is too tart for your taste, add sugar to taste. Chill the blueberry bisque thoroughly and serve with yoghurt and sprinkle with a little orange peel. Serves about 4.

Marvelous marriages for summer soups

Homemade biscuits, piping hot. Use your favorite packaged mix, or a good frozen product. Add ¼ teaspoon of caraway seeds for flavor and texture.

Slice a good horny loaf of raisin pumpernickel, rye, Swedish limpa, or whole-grain bread, and serve with a crock of fresh sweet country-style butter.

Cocktail rye or pumpernickel rounds are great. Heat them briefly in the oven and serve with a cream-cheese-and-chives spread.

Make tiny puff paste shells, using frozen, ready prepared dough. Stuff the shells with sautéed chicken livers put through a food mill together with hard-cooked eggs, a little mayonnaise, and seasoned with salt, pepper, and a dash of nutmeg. Bake in a very hot oven until golden and flaky.

Big, puffed-up popovers are a happy surprise. Use a packaged mix. Add your own touch to the dough before baking: finely chopped bacon; small cubes of Cheddar or Emmenthal cheese; snippets of fresh green chives. Chill dough thoroughly. Spoon into hot muffin tins and into a very hot oven—they will pop gloriously.

Fruit breads found in health food stores and many supermarkets are delectable—orange nut, banana, apple-raisin—they're all super.

Pop a ready-made fresh or frozen quiche into the oven and serve in thin wedges. Pass the pepper mill.

Keep packages of frozen croissants in the freezer. Heat to melting flakiness and serve with plenty of country-style butter.

Roll out a piecrust from your own stock or from a packaged mix. Keep it thin. Cut into squares. Fill centers with a dab of finely thrice-ground beef, seasoned with salt, pepper, onion, and a little curry powder. Fold dough over filling to form little envelopes and bake in hot, hot oven until they are lightly browned.

Whole-grain wheat or soya muffins prepared from a packaged mix are great taste-texture go-withs. If you buy them already made, heat them to heighten flavor.

Authors of Cooking for Carefree Weekends, Molly Finn and Jeri Laber, plan one day's menus of cold food and one of hot for you to mix and match as the weather and appetites dictate.

If you are serving a late breakfast, you will have time to make granola bread in the morning. Allow about two hours from start to finish, plus a little while for it to cool for easy slicing. You can also make it the day before.

There is nothing else to cook for this breakfast. Simply mound some fresh cottage cheese in the center of a platter and surround it with whatever fresh fruit is at its prime. Use as much variety as you can, and serve it sliced or whole.

You can serve this breakfast in winter, too, using oranges, grapefruit, bananas, and dried fruit.

GRANOLA BREAD

Any kind of granola cereal is good in this bread.

1½ cups warm water
2 envelopes dry yeast
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1-2 tablespoons honey
1½ teaspoons salt
3½ cups flour
1½ cups granola cereal optional: nuts or raisins
butter

Warm a large mixing bowl by rinsing it with hot water. Add water to bowl and sprinkle it with yeast, and allow mixture to stand a few minutes, then stir until the yeast is dissolved. Add oil, honey, and salt and stir well. Add the flour and granola and nuts or raisins if desired. Mix thoroughly. Cover bowl with a towel and set in a warm spot for about ½ hour. The dough will almost double in bulk.

Preheat oven to 350°. This dough does not require kneading; beat it vigorously with a wooden spoon or punch it down, pat it into shape in a well-buttered, 9-by-5-inch loaf pan. Put pan in a warm place for 15 minutes and then bake for 45 minutes until the bread is crisp and brown. 1 loaf.

You can make this bread a day ahead and wrap it in foil after it cools to keep it fresh. Warm it slightly before serving, if you wish.

The fish loaf for this cool summer lunch can be prepared entirely a day in advance and, in fact, should be, unless you like to start cooking very early in the morning. It doesn't take long to prepare, but it does have to chill for at least three hours before serving. Remember that food served cold requires more seasoning than hot food. Make the pretty orange and red salad about an hour before lunch and serve it in a separate bowl. Brew an extra pot of strong coffee at breakfast time so that you can have it chilled and ready for dessert at lunch.

FISH LOAF

6 large onions, chopped
3 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
2 pounds fish fillets, preferably a mixture of several kinds
3 eggs
3 tablespoons bread crumbs juice of ½ lemon
2 teaspoons salt
plenty of freshly ground pepper slices of lemon capers
parsley and watercress

Preheat oven to 350°. Reserve 1 cup onion. Sauté the remaining onion in butter and oil until golden brown. While the onions are cooking, cut the fish into very small pieces or chop it, or put it through the coarse blade of a food grinder. Make it as coarse or as fine as you like—it's entirely a matter of taste. In a large bowl beat the eggs, add fish, reserved onion, cooked onions, bread crumbs, lemon juice, salt and pepper and combine mixture thoroughly. Place in an oiled 9-by-5-inch loaf pan or a 2-quart baking dish and bake for 1 hour. Cool loaf and then chill for at least 3 hours.

To serve, turn the loaf out of the pan onto a platter and garnish with lots of lemon slices, capers, parsley or watercress or both. Pass extra capers and a pepper mill. This loaf serves 6 generously for lunch. It makes an excellent first course for 12.

CARROT AND RADISH SALAD

juice of 1 lemon
1 clove garlic, minced
1 teaspoon salt
4-6 large carrots, scraped and thinly sliced
2 cups red radishes, thinly sliced

In a bowl mix lemon juice, garlic, and salt and combine with the carrots and radishes. Chill at least ½ hour before serving. Serves 6.

This elegant cold meal is a pleasure to prepare. Have the clams opened at the fish store and keep them chilled. You can cook the chicken as much as a day ahead, if you wish, and the dessert can be made many hours before serving. When you make the dill sauce, save the egg whites to use in the mousse. If you have refrigerated the chicken and the rice, be sure to leave time for them to come to room temperature before serving.

CHICKEN AND BROWN RICE IN DILL SAUCE

Poaching Chicken:
6 whole chicken breasts, skinned, boned and halved (reserve skin and bones)
3 cups canned chicken broth
2 ribs celery
1 large carrot
1 small onion
1 teaspoon salt, or to taste
1 bay leaf
Dill Sauce:
3 tablespoons butter
1 clove garlic, minced
2 tablespoons flour
3 cups stock (after poaching chicken)
1 tablespoon vinegar
2 teaspoons sugar
juice of ½ lemon (about 1 tablespoon) ½ teaspoon salt
freshly ground pepper
3 tablespoons fresh dill, chopped
3 egg yolks
Assembling Dish:
2 cups uncooked brown rice
salt and pepper to taste
squeeze of lemon
dill sauce
cherry tomatoes
poached chicken breasts fresh dill, chopped, optional sliced olives, optional watercress, optional

Place chicken skin and bone in a pot and add broth, celery, carrot, onion, salt, and bay leaf and bring to a boil; cover the pot and simmer for 1 hour.

Strain the stock and let it stand until the fat rises to the surface. Skim off the fat. (If you have time, let the stock chill overnight so that the fat congeals. This will make it easier to remove.)

Pour 3 cups stock into a large skillet and heat until it simmers. Add chicken breasts and poach them, covered, in the barely simmering stock for about 10 minutes or until they are just cooked through. (You will probably have to cook the chicken in 2 batches.) Remove the chicken from the stock. Reserve stock.

Leave chicken at room temperature, or refrigerate it if you are not planning to serve it within the next 2 hours. Measure stock and add more stock, if necessary, to make 3 cups.

Melt butter in a medium-sized pot over low heat. Add garlic and cook it for a few minutes without letting it brown.

Stir in the flour with a wire whisk and continue to cook for 1-2 minutes more. Add stock and stir constantly. Cook sauce over medium heat, stirring frequently, until it thickens. Season it with vinegar, sugar, lemon juice, salt, pepper and dill, and continue to cook over low heat until the flavors are well blended, stirring, tasting, and adjusting the seasonings if necessary.

Beat a little of the hot sauce into the egg yolks and add the yolk sauce mixture gradually to the sauce, stirring constantly. Continue to stir the sauce over low heat until it reaches the boiling point and then remove it immediately from the heat.

Set the sauce aside to cool, at room temperature or in the refrigerator. Stir it from time to time to prevent a skin from forming on the surface.

Cook the rice and when done season well with salt, pepper, and lemon. Stir in about ½ cup dill sauce. Pack mixture tightly into a small bowl and let it cool in the refrigerator.

Since this dish should be room temperature, it may be assembled 1 hour or more before serving. Unmold the rice in the center of

BRANDIED PEACH MOUSSE

oiling water pounds fresh peaches
tablespoons sugar
-3 tablespoons brandy
enerous squeeze of lemon juice cup cold water package unflavored gelatin (1 tablespoon) cup heavy cream
egg whites
arnish: fresh berries, optional

Drop the peaches into a pan of oiling water for 1 minute to oosen the skins. Peel and slice the eaches (about 3 cups). Put them i a bowl, sprinkle with sugar, randy, lemon juice and let them iarinate for about 15 minutes, irring gently from time to time. 'lace cold water in a small pan nd sprinkle the gelatin over it. Vhen the gelatin has softened, bout 5 minutes, place pan over iedium heat and stir until the elatin has been thoroughly dis- olved.

Set aside 1 cup of peaches. Add emaining peaches, juice, and gel- tin mixture into the container of n electric blender and whirl to a ine purée. Pour purée into a large owl and taste for sweetness; if ou wish, add more sugar or randy.

In a bowl whip cream and fold nto the peach purée. In a separate owl beat egg whites until they re stiff, but not dry, and fold into he peach mixture. Pour half the nousse into a 1½-quart soufflé dish r any other serving dish of the ame capacity. Cover with re- erved peach slices and add the emaining mousse. Chill in refrig- erator for 3-4 hours or until set.

Before serving, if you wish, gar- nish mousse with reserved peach slices and some fresh berries. Serves 6.

If you follow the steps in the recipe carefully, this one-dish breakfast should be quite easy to prepare. Don't turn down any of- fers of help, however; if somebody else fixes the toast and makes cof- fee, it will make the timing easier for the cook.

POACHED EGGS ON ANCHOVY TOAST WITH GRILLED TOMATOES

1 2-ounce can flat anchovy fillets, cut into small pieces
4 tablespoons sweet butter, at room temperature
6 slices bread, toasted
6 tomatoes, cut in half butter
salt and freshly ground pepper
2 tablespoons chopped parsley or basil
12 eggs
buttered toast

Mash anchovies very thoroughly into the butter. Spread each slice of toast generously with the an- chovy butter.

Put water in a large skillet to a depth of about 3 inches and start heating it.

Place tomatoes in a low baking dish and dot surface with butter, salt, and pepper to taste, and sprinkle with parsley or basil. Broil for 5-10 minutes, or until they are brown and bubbly on top, but still firm enough to hold their shape.

While the tomatoes are broiling, poach eggs, a few at a time, in the simmering water. When eggs are done, keep them warm in a bowl of warm water. When the tomatoes are done, turn off the broiler and put the anchovy toast in the hot oven to warm.

Have six plates ready. Remove the eggs gently from the water and put them on paper towels to drain. Arrange 2 tomato halves and a slice of anchovy toast on each plate. Place 2 poached eggs on each piece of toast and serve im- mediately. Serve plenty of plain buttered toast to mop up the de- licious juices. Serves 6.

You can make dessert for this meal a day or more ahead, if you wish. It takes just a few minutes to assemble, but you must be there to stir it in the freezer once every hour or so until it crystallizes. It will then keep for many days un- attended.

Fix the ham and herb sauce about half an hour before you in- tend to eat, or earlier in the day, if you prefer. Wash and slice an assortment of raw vegetables and arrange them attractively on a large platter around a bowl of homemade mayonnaise or some sour cream mixed with a little horseradish.

Before sitting down to lunch, set the vegetable platter in the center of the table and put the spaghetti into boiling water. You can eat the vegetables as an ap- petizer while the spaghetti is cook- ing, and with the spaghetti as well. It's a good way to make sure that everyone is at the table at the right time, since this extremely simple pasta dish should be tossed just before serving and served im- mediately.

SPAGHETTI WITH HAM AND HERBS

¾ cup olive oil
4 ounces salty ham, Canadian bacon, or prosciutto, coarsely chopped
2 cloves garlic, minced
½ cup parsley, chopped
2 teaspoons fresh marjoram, chopped or ½ teaspoon dried marjoram
6-8 leaves fresh basil, chopped, or 1 teaspoon fresh thyme leaves, or ¼ teaspoon dried thyme
1½ pounds spaghetti or other pasta
salt and freshly ground pepper

Heat the oil in a frying pan and add ham, bacon, or prosciutto, and garlic and sauté gently, without browning, for 4-5 minutes. Add all the herbs, stir them well into the oil, sauté them very gently for 2-3 minutes more and then turn off the heat. Let the herbs steep in the oil while the spaghetti is cook- ing.

Cook the spaghetti until it is just done. Drain and put it in a hot serving dish and pour the sauce over the spaghetti, toss thor- oughly, and serve immediately. Pass salt and pepper.

Serves 8 as a first course, 6 as a main course.

LEMON-ORANGE ICE

1½ cups water
½ cup sugar
½ cup fresh lemon juice (about 3 lemons)
½ cup fresh orange juice (about 2 oranges)
3 tablespoons grated lemon rind mixed with 2 tablespoons sugar

In a small saucepan combine water and sugar and bring mixture to the boil and boil for 5 minutes. Allow mixture to cool. In a small bowl, preferably a metal bowl for faster freezing, mix lemon juice, orange juice, and the sugar water and stir well. Place bowl in freezer for about 1 hour. When ice begins to form, stir mixture and break up the frozen portions into fine crys- tals with a fork or potato masher; continue to do this every hour or so, until ice has completely crystal- lized. Freezing time, depending on your freezer, will be about 4 hours. Once the ice has crystal- lized, it will keep in the freezer without further attention for many days.

If you wish, sprinkle lemon rind- sugar on top of the tart ice. Serves 6 generously.

There's no need to heat up the kitchen for this hot summer din- ner. Make the soup a day in ad- vance or in the cool morning (but don't freeze it—the potatoes will be soggy.) The crust for the tart can be made a day or two ahead and filled several hours before serving. Don't forget to make the crème fraîche at least a day before you serve this tart; it's a perfect combination. Wash the salad greens, wrap them in a towel and put them in the refrigerator sev- eral hours in advance. About an hour before serving time, you can get the fish and corn ready for cooking, light the fire, put the soup on a gentle heat and have plenty of time for a relaxed drink before dinner.

SORREL SOUP

8-10 scallions, including green tops, sliced
2 tablespoons butter
1 large potato, peeled and diced
2 cups fresh sorrel leaves, washed and cut in thin strips, or 1 large bunch watercress, washed and coarsely chopped, plus extra chopped sorrel or watercress leaves for garnish
8 cups chicken broth
salt and freshly ground pepper

In a large pot sauté scallions in butter until soft, but not brown, add the potato, sorrel, and using more butter if necessary, toss until the potatoes are well coated with butter and the sorrel leaves have wilted. Add the broth and simmer mixture for about 15-20 minutes until the potatoes are cooked through but still firm. (If you are using watercress instead of sorrel, add it after the potatoes are cooked, and simmer soup for 5-10 minutes more.) Season soup to taste with salt and pepper. Before serving, toss in a few chopped sorrel or watercress leaves for a touch of bright green. Serves 6.

ROASTED CORN-ON-THE-COB

1 or 2 ears corn, husked [illegible] water butter
salt

Before cooking the fish, place each ear of corn on a square of heavy-duty foil, sprinkle the corn with a little water, add a piece of butter and some salt and fold the foil to make a package that is leakproof. Place the package on top of hot charcoals for about 10-15 minutes. Remove the corn from the coals, but do not unwrap until serving time.

CHARCOAL-BROILED FISH

6 small, whole fish 1-1½ pounds each) washed, cleaned, and heads removed or 6 fish steaks, about ¾-inch thick vegetable oil
lemon wedges

Dry fish well and rub oil into all the exposed surfaces. Put the fish in a heavy wire hamburger turner and cook it over a hot charcoal fire for 7 or 8 minutes on each side, until the skin is brown and crisp and the flesh is cooked through.

A total cooking time of 15 minutes is usually enough, but you can stick a knife or fork through to the bone to make sure the fish is tender all the way through. Be careful not to overcook the fish or it will be dry. Serve with lemon wedges. Serves 6.

BLUEBERRY TART

½ cup butter, room temperature
½ cup cream cheese, room temperature
1 cup flour about ¼ cup honey
2 tablespoons water
4 cups blueberries, washed and stemmed (or raspberries)
½ cup crème fraîche

In a bowl mash the butter and cream cheese together. Blend the flour in with your fingers and form the dough into a ball. Chill pastry for about 1 hour. Preheat oven to 375°.

Roll dough out on a well-floured board and press it into an 8-inch flan ring or pie plate, or individual tart pans. Prick the bottom of the crust several times with a fork and put the pan on the middle shelf of the oven. After 5 minutes, prick the shell again to keep it from bubbling up from the bottom of the pan. Remove crust from oven when it is lightly browned—15-20 minutes. Cool shell while preparing filling.

In a small saucepan put honey, water, and 1 cup berries and over medium heat bring mixture to a boil, turn heat down and cook, stirring frequently, for about 10 minutes, or until a slightly syrupy jam forms. Let the cooked fruit cool for a few minutes, and add remaining fruit. Taste mixture for sweetness and add more honey, if you wish. Pour fruit into the shell and top each piece with a dollop of crème fraîche when you serve it. Serves 6.

CRÈME FRAÎCHE

1 cup heavy sweet cream, preferably unsterilized
1 teaspoon buttermilk

Pour the cream into a jar and stir in buttermilk, cover and let stand at room temperature for 24 hours, or until cream has thickened. Refrigerate. Try, if possible, to get unsterilized cream, as sterilized cream will take several days for it to thicken. Crème fraîche will keep for several weeks in the refrigerator.

Summer soups

PLUM POTAGE

Suave and exhilarating, a lovely dessert soup.

2 pounds purple plums, washed, stemmed, cut in half, pitted and quartered
2 cups water
2 tablespoons orange juice, fresh or frozen
½ cup sugar, plus extra to taste
pinch of salt
a few grindings of nutmeg
1 large egg, beaten until light and foamy crème fraîche, or whipped heavy sweet cream thin slivers orange peel

In a 2-quart saucepan add plums, water, orange juice, sugar, salt, and nutmeg. Bring mixture to the boil, lower flame and simmer 20-30 minutes, until plums are soft. Cool. Purée mixture in the blender, or press through a sieve. Add egg and blend mixture thoroughly. Taste to correct sugar, and chill soup several hours. Serve from a large tureen, accompanied by a bowl of crème fraîche or heavy cream. Garnish with orange peel. About 6 servings.

Crème fraîche, or French cream, may be prepared by adding 1 teaspoon buttermilk to 1 cup liquid just to the point of lukewarm. Pour the cream into a glass jar, place the lid on top, but don't close tightly. Permit the cream to stand 5-6 hours at room temperature, then stir and place in refrigerator until ready to use.

COLD FRESH TOMATO SOUP

6 ripe red tomatoes, skinned, cut in half, and squeezed to remove seeds, chopped coarsely
1 small onion, finely chopped
1 shallot, finely minced
a few small fresh basil leaves, finely chopped or ¼ teaspoon dried basil salt and freshly ground pepper
1 teaspoon sugar
½ cup dry vermouth or dry white wine, optional thin slices of unpeeled cucumber
sour cream
fresh chives or dill, chopped homemade biscuits

Place tomatoes in top of double boiler or in a saucepan over a pan of simmering water. Add onion, shallot, basil, salt and pepper, and sugar. Cover and steam over gently simmering water 15 minutes. Pour mixture into the blender and purée, or pass through a sieve. Add vermouth or wine and taste to correct seasoning. Chill soup several hours in the refrigerator. Serve in stemmed glasses. Place a slice of cucumber over the rim of the glasses and add 1 tablespoon sour cream sprinkled with chives or dill. Pass a platter of homemade biscuits. Serves about 6.

WALNUT SOUP

Start a chilly day with this one and your spirits will lift.

6 cups rich beef stock or canned bouillon
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1½ cups finely ground walnuts, plus halves for garnish
½ teaspoon salt
a few grindings of fresh black pepper ½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce a dash or 2 Tabasco sauce
fresh bread

Add stock or bouillon to a saucepan and bring to the boil; remove from heat. In a large saucepan melt butter and stir in flour with a wooden spoon or wire whisk until a smooth paste is formed. Continue to stir and pour in the hot stock or bouillon, a little at a time. A wire whisk helps blend to a smooth consistency. Add ground walnuts, salt, pepper, Worcestershire, and Tabasco and simmer for 30 minutes. Serve hot, garnished with walnut halves and accompanied by a good, fresh bread. Serves about 6.

Fabulous summer food

Food to make for family and friends, as pretty as summer itself, from a cantaloupe sherbet to a tomato soufflé with a basil sauce

CANTALOUPE SHERBET

2 cups cantaloupe, diced
¼ cup honey
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
juice of 1 lemon
1½ cups heavy cream, whipped
¼ cup curaçao

In a bowl combine melon and honey and mash well. Marinate for at least 3 hours. Drain off ⅓ cup of juice and combine with gelatin until softened, and dissolve over boiling water. Return gelatin mixture to melon/honey mixture and mash with lemon juice. Freeze until mushy. Remove from freezer and fold in whipped cream, adding a few drops of curaçao at a time. Pour mixture into a 1-quart mold and freeze until firm. Serve in chilled silver goblets and garnish with biscuits or grated coconut. If you wish, serve sherbet in melon boat and garnish with mint leaves and violets or melon balls. About 1 quart.

ORANGE MOUSSE

2 ounces sweet butter
8½ ounces fine granulated sugar
4 whole oranges
peel of 1 lemon, not grated
3 eggs
1 envelope gelatin dissolved in ½ cup cold water
7 ounces heavy cream, whipped
2-3 tablespoons apricot jam for decoration

Butter the inside of a cake mold or ring mold, about 1½-inches deep and 8-inches in diameter, with ½ the butter. Sprinkle 3½ ounces sugar on the buttered surface. Slice 2 oranges very thin and place them around the mold, and sprinkle orange surfaces with 3½ ounces more sugar and freeze.

Over a pan of simmering water, place a bowl and add the juice of 2 oranges, lemon peel, eggs, remaining butter and sugar. Beat mixture slowly with a whisk until it is smooth. Remove from heat and strain mixture through a piece of cheesecloth or a Chinese strainer. Add gelatin to mixture. Cool mixture, but do not have it cold. Add cream using a spatula and work it into mixture very slowly.

Remove mold from freezer and add mousse. Freeze for about 4 hours, or until it has set. Run a long sharp knife around the sides of the mold and dip bottom in hot water for a few seconds before unmolding. Brush surface with slightly warm jam using a pastry brush. Serves 8.

CASSIS MOUSSE

8 egg yolks
1½ teaspoons gelatin dissolved in ½ cup cold water
5 ounces black currant jam mixed with 2 ounces water
7 ounces cream, whipped
7 egg whites, whipped stiff
12 lady fingers

In a bowl mix yolks and add gelatin mixture. In a heavy pan bring currant jam to a boil; remove from heat and slowly add egg yolk-gelatin mixture. Return mixture to the boil. Remove from heat and allow to cool. Add cream and egg whites to cooled mixture.

Line the bottom and sides of a 10-inch ring mold with the jam mixture. Top the bottom and sides of the mixture with a layer of lady fingers and repeat process finishing with a layer of the jam mixture. Refrigerate until set. Remove ring from mold and serve. Serves 8-10.

FINGER LUNCH ON THE BEACH

from Suzanne Taylor

CHICKEN SEBASTIANO

4 whole small broilers, game hens, or 2 larger broilers, split
½ cup olive oil
½ cup lemon juice
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 teaspoon chopped dried tarragon, or 1 tablespoon fresh 1 teaspoon oregano
salt and pepper to taste

Preheat oven to 350°. Brush skin of chickens with oil and place in a roasting pan.

In a small bowl mix remaining oil, lemon juice, garlic, tarragon, oregano, and salt and pepper to taste. Bake chickens for about 1 hour, basting frequently with oil and lemon mixture. To keep chicken moist baste about every 10-15 minutes. Serves 4.

HONEY-FRENCH BREAD

1 envelope granulated yeast
⅓ cup water, lukewarm
2 cups milk
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons honey
1 heaping tablespoon salt
5-6 cups flour
1 egg and 1 tablespoon cream mixed together

In a cup mix yeast into water and dissolve. In a saucepan heat milk until warm and add butter, honey, and salt. When butter is melted remove from fire and let cool. Add the yeast-water mixture and gradually the flour, stirring first, then kneading until dough is smooth and does not stick to the hands. Place dough in a greased bowl, cover with a cloth, and let rise in a warm place for 2 hours or until doubled in bulk. Preheat oven to 350°. Punch dough down again, and let rise 40 minutes more. Knead again slightly and divide into pieces that will roll into 2-3 long slim loaves. Cut diagonal slashes in the top, let rise again slightly, brush with milk, and bake about 40 minutes. Ten minutes before bread is done, brush tops with egg and cream mixture, which will give them a nice glaze.

A pie tin filled with water and set on the lower shelf of oven while loaves bake improves the crust. 2-3 loaves bread.

CORNISH PASTIES

Pastry
2 cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup sweet butter, chilled
¼ cup lard, chilled
4-5 tablespoons ice water, or enough to hold pastry together
Filling
¾ pound raw steak, finely diced, or ground beef
¾ cup raw potato, finely diced
¾ cup onion, finely chopped
1 tablespoon parsley, chopped
salt and pepper to taste

CHICKEN CURRY

from Judith Garden

4 chicken breasts, boneless
2 tablespoons flour
garlic salt to taste
freshly ground black pepper
2 tablespoons butter, more if necessary
3 bay leaves
2 garlic cloves
Curry Sauce
3 ounces butter
2 large onions, chopped
3 tablespoons curry powder
2 tablespoons flour
½ cup chicken broth
1 cup cream
½ cup milk
condiments: sliced tomatoes; green onions, minced; banana chips; chutney; peanuts, chopped; fresh dill, chopped; radishes

Dip chicken breasts in a mixture of flour, garlic salt, pepper until well coated. In a large skillet melt butter until bubbling, not brown, add bay leaves and garlic and brown chicken on all sides until golden brown. Add more butter if necessary. Set chicken aside and keep warm.

Curry Sauce

Melt butter in a skillet and over a moderate flame sauté onions until golden-colored but not brown. With the flat side of a large spoon rub in curry powder and flour and stir until you have a smooth paste. Gradually add chicken broth, cream, and milk; mix well stirring until sauce thickens.

The tequila boom

Rising fast in popularity, the easy-to-mix spirit with an intriguing natural taste of its own

by Philip S. Brow

Savants still argue, as is their wont, about whether or not the native inhabitants of Mexico were drinking distilled spirits when Cortez arrived in the early 16th century. It is certain the Aztecs knew about fermentation and consumed some sort of pulque, for fermentation is a natural process, which occurs whenever the conditions are right, with or without the helping hand of man. However, the art of distillation is considerably more complex, and may or may not have been among the several accomplishments of the Aztecs. If it was not, you may be sure that the Spaniards soon showed them the way, and as a result we have tequila, one of the world's most delightful spirits.

During U.S. prohibition, Americans who visited Mexico regaled their stay-at-home brethren with stories of a strong, fiery, potent libation. Not too long after repeal, certain reforms were instituted in Mexico, including a sort of appellation controlée, which provided that anything called tequila had to be made in an area near the town of Tequila in the State of Jalisco. Similar spirits made elsewhere are known generally as mezcal. Distillation processes were refined to yield a smoother, more uniform product.

Tequila is made from a plant of the agave family, somewhat similar to what we know as the Century Plant, so named because it takes a long time to burst into bloom. In tequila country, high and dry and sunny, the plants need eight to ten years to develop to the point of flowering. They are carefully watched and selected shoots are removed for new plantings. Just before it sends up that towering flower stalk there is a tremendous rush of juices to the heart of the plant—known as the cabeza or piña. This is the time when the harvesters, armed with the sharp cutting tools known as coas, move in and remove all leaves and shoots, and disengage the cabeza from the rest of the plant. From these large hearts—weighing from 40 to 200 pounds—the tequila is made. The hearts are loaded onto burros or, if a road exists, onto small trucks, and are transported to the distillery. There they are baked in huge ovens, about a hundred at a time, at fairly low temperature, until brown and soft. After cooling a little they are crushed and shredded to extract every bit of the sweet juice, known as aguamiel (honey water). A little must (the fermenting juice which is removed and chilled to halt fermentation, and which acts as a "starter" for the next batch—the same process used to hasten fermentation in many wines and spirits) is added from a previous fermentation, and the juice is allowed to ferment in large tanks for about seventy-two hours, and finally it is ready to be distilled. The distillation is done in small pot stills, rather like those used in the manufacture of cognac—about 300 gallons each. After one or two trips through the still, the tequila emerges as a rather low proof. If the bottled product is to be white tequila, it is reduced to 80 percent proof with distilled water and bottled immediately. If a golden tequila is to be the ultimate result, it is aged in oak barrels for a year or more; the aging period varies from one producer to another. A few may be aged for longer periods.

Between 1972 and 1973, sales of tequila grew 70 percent, the largest growth rate of any distilled spirit in the U.S., and it is continuing to gain in popularity.

So, what do you do with it? The answer to that is, almost anything. I keep a bottle in the freezer, and like to drink it straight and cold, as the Scandinavians drink their akvavit, with or without a chaser of beer. It may be used in just about any mixed drink, and with most satisfactory results. The traditional Mexican way is with salt and lime. The area between the base of the thumb and the forefinger is moistened slightly, then sprinkled with salt, a wedge of fresh lime is held between the thumb and forefinger. A shot glass of cold tequila is in the other hand. From here the order varies. Some aficionados lick the salt, put back the tequila, and bite into the lime. Others start with the lime, then the salt, and finally the tequila, and still others begin with tequila, finish with salt and lime. Whatever the order, it is good and refreshing. In Mexico, some tequila comes with a little bag of coarse salt ti to the neck of the bottle in case emergencies.

Serious students of cockta think that the introduction of t Margarita a few years ago tri gered the current interest in t quila. It is the first new cocktail many years to have captured t affection of great numbers of pe ple.

Before getting into tequi recipes, let me give a few wor of advice about drink mixin Most important, have everythi cold, cold, cold, including the ic Ice taken directly from the freez at zero temperature, not only pr duces more cold but does not me down as it does so. The dri should be stirred quickly with t cold ice and strained off as soon it is well chilled and mixed. Hav the tequila cold, too, for the sam reasons, and chill the glasses i which you will pour the drink. sugar is an ingredient, it is well t make a batch of simple syru (bring a cup of sugar and ½ cup water to the boil, let cook for a fe minutes, cool and bottle). The rea son is that sugar does not dissolv well in alcohol, and will settle out whereas the syrup will be incorpo rated into the drink. If you don have simple syrup at hand, dissolv the sugar in whatever fruit juice i component before you start mixin the drink. If there is no fruit juice dissolve the sugar in a bit of wate or club soda. But do make simpl syrup; it will keep all but foreve in the refrigerator.

MARGARITA

2 ounces tequila
1 tablespoon Cointrèau or Triple juice of ½ lime
salt

Prepare cocktail glasses by moistening the rims with a cut piece of lime, then spinning lightly in a plate of salt to frost. Refrigerate them until you are ready to pour. Put plenty of ice in a bar glass, and for each cocktail add the ingredients listed above. Stir quickly until well chilled, then strain into the prepared glasses. Float a very thin slice of lime on top of the drink if you like the idea.

A Tequini or Tequilatini is simply a Martini made with tequila and vermouth. Experiment until you find the proportions you like best. My preference is about 4 to 1.

TEQUINI

2 ounces tequila
½ ounce dry vermouth
lemon twist

Stir tequila and vermouth in a bar glass with ice cubes; strain into a chilled cocktail glass and garnish with a twist of lemon. If you're addicted to Martinis on the rocks, serve the Tequini the same way.

A great favorite during prohibition was the Tequila Sunrise. There were a number of versions all of which were as pretty to gaze upon as they were to drink.

TEQUILA SUNRISE

2 ounces tequila
4 ounces orange juice
1 tablespoon grenadine

Pour tequila and orange juice into a tall glass over ice cubes and stir. Add grenadine and allow to settle to the bottom of the glass. Just as the drink is served, give it a gentle stir to diffuse the grenadine.

Another recipe for Sunrise:

2 ounces tequila
1 tablespoon grenadine
juice and peel of ½ lime
½ teaspoon crème de cassis club soda

The first four ingredients are poured into a highball glass ove ice; the glass is then filled with chilled club soda and the drink stirred very briefly.

TEQUILA MANHATTAN

2 ounces tequila
½ ounce sweet vermouth
dash of bitters

Stir tequila, vermouth, and bitters in a bar glass with ice cubes. Strain into a chilled cocktail glass, and serve. A very small piece of lime dropped into the glass makes a good garnish, but if you must have a cherry, by all means do so. Leave it out of mine, please. A rather forgotten favorite of old-

THE FEMAIL CLUB

From San Francisco's fashion world: a club for women who never join clubs.

We're the people who started the Generation Gap—one of the most exciting women's fashion boutiques on the West Coast.
Only one problem. You had to come to San Francisco to shop at our store.
Which got us to thinking. Why not send out catalogs that would let you order the same fashions we were selling in our store by mail! And since you'd be ordering by mail, we could pass on to you the money we'd save on rent, salaries, lights, etc.
Nice, eh? A club that saves you up to 20% and more on all the best clothes, cosmetics, jewelry and gift items.
Not the dregs, mind you—but the very best things available to us in San Francisco (you'll be choosing from over 150 of America's and Europe's best high fashion suppliers).

Woman does not live by clothes alone.

Even at 20% off, there's bound to be a limit to your clothing budget.
And a girl's gotta swing a little. So we've arranged for card-carrying Femail Club members to receive special rates on vacation travel packages to places all over the world. Plus our San Francisco visitor's program, including personal invitations and special shopping discounts for our members who are visiting here.
So if you're ever wondering what to do once you've got all those great new threads on your back—this one feature of The Femail Club will make the whole thing worthwhile.

The old Free Gift ploy.

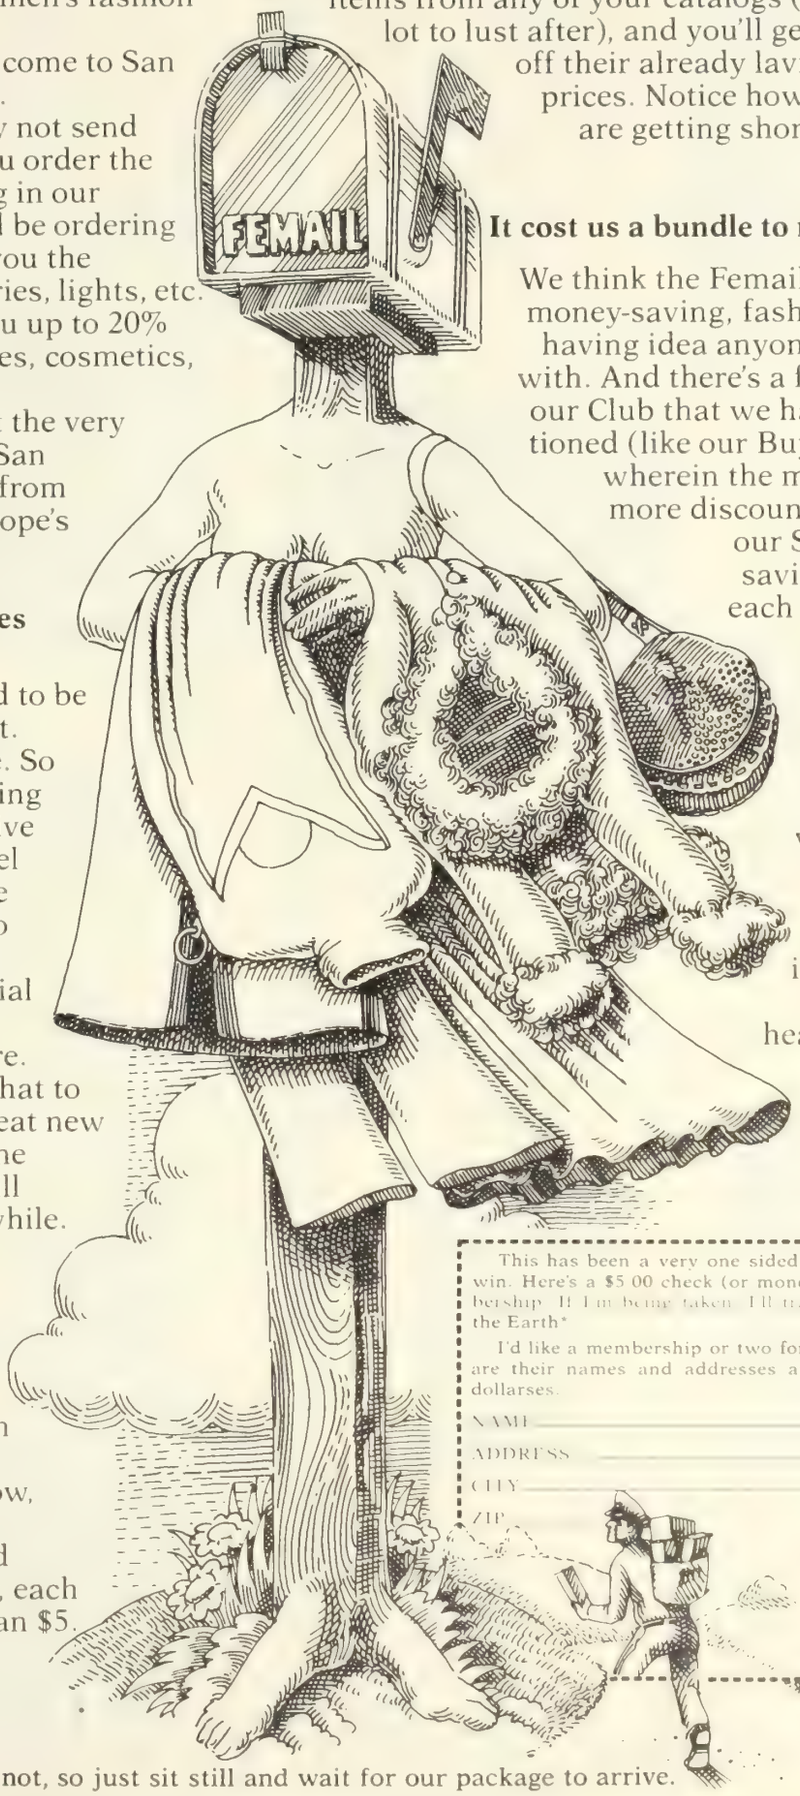
We'll not mince words. It costs $5.00 for a year's membership in our Club. BUT HANG ON—even that we can make palatable.
If you join the Femail Club now, you will be offered a choice of free gifts, from name brand cosmetics to designer jewelry, each with a retail value of more than $5.

Plus $5.00 in free "offs."

With your membership we're also going to give you $5.00 in gift certificates. So you can choose items from any of your catalogs (and you'll find a lot to lust after), and you'll get a total of $5.00 off their already lavishly discounted prices. Notice how the paragraphs are getting shorter? We must be near the end.

It cost us a bundle to run this ad. So...

We think the Femail Club is the best money-saving, fashion-buying, fun-having idea anyone's ever come up with. And there's a few things about our Club that we haven't even mentioned (like our Buyer's Bonus Plan wherein the more you buy, the more discounts you earn; and our Super Specials—savings up to 50% in each catalog). But we can't afford to hound you. You either join now (and enjoy later) or you turn the page. Later on, when you meet a slithery Femail winging off to the Med, wearing a devastating dress she paid heaven knows how absurdly little for...well, don't say we didn't tell you.



This has been a very one sided conversation, but you win. Here's a $5.00 check (or money order) for my membership. If I'm being taken, I'll track you to the ends of the Earth*

I'd like a membership or two for my friends. Enclosed are their names and addresses and the additional five dollarses.

DOUBLE-HANDLE SPOON HOLDER

Our elegant spoon holder is an exact copy of those produced over 100 years ago, made from the same molds, with the same exquisite panel thistle design. In the old days it held spoons, today it acts as an uncommonly handsome celery holder or unusual flower vase. Certainly, it's a prized collector's find and an antique lover's delight! 5½" tall.

INCREDIBLE! ALL-PURPOSE HOUSE AND GARDEN...

SUPER SPRAYER!

Featherweight — only 8 ounces complete — yet performs like those heavy galvanized steel sprayers costing $20 to $25!

FANTASTIC LOW PRICE

ONLY $4.98

A precision-made, rugged, heavy-duty sprayer so light that it weighs only 1/15 as much as any liquid you put in it! Until now you either had to lug those big heavy "pump up" gallon sprayers, weighing about 25 pounds when full — or else some dinky little pushsprayer that kept you hopping back to refill every few minutes. (Or, one of those trick hoses you have to pump with both arms, while keeping the end in a bucket. What a nuisance!)

Soft-spray at your fingertip

Shoots a stream as far as 20 ft.

Dozens of indoor uses too!

Use Super Sprayer for insecticides, liquid fertilizers, weed killers, on trees and bushes up to 20 ft. Control flies, mosquitoes, reach hanging plants with spray.

DOZENS OF HOUSEHOLD USES TOO!

Spray detergents, clean windows and car windshields, spray disinfectants, pest-killers along baseboards, in cracks and other hard-to-reach places

SAVE MONEY, GET SEVERAL!

Keep one full of weedkiller, another for bug killer or liquid fertilizer and a third for general household use, all for less than one heavy, old-fashioned sprayer. Money back if not delighted.

If tweezing your brows and applying eye makeup makes you frantic . . .
Fret no more!!!

A noted eye doctor was approached by a woman who complained that without her glasses she can't see what she is doing, and with her glasses she can't do what she is seeing. Knowing that no available magnifying mirror can give a strong image without distortion, the doctor hand-ground prescription lenses and silvered them to provide a distortion-free focusing mirror. Our optically perfect "Magic Focus" standing mirror has a flexible, brass, "goose-neck" arm for hands-free grooming. White frame and base blend with every decor. To tuck in your purse for quick touch-ups, order our lovely white & gold compact (not shown). It's double faced, with plain and Magic Focus mirrors. With either model, you'll see clearly and sharply WITHOUT YOUR GLASSES regardless of your prescription or need for bifocals. A necessity for contact lens wearers. Cost of 4" diameter standing Mirror is $14.95 plus $1.50 postage. Compact is $5.00; 2 for $9.50. Add 50¢ postage. You'll be amazed with the results. Satisfaction guaranteed.

Hawaiian "Good Luck"

ti plant

Guaranteed to grow!

The native Hawaiians believe the Ti Plant has a mystical voodoo power. The leaves were worn to dispel evil. It is planted to bring GOOD LUCK, LONG LIFE and LASTING LOVE. The Ti Plant has been used for medicine, candy, food, alcoholic drinks, and the sexy Hula Skirt.

The Ti Plant grows out of a log — so fast that you can almost see it grow! All you do is put the Ti log in water and watch it grow! When it sprouts, put it in a pot. The bigger the pot, the bigger it will grow . . . from one to six feet tall. You can have the size you want. Grow it in sun or shade — it blossoms! The Hawaiian Ti Plant makes an ideal gift. Send good luck to your friends and loved ones.

Choice of red or green leaves; guaranteed to grow or free replacement!

Grow Your Own

Egyptian Beauty Plant

Guaranteed to grow!

The life-juices of the Beauty Plant have been used as a skin moistener and beautifier since the first Pharaoh of Egypt. It was said to be the Secret of Cleopatra's Beauty. It is the secret ingredient of many lotions today!

You can actually use the Beauty Plant to sooth burns and sun burn. Just break off a leaf and rub the clear life juices on your burn. It feels so good! Keep your Beauty Plant in the kitchen for Natural first-aid.

It grows from a small rosette. It's easy. All you do is put it in a pot — water it once a week and watch it grow . . . up to two feet tall. The bigger the pot, the bigger it gets. Comes with easy instructions. It blossoms with spikes of large red flowers that last and last.

It makes a beautiful gift. Send Beauty to a friend. Guaranteed to Grow!

sorrel, salt, and pepper and cover pan and cook slowly for 5 minutes until the leaves are wilted. Sprinkle flour over mixture and mix it in thoroughly. Stir in stock and cook for a few more minutes. Rub mixture through a strainer, or whirl in a blender and then strain. Return purée to pan and heat until simmering. In a bowl beat egg yolks and cream together and dribble into hot soup stirring constantly. When reheating soup, be careful not to bring mixture to the boil. Can be served cold. Serves 6.

VITELLO TONNATO

from Wendy Stevenson

3½ pound boned, rolled, and tied roast of veal
4 tablespoons ground coriander
2 tablespoons butter
2 bay leaves
2 onions, quartered
2 large carrots, coarsely cut 3 stalks celery with leaves on scant handful parsley sprigs
1 teaspoon whole peppercorns
3 cups dry vermouth
water

Roll veal in the coriander and completely coat it. In a cast-iron casserole add butter and heat it until it has just finished foaming; add roast and quickly sear it on all sides. Turn heat down and add bay leaves, onions, carrots, celery, parsley, peppercorns, and pour vermouth over all. Add enough water to come ½-¾ the way up the sides of the veal. Cover casserole and simmer for 1½ hours or until veal is tender. Remove pan from heat and allow the veal to cool in its own stock. Strain stock and reserve it for the sauce.

Tuna Fish Sauce
½ cup olive oil
1 can tuna fish, preferably packed in olive oil
1 egg yolk
4 anchovy fillets, cut small
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons capers
salt and pepper to taste

In a blender container add all the ingredients and blend until sauce is smooth and creamy. Pour mixture into a mixing bowl and gradually add cooled stock, stirring until it is the consistency of very heavy cream. Salt and pepper mixture to taste.

Assembling dish
cooled veal roll, sliced evenly tuna sauce
capers
lemon slices, paper thin black olives, halved

In the middle of a large platter, overlap slices of veal and pour tuna sauce all around the slices. Dot the sauce with capers and place lemon slices in a strip down the middle of the veal with the black olives. Serve cold from the refrigerator. Serves 6-8.

TOMATO SOUFFLÉ WITH BASIL SAUCE

from Wendy Steavenson

6 medium tomatoes, chopped
3½ tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
3 tablespoons Parmesan cheese, grated
2 tablespoons tomato purée
5 egg whites
½ teaspoon cream of tartar

Preheat oven to 350°. In a frying pan add tomatoes and ½ tablespoon butter and over low heat cook mixture stirring and mashing tomatoes to reduce their water content. Strain to remove seeds and skins. Set mixture aside. In the top of a double boiler, melt remaining butter with the flour and cook for 2-3 minutes; be careful not to brown flour. Add milk, cheese, tomato sauce, purée, and cook until smooth, about 5 minutes. Set mixture aside to cool. In a bowl beat egg whites, sprinkling on cream of tartar, until they are stiff and smooth. Mix ⅓ of the egg white mixture into the tomato mixture thoroughly. Dribble tomato-egg white mixture over remaining egg whites and fold and lift mixture until blended. Pour mixture into a floured soufflé dish and bake for about 25 minutes or until puffed and brown. Serves 6 as a first course, 4 as a main course.

BASIL SAUCE

1½ cups hollandaise
½ cup heavy cream, whipped
1 handful fresh basil, ground in a mortar and pestle with a touch of olive oil

In a bowl mix hollandaise, cream, and basil and pass with soufflé.

FRUIT TART

from David Massey

Sugar Crust
2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
3-7 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon double-acting baking powder
7 tablespoons chilled butter
2 tablespoons chilled vegetable shortening
1 egg beaten with 1 teaspoon water
½ teaspoon vanilla

In a bowl place flour, sugar, baking powder, butter, and shortening and rub all together with the tips of fingers until the fat is broken into bits. Blend in the egg mixture and vanilla and quickly form dough into a ball. Place on a board and with heel of hand quickly press pastry 1 tablespoon at a time down on the board and away from you in a firm smear of about 6 inches. Form into a ball again and wrap in waxed paper. Chill for several hours until firm. Mold the pastry in a 10-inch flan ring.

Preheat oven to 375°. Bake shell for 5-6 minutes, remove from the oven and prick the bottom with a fork several places; continue to bake for 8-10 minutes more. Immediately remove flan ring from the shell and place shell on rack to cool. 1 10-inch shell.

Custard Filling
5 egg yolks
1 cup sugar
⅔ cup sifted all-purpose flour
2 cups boiling milk
1 tablespoon butter
1½ tablespoons vanilla

Put eggs in a large bowl and gradually beat in the sugar until the mixture is pale yellow and forms a ribbon. Beat in flour. While beating the yolk mixture gradually pour on the boiling milk in a thin stream of droplets.

Pour into a heavy enamel saucepan and over high heat with a whisk until it reaches boil and is smooth. When boil point is reached, beat over m erately low heat for 2-3 minut be careful not to scorch custa Remove pan from heat and beat butter and vanilla. Set aside cool. Dot top with softened but to avoid skin forming on surfa 2½ cups filling.

TOMATO SOUP

Although the tomato is looked upon as a vegetable by most, it has a dual personality. Horticultural experts classify the tomato as a fruit, first known as a love apple, and they're at their luscious blush now, the perfect moment to savor their ripe sensuality. Whether made from your own home-growns bursting on your vines, or purchased from your nearest tomato source, soups made from fresh tomatoes are something to get the beauty of—hot or cold. Here are two, one to chase rainy-day chills, and a glorious cold version that will give a languid-day luncheon a snappy start. Homemade Melba toast or cocktail rye rounds are great go-withs.

HOT AND CREAMY TOMATO SOUP

2 pounds fresh ripe tomatoes, washed and quartered
water
1 small onion, grated
2 celery ribs, chopped
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper or 5-6 grindings from the pepper mill
2 cups medium cream or half and half fresh dill, chopped

In a large saucepan place tomatoes, add water to cover, onion, celery, salt and pepper and cook over medium heat until tomatoes are soft. Press through a sieve and return to saucepan to heat ju until the simmering point. In separate saucepan warm cream half and half and add to toma mixture, stirring. Continue to sim mer until hot and smooth. Garnis with dill. Serves 6-8.

BLACK CHERRY SOUP

From eastern Europe, zesty an refreshing.

1½ pounds Bing or other sweet cherries, stemmed, pitted
2½ cups water
1 cup dry red wine
juice of ½ a large lemon
½ cup sugar, plus extra to taste
1-inch piece cinnamon stick
1 tablespoon cornstarch
sour cream or plain yoghurt

In a 2-quart saucepan add cher ries, 2 cups water, red wine, lemo juice, ½ cup sugar, and cinnamon Simmer, uncovered, 20-30 min utes, until cherries are tender. Re move cinnamon and cool. Puré mixture in blender, or pres through a sieve. Return cherry mixture to saucepan and heat t boiling; lower flame to simmer Add cornstarch to remaining wa ter and make a paste. Add to soup simmer, stirring, 10 minutes, unti soup is smooth and clear. Cool Taste. If soup is too tart, add sugar

Chill several hours. Serve in in dividual ceramic bowls. Pass separate stemmed compote dish o dairy sour cream or a mound o plain yoghurt. About 6 servings. ■

a "rebound"—that is to say, you spend 40 or 50 percent of the night in REM sleep. "It is as though you were making up for all that REM sleep you were deprived of when taking the pills," says Dr. Mendels. "This means you may start having REM [dream] sleep within a few minutes of falling asleep—and the dreams that you have then have a much more nightmarish quality than usual. So you wake up in the morning feeling that you've had a terrible night, and have to go on the pills again!"

It's a vicious circle. So if you can possibly use one of the other aids suggested here, it would be much better for you. (Unfortunately, the people who use sleeping pills the most tend to be older. They are people who do not realize that the older you get, the less sleep you need.)

There is a system about falling asleep which, if you can achieve it, is going to help you fall asleep more easily and sleep better. If you're reasonably healthy, you have done a little exercise, your mind is at rest, and your body is relaxed—then the great boon of sleep will come to you. It's all in the mind. Even going-to-bed routine can help—the way you take off your make-up, brush your hair, settle into bed—these little rituals can calm you down. So if you start being aware of all your preparations for sleep—and maybe use one of the aids suggested here—then you'll soon be at ease with "tired nature's sweet restorer, balmy sleep!" ■ of motion.

3. Stand for a total of two hours a day.

4. Lift something unusually heavy for five seconds.

5. Burn up 300 calories a day in physical activity.

This is simple. And so are the exercises that Dr. Morehouse has devised—and demonstrates, page 52—to make you fit and healthy without guilt in ten minutes a day, three times a week.

Start with four limbering exercises. Use whatever rhythm pleases you. Don't count—there's no need. Just spend about fifteen seconds on each exercise.

Once you are stretched and limbered, you are ready to develop muscle tissue. Expansion sitbacks—to restore muscle of abdominal wall—and expansion pushaways should be done twice each for a total of about four minutes, alternating them as you feel inclined. As you become more fit, increase difficulty of pushaways by lowering hands below shoulder height, as he does himself. The remaining five minutes of your exercise program are for good circulatory conditioning. The Endurance "Lope" will raise your heart rate to your proper level for 5 minutes.

More Fitness Tips

If you do these exercises for ten minutes a day, three times a week, says Dr. Morehouse, you will have good muscles, good circulation and an improved cardiovascular system. For people who want to maintain fitness for sports and athletic activities, these exercises can be stepped up. It's up to you. Your pulse will tell you how much effort you're expending. And the exercises are so simple to do, unlike some of the exercises we have all been led to believe are so wonderful, such as touching your toes, deep knee bends, leg-ups, sit-ups, and back bends—all of which, declares Dr. Morehouse, do more harm than good.

Keep cool! "Sweating weakens you, declares Dr. Morehouse. "Always exercise with light-colored, light clothing, not sweat suits or warm-up suits. In my program with the astronauts we experimented to see what happened if we allowed their body heat to rise. We found that just a slight increase in temperature markedly decreased the person's capacity for physical work."

Look for fitness opportunities. "During the day, don't lie down when you can sit. Don't sit when you can stand. Don't stand when you can move. When you wake up, have a good stretch. When you wash, soap and dry yourself vigorously. When you walk, walk briskly. And look for opportunities to climb stairs.

"I've had people who can't stand exercise—any kind of exercise. But one thing they will do is climb the stairs once in a while. This will improve their condition markedly. Now older people tend to buy houses all on one floor in order to avoid stairs. 'I'm past fifty,' they say. 'I don't want stairs to climb any more.' The opposite is true—the older you get, the more you need those stairs. This doesn't mean you have to run up and down them all day. But people looking for retirement homes should look for stairs. It may be all the exercise they are going to get.

"The proper exercise is so easy," says Dr. Morehouse, "and it's fun, too. It doesn't need precision, or regularity. Just do as much as you feel like doing, and you are doing wonders for your physical condition. Even if you haven't exercised for twenty years, just a little will really put you in better shape—for your life. It improves your sex life, too—a study of residents of Leisure World in Southern California found that exercise lessened the depressive states often found in older people—and that those with higher fitness scores also reported a more satisfactory sex life in their later years." So on with the pushaways and sitbacks—it takes so little to achieve so much! ■ even in semi-disguise for those who protest against milk. Mix it with MBT or other chicken bouillon for a tasty mid-morning cup, hot or cold, with a dash of curry. For an afternoon snack twirl it around in the blender with ice cubes and flavor it with your favorite fruit or almond, vanilla, chocolate, rum or sherry extract. Before bed, how about a cup of cocoa or warm milk with a touch of Sanka and cinnamon? Cream soups and chowders can be made with milk, and cereals may be cooked with milk instead of water.

Milk may be used in stews, casseroles, puddings, cakes, pie fillings, pancakes, and waffles. Nonfat dry milk (not reconstituted) can be added to meat loaf, gravies, and homemade breads, improving their nutritional value as well as their quality. Milk is a great food, straight up or as an accessory, and should be included in appropriate amounts in your family's diet every day.

Practically all milks today are pasteurized, a process that safeguards us from diseases spread by cattle to humans. Only vitamin C is destroyed in this process, but the amount present in milk is so minute that it is of little nutritional significance.

Some people still cling to the habit of insisting on certified milk. It is presently available in a few communities and may be raw or pasteurized, but according to the National Dairy Council, most of it is pasteurized and fortified with vitamin D. They say, "Certified milk originated in 1893 in response to a need for safe milk. It is produced and distributed according to the high standards for cleanliness as set forth by the American Association of Medical Milk Commissions."

Certified milk is expensive to produce and to distribute and is not as widely available as others. It is a good milk, but not superior nutritionally to other less expensive forms. And in 1975 there is less reason for certified milk as dairy herds are inspected regularly and more hygienic measures are employed in handling milk from cow to container.

Cost of food varies so much in various areas of our country that it is almost impossible to include cost of protein and calcium of milk products in dollars and cents. However non-fat dry skim milk is the least expensive source of these two essential nutrients. This does not apply to all dairy products. For equivalent amounts of protein commercial yoghurt is as expensive as many choice meats. However, if one makes yoghurt at home it is almost twelve to fifteen times cheaper than the commercial product.

TO MAKE YOGHURT*

Let stand covered from 2 to 4 hours 2 to 4 tablespoons prepared yoghurt. Place it in the top of a double boiler with 1 quart skimmed or whole milk. Float a dairy thermometer in the milk and heat the milk until it reaches 120°.

Cool mixture slightly and set it still in the top of the double boiler and with the thermometer in it over, not in, hot water. Keep the water hot enough so that the temperature registers between 90° and 105°. Continue at this heat between 2 and 3 hours until the mixture becomes as thick as custard. Chill the yoghurt at once and refrigerate.

Yoghurt will keep 2 to 5 days. It may be served alone or as a base or garnish for soup; or it may be used in salad dressings. Try serving it with brown sugar or blackstrap molasses and cinnamon or with fruits. Keep 2 to 4 tablespoons of this batch covered and refrigerated as a starter for the next batch. Allow it to stand covered at room temperature 2 to 3 hours before adding it to the new quart of milk.

For those who are allergic to cow's milk there are alternatives such as goat's milk or fortified soy milk. Lactase deficient individuals (lactase is an enzyme that splits lactose, the sugar in milk, into glucose and galactase) often must omit milk from their diets. But many of these unfortunate individuals can manage milk in moderate amounts without discomfort. So drink milk. Nutritionally it is one of man's best friends. ■

ır drive to Mystic.
"We find everything on board ically. "Sometimes, we have to ovel snow off the deck." First and Monique get the stove

ing. Next they start up what he lls "personal central heating"— combination of hot water, rum, non juice, and honey.
On Saturday mornings, they go hore and have a "huge" break-st—in a "little eating joint" in Mystic. Then, in the supermarket, they buy a steak and two fresh vegetables, canned milk, China tea, lemons and apples.

The Kinsolvings are back on Seabird between 11:30 and 1 and ready to sail. "We always go somewhere unless the weather is heavy.

"On Saturday night, we'll anchor somewhere and then we have a big dinner. Sometimes, friends will join us from shore; sometimes, we have a friend or two on board."

Monique cooks, "and the cook never washes. That's a rule on board," says Gus. Cooking takes a long time on the stove's alcohol burners, so keeping the meal simple is very important.

On Sundays, after sailing back toMystic, there are two good hours of chores the Kinsolvings must accomplish before returning to New York. "There are fewer chores in summer and we can go on longer sails," explains Gus. "But in the wintertime, nobody else is there; the sound of outboard motors vanishes. I also like the adventure of winter sailing."

Peter Talbert, fresh out of college, is a New York tennis-teaching professional, who is on the courts from five to eight and a half hours a day, six days a week. "I take Saturdays off," he explains, "because most of my friends are free that day. I don't mind working on Sunday—it's prime time for us.

"On Saturday morning, I sleep late—until about 10 or so—and then go out and buy a paper, sit down in the General Motors Plaza and read it. Then play squash or court tennis for relaxation."

Another Saturday pastime is watching sports on television—about any sport. He also cooks for friends Friday or Saturday night, "never more than five or six, because the studio is too small."

Dorothy Weatherford, a sportswear and quilt designer from Charleston, W. Va., lives in an apartment in town with her three children and her work often continues during weekends.

"Because a getaway weekend is so rare, it is very precious to me," says Dorothy, a curly haired brunette. "I want to be out-of-doors, away from the telephone and not have to worry about combing my hair." Her solution is a 45-mile drive north of Charleston to an abandoned 100-acre farm she bought three years ago. On it, stand the barns, a chicken coop, and the tent she's pitched.

On Friday afternoon, she shops for food and supplies, puts on her hiking boots and packs the kids, aged twelve, eleven, and nine, into her red pickup truck. "The minute I hit the farm's dirt road," says Dorothy, "I pull the curtain over my problems in the city and the pressure stops.

"We live in a very primitive way. We don't have any creature comforts out there: I get water from the creek and boil it for drinking. To prepare a meal, you first have to chop wood: That takes us all afternoon. Then we build a fire in a little lean-to against the barn and cook up a stew that's very plain but good because we're outside."

Dorothy reads during the day or sketches, while her children play in the creek or wander up the hillside. "They have learned to rely on themselves and their imagination for their entertainment."

City folks often like to leave their metropolis during the weekend for fresh air and wide-open spaces. Roberta and Rodolf Smith, tanned, gray-haired grandparents who live and work on their 4,500-acre sheep ranch do just the opposite: On Saturday, they drive into nearby Fredericksburg,where they own a 19th-century "Sunday House" and spend the night in town.

"When we arrive, we work in the garden," says Mrs. Smith. "We have a lot of deer in the country and they can harvest a crop overnight, so we raise our vegetables in town."

On Saturday night, they often visit friends or have them over for dinner. "We love to give our guests home-smoked leg of lamb. After all, we produce it, along with the vegetables we serve."

On Sunday, there's church and more gardening, and visits—or sometimes, just a quiet afternoon or evening together.

LOBSTER A L'ARMORICAINE

(from the Abravanels)

4 pounds frozen lobster tails
1 teaspoon olive oil
1 teaspoon butter
2 onions, chopped
thyme
a sprig of parsley and bay leaf, tied together tarragon
2 6-ounce cans tomato paste
1 pint heavy cream
½ cup sherry
salt, pepper to taste

Boil defrosted lobster 10 minutes in salted water; cool, remove meat and cut into morsels.

Heat oil and butter in large skillet; add onions and cook until golden brown; add herbs. Cover and simmer 10 minutes. Add tomato paste, cream, sherry, lobster, salt, pepper. Simmer ½ hour. Serve with rice. Serves 12.

RED CABBAGE

(from the Schleys)

1 medium-sized head red cabbage
½ onion chopped
4 strips bacon
1 apple, peeled, studded with 3 cloves pinch salt; pinch pepper
3 heaping teaspoons brown sugar
1 teaspoon white apple vinegar
a few rubs nutmeg

Cut cabbage in half by the root; lay each half with the flat side on the board and cut into thin strips.

In a large pot that has a lid, sauté the chopped onion and bacon over low heat; wash cabbage, drain well and put into pot; cover and cook over medium-low heat, taking care that the contents on the bottom will not burn. Turn mixture periodically, until it has steamed and settled; then add remaining ingredients; stir often; cook at least 1½ hours, but will be even better if left to simmer for 2-3 hours. Serves 12.

GENIE'S CHEESE FARINA

(from the Hackneys)

½ cup farina (do not substitute)
2 cups milk
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup grated sharp cheese
2 eggs
3 tablespoons butter
dash paprika

Cook farina and milk to mush; add salt and grated sharp cheese. Beat well, add two beaten eggs; pour into buttered casserole, sprinkle with paprika, and bake for 30-45 minutes, in a 425° oven, until firm. The cheese farina is similar to a soufflé, but it won't fall. Serves 6.

VEAL OSCAR

(from Peter Talbert)

12 veal patties
1 egg bread crumbs
1 bunch asparagus tips, cooked
4 slices American or Gruyère cheese
½ pint heavy cream
1 cup hollandaise sauce

Dip veal patties into beaten egg, roll in bread crumbs and pan fry. Place in rectangular, flat oven dish, cover with asparagus tips and cheese slices. Whip heavy cream, blend with hollandaise, pour over contents of oven dish. Bake at 300° 20 minutes. Serves 5.

GRAPE SHERBET

(from the Smiths)

2 quarts grape juice
1-2 cups sugar, to taste juice of 3 lemons
5 cups half-and-half

Blend ingredients except cream, pour slowly into half-and-half. Blend well, but very slowly, so mixture won't curdle. Process in ice cream maker. Serves 8.

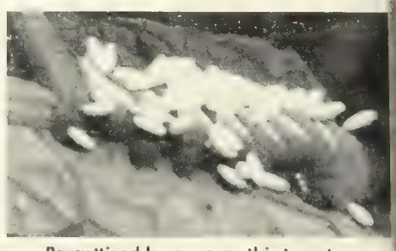
The tomato's defender

How wasps save tomatoes...
No more hay fever... September springtime...
One hundred and one houseplants... Historic American tree...

Stop sneezing!

Along with the good things of midsummer come a few of questionable merit—hay fever, for instance. Nobody believes any more that goldenrod causes hay fever—grasses and ragweed flowering at the same time are responsible. Mold is another very common but often unrecognized source of the irritation. Growing on damp, decaying vegetable matter, molds release billions of spores, and it is these that cause the trouble. So, if you're at all susceptible to the irritants that produce hay fever, don't tempt fate by turning over your compost heap if there's any sign of mold in it. Better yet, wear a pollen mask whenever there is any indication of pollen or mold spores floating around in the air. The 3M pollen mask is available at drugstores for $1.95 per package of ten masks.

Wasps knock out tomato worms



Parasitized by a wasp, this tomato hornworm will chew no more.

Tomato plants—the leaves, growing shoots, and maturing fruit—disappear at a great rate into the hungry jaws of the tomato hornworm. Although it's as big as a person's forefinger, this caterpillar is hard to spot since it is the exact color of the plant it feeds on. Once found, it may be knocked to the ground and dispatched with a hoe or trowel. However, any hornworm studded with white projections the size of rice grains, like the one above, should be left alone. The odd-looking knobs are cocoons of a tiny wasp that preys on the caterpillar. Weeks earlier, a female wasp had laid its eggs in the hornworm's body. These hatched and the larvae, after quite literally eating out the worm's insides, went into their dormant stage in these projecting pupal cases. The hornworm is doomed and already past chomping on tomatoes. Leave it alone, so the wasps can mature, and they'll be on hand to take care of next year's crop of hornworms.

Oddly lobed leaves, some shaped like mittens, characterize the sassafras.

The tree that guided the Pilgrims

The sassafras is a native American tree that drew more attention in the early days than it does at present. Early explorers of the North American continent discovered the merits—medicinal and flavorsome—of this tree with spicily aromatic leaves, bark, and roots. In the early 17th century, ships from England visited the shores of what was to become the U.S. and returned with cargoes of sassafras roots. Navigators of these same ships guided the first settlers to the shore of Massachusetts Bay, and that's how it all began. As a landscape tree, sassafras has its limitations. It sends up an abundance of root sprouts, creating a weedy tangle that only birds and rabbits appreciate. Restricted to a single trunk, though, sassafras becomes an interesting, small-to-medium-sized tree with rugged bark, oddly lobed leaves, and clusters of yellow flowers in spring.

Springtime in September

The American Horticultural Society is planning a garden and wildlife tour of South Africa. This will be in September, 1975, which is springtime down there below the equator. Gardeners the world over grow a long list of South African plants without giving them a second thought. Gladiolus, calla lilies, arctotis, and gazanias are just a few of the hundreds of plants that have come to us from the tip of Africa that divides the Indian Ocean from the Atlantic. Our growing season is coming to an end as theirs is beginning, so it's a good time for the typical gardener's holiday—looking at gardens. The tour will leave New York September 6 and return on the 28th. Dr. Richard H. Pough, the well-known naturalist, will act as guide, so ample attention will be given to birds and other wildlife, as well as plants. For full information, write The American Horticultural Society, Mt. Vernon, Va. 22121.

One hundred house plants, plus

All the usual house plants, plus several that most of us have never heard of, are given affectionate consideration in 101 Flowering Houseplants Anyone Can Grow (Fawcett, $2.25). Thomas H. Everett, Horticultural Specialist of the New York Botanical Garden, has summarized the wisdom of his long experience in making this selection. The clear, concise Everett manner—well known from his other books—leaves no question unanswered. There are crisp color photographs, also a list of suppliers for plants and materials.

...the ideal way to buy your presents from The Metropolitan Museum

Every three months—four times a year—the Museum will announce by mail remarkable new replicas—exact copies of Museum originals: sculpture, decorative objects, tableware, and ornaments.

The variety will be extraordinary: ancient jewelry in gold and silver; Oriental and European porcelain; early American glass in crystal and rare colors; bronze from Egypt, Greece, China, and the medieval world; silver, pewter, brass, and pottery from Colonial America.

These copies, often produced by the same techniques used for the originals, are made by artist-craftsmen working under the Museum's direct supervision. The care taken in production frequently limits the quantity, and the majority of replicas can be bought only by mail or at the Museum. (Above: Hippopotamus, brilliant blue faience decorated with lotus flowers. Length 8", $19.75 plus $1.25 shipping.)

To receive all of the advance announcements to be issued during the next year, send the coupon below with one dollar to cover mailing.

On September 1, you will receive the first of these, the 116 page Christmas Catalogue. A brilliant array of new presents includes an ancient Egyptian necklace of blue lotus flowers; golden stags, panthers, lions, and griffins from the Scythian treasure hoard; needlework kits of a tiger from a Chinese ceremonial banner, and puppies and kittens from a New England rug; a rose and a star in stained glass; a book of Persian miniatures in full color and gold; a bronze Etruscan acrobat; art nouveau stationery; a new cookbook, To the King's Taste, and next year's engagement calendar, Secret Gardens. In addition, there is an unparalleled selection of Christmas cards.

255 Gracie Station, New York 10028 C2

How active people start the day

A great cook, DR. LAURENCE MOREHOUSE Total Fitness in 30 Minutes a Week makes his own omelette breakfast. Leaves the eggs out overnight so they will be room temperature. Cooks them quickly in sweet butter and sprinkles with ground salt and pepper. He drinks Sanka and low fat milk and eats a piece of Good Stuff bread from Venice, California. DON FELIPE GONZALEZ sprinkles Tio Pepe on his scrambled eggs.

Fruit always starts breakfast for TERRY AND DENNIS STANFILL (he is chairman of 20th-Century Fox). They like blueberries and cream, papayas with strawberries or fresh sliced pineapple. After this Canadian bacon with poached eggs topped with green pepper and chopped chives. Sunday breakfast is special; peaches whizzed in the blender with champagne and a puffed oven pancake cut in wedges:

Mix half a cup of flour and half a cup of milk with 2 lightly beaten eggs and a dash of nutmeg until it is a lumpy consistency. Melt 4 tablespoons butter in a 12-inch skillet, add batter and bake in a medium oven for 15 minutes. Sprinkle with lemon juice and confectioners sugar.

Fresh stewed prunes, which have had wafer thin slices of lemon added during the last five minutes of cooking, served ice cold start breakfast for MRS. GORDON DOUGLAS (she is MARY KRUMING the jewelry designer). Fresh orange juice, poached eggs on rye, and freshly ground coffee with hot raw milk whipped up with a beater complete the meal. Chopped calves liver quickly sautéed in bacon fat and tossed with chopped cooked bacon, green onions, and a sprinkling of thyme makes a favorite breakfast for MRS. JAMES ALLEN BARNETT who adds a dash of Worcestershire sauce, a garnish of lemon and parsley. For fruit, sliced strawberries and oranges blended with a little honey.

Always on a diet BERT GREENE (The Store Cookbook) sips a liquid breakfast. In a blender he whips up four prunes, 1 cup skimmed milk, 1 tablespoon organic honey, and 3 ice cubes for 5 minutes. Drinks it along with 4 vitamin pills. His colleague DENNIS VAUGHAN (they run The Store in Amagansett) eats half a grapefruit with a dab of caviar and a dollop of sour cream on top for breakfast each day.

A creature of habit MRS. ALFRED BLOOMINGDALE breakfasts on fresh orange juice, a piece of Armenian pita bread, buttered and toasted, and a cup of black Yuban coffee with wheat germ.

Creamed finnan haddie on an English muffin with fried green tomatoes is a breakfast favorite of ILKA CHASE and her husband DR. NORTON S. BROWN.

Whisking up a Health Orange drink for breakfast is the first job for SUSAN HOLLAND who teaches cooking in Washington. To freshly squeezed orange juice in the blender add honey and brewer's yeast to taste (about 1 teaspoon of each) and whiz up. Stir in toasted sesame or sunflower seeds or sprinkle them on top.

At home ARLENE DAHL likes a broiled grapefruit half with brown sugar together with vanilla yoghurt with half an apple sliced on top; tisane, herb tea, or sanka.

When POLLY BERGEN'S on a diet she has a scrambled egg, dry toast, a glass of grapefruit juice, and a cup of coffee with milk. When not dieting she has 2 scrambled eggs, 2 pieces crisp bacon, toast with butter every third day.

Staggering the breakfast hour is popular with designer BONNIE CASHIN who has her first cup of tea at five. Spreads breakfast over two hours with a bowl of Product 19 and wheat germ, tea or coffee at 7:30 and later half a grapefruit.

time drinkers was known as a "Perfect." If you use tequila for this splendid drink use 1½ ounces (1 jigger) of tequila and ½ ounce each of sweet and dry vermouth plus a dash of bitters. It's good!

Years ago the Tequila Daisy was a specialty of Hussong's Cantina, in Ensenada, where Pancho the bartender ran up hundreds of them every day for thirsty turistas.

TEQUILA DAISY

2 ounces tequila
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 tablespoon grenadine
1 ounce club soda

Shake all ingredients vigorously with plenty of cracked ice, and strain into a chilled cocktail glass. It will have a little foam on top from the club soda, a lovely pink color from the grenadine, and a delicious flavor from the combination of the ingredients.

Tequila is especially good in the Mexican version of the ever-popular Bloody Mary, sometimes called Bloody Matador. Because of its natural spicy taste, the drink does not need such additions as Worcestershire sauce, Tabasco, pepper, and so on. A little salt and a bit of lemon or lime juice are sufficient. However, if more heat is needed, add a few drops of the liquid from a tin of chiles Jalapeñas—they're hot!

BLOODY MATADOR

1½ ounces tequila
3 ounces tomato juice
1 tablespoon (or more) lemon or lime juice
pinch of salt

Shake well with plenty of crushed ice, and pour over the rocks in an Old-Fashioned glass. Many admirers of Bloody Marys do not realize that the original formula was always shaken well and strained out. Try it next time, and you'll never make it any other way. A drink simply called Matador, uses pineapple juice instead of tomato juice, along with lime juice. It is shaken and served the same way.

Among the most time-honored of all mixed drinks are those called Sours. There are all sorts of formulas for the proportions of sweet, sour, and spirit, but for a good rule of thumb I like 1 part sweet, 2 parts sour, 8 parts spirit. A sour is particularly refreshing made with tequila.

TEQUILA SOUR

½ ounce simple syrup (or bar sugar)
1 ounce lemon juice
4 ounces tequila

Mix ingredients well in a bar glass with ice; strain over ice cubes in an Old-Fashioned glass. Garnish with a wedge of lemon or lime.

Tequila lends itself admirably to Collinses, Fizzes, and Rickeys. Even Juleps, made in the traditional manner with mint leaves and sugar muddled together are most satisfactory. Frozen Daiquiris (Tequiris) are excellent with tequila, as are other rum mixtures.

The mixture of spirits and champagne has a long and delightful history. Cognac and champagne is known as a "King's Peg"; gin and champagne as a "Queen's Peg." So try a new blend for a remarkably good apéritif—"Montezuma's Peg." In a large [illegible] place a lump of ice. Add a jigger (or to taste) of Tequila and fill with iced champagne. It's a beauty in the morning.

There may never be a more propitious time to invest in Waterford.

Isn't it time you started collecting signed originals by Waterford?

It gathers the light of ten thousand yesterdays to illuminate ten thousand tomorrows.

Each piece of Waterford crystal is a signed work of art, blown, cut and made wholly by hand, with heart.

The dreams it evokes in its play of light!

Every single facet is cut by hand in Ireland, just the way Waterford museum pieces were cut in the distant past.

Each piece of Waterford is an investment in beauty that will enchant you now; and reward you ever after as it grows in value.

We make furniture for lovers

Our "Royal Colony" tables score big with lovers of the light, airy look that makes a room more spacious. Simulated bamboo, often accented with functional cane shelves, is happily married to bevelled-edge glass tops. It's a chic look you'll know you can't afford until you know Lane's incredibly low price. The collection includes square, bunching cocktail tables, a console and an etagere. Each table is available in wood or antique white or yellow finishes. Sofa and chair are by Pearson, a division of Lane. For color literature of Lane furniture, send 25¢ to The Lane Co., Inc., Dept. 5 reasons your next dishwasher should be a KitchenAid.

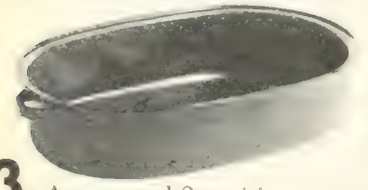
1. A Soak Cycle to clean crusty pots and pans.

2. Fan-circulated, hot-air drying that's safe for fine china and good plastics. Plus an Energy Saver.



3. A patented 9-position upper rack that lets you load big or odd-shaped items many other dishwashers can't handle.

4. TriDura®, a 3-coat premium porcelain-on-steel interior that detergents can't fade and knives and forks can't scratch.

5. A heavy duty ½ hp motor that will stand up under hard daily use. So tough, it's warranted for 5 years. If the motor should fail during the first year, it will be repaired or replaced without charge; during the next four years you'd pay only for labor.

HORST

An all-white living room, a definite color, the beginning of a rainbow. The pillows in clear sherbet tones are punctuation marks in a background for people and contemporary art. Architect Keith Kroeger and interior designer Filippa Naess remodeled this city apartment to be easy with light and air, with color used in many different ways (see page 88). The paintings in the living room are selectively lit from above, sometimes one, sometimes another. They're hung from above so they can be moved. The hearts are by Jim Dine. Over the simplified fireplace (it used to be a Tudor monster) hangs a blue Yves Klein. Mirrored and lacquered tables, like the rest of the furniture in this picture, were designed by Mrs. Naess and Mark Hampton.

Do you know everything you should about carbohydrates?

The most effective fuel for muscular exercise. The least expensive source of energy

By Eloise R. Trescher, RD

Carbohydrates, quite simply, furnish energy. And where would we be without energy? Protein, fat, and alcohol also supply energy, but are less economical sources than carbohydrates. Carbohydrates are the primary and most efficient fuel for muscular exercise in humans.

Composed of carbon, hydrogen, and oxygen, carbohydrates have been aiding man's diet for thousands of years. As early as 8000 B.C. the cultivation of wild wheats in western Asia freed man of his dependence on hunting and foraging for other foods. Rice has also been a staple in Asia since early times, while in the Americas ancient civilizations grew maize and discovered the value of legumes and potatoes. Honey, another carbohydrate, was used centuries ago but only by royalty and for ceremonial occasions. Today honey is far better spread—from the covering of bread to the spoonfuls on cereal and in tea.

We get carbohydrates from food. They are widely distributed in the vegetable kingdom, and are the least expensive source of energy. The main sources of carbohydrates are starches, sugars, and celluloses. Below, a more detailed guide to help you find carbohydrates when you need them, which is always.

With such a wide variety of foods from which to choose carbohydrates, it is wise to choose those that provide other nutrients. Whole of all grains, such as wheat, rye, barley, corn, buckwheat, flax, millet, rice, and oats. In foods made from grains as flours, meals, breads, and other bakery products, breakfast cereals, noodles, the Italian pastas as macaroni and spaghetti, and the more American grits and hominy, nuts, soybeans, dry beans and peas, white and sweet potatoes, and other vegetables such as broccoli, carrots, kale, okra, parsnips, pumpkin, and turnips.

Sugars
found in beet and cane sugars, honey, maple and corn syrups, and molasses. In products made from sugar such as jams, jellies, preserves, marmalades, candy and other sweets. In fruits, fresh, canned, and dried; and in fruit juices.

Celluloses,
the husks of cereal grains, and the seeds, skins, and fibrous portions of vegetables and fruits. These indigestible and complex substances furnish bulk and roughage in the diet, and they play an important part in aiding elimination.

About carbohydrates

grains are good sources of protein, carbohydrate, thiamin, riboflavin, niacin, iron, and roughage, and when sprouted they supply some ascorbic acid. Bakery products should be made with whole grain or enriched flour. Flours may be labeled "enriched" when prescribed amounts of thiamin, riboflavin, niacin, an iron are added to replace those nutrients removed in the refining process. Dried beans, soy beans, and peas provide the nutrients of whole grains but contribute more protein and iron.

Sugar, honey, jams, jellies, marmalades, preserves, maple and other syrups are a concentrated source of carbohydrates and add variety to the diet. However, they are often referred to as "empty calories" as their contribution of other nutrients is negligible. Remember this when you are giving your child a sweet snack in the afternoon. Instead of a soft drink or a candy bar, why not peel a banana or make a peanut butter and jelly sandwich? The bread, if it is whole grain or enriched, saves the day nutritionally; the jelly is empty but tastes good. Or keep a jar of a mixture of raisins and nuts. Really delicious, you could use ⅓ raisins, ⅓ nuts, ⅓ chocolate bits.

Other sugars such as sorghum and blackstrap molasses furnish carbohydrates, small amounts of calcium, appreciable amounts of iron, and traces of some of the vitamins of the B-complex.

Fruits and vegetables provide carbohydrates, minerals, vitamins, water, bulk, and roughage in our diets. Most are relatively low in calories. The juices of fruits and vegetables have all the properties of the foods from which they are made, minus bulk and roughage, but they are a more concentrated source of calories. If you are trying to lose weight, why not an orange rather than a glass of orange juice?

Most of the available carbohydrates in our bodies are in the form of glycogen in the skeletal muscles, in the cardiac muscles, and in the smooth muscles. The remainings present in the manufacturing a distributing systems, in the li as glycogen, and in the blood a extra-cellular fluids as gluco Glycogen in the liver is used a fuel, has a protective and detoxi ing action, and helps regulate p tein, and fat metabolism. Starv tion and disease can deprive t liver of glycogen and so destroy defenses against many diseases a companied by toxemias caused certain bacteria.

An adequate intake of carboh drate spares protein. Less prote is necessary in the diet when ge erous amounts of carbohydrat are included. When carbohydrat to the liver are limited, fats cann be completely broken down a ketone bodies are formed, whic if in excess of the amounts th can be oxidized by the peripher tissues, accumulate in the bloo High levels of ketone bodies cau acidosis and are toxic to tissu such as the brain.

Ketosis can be caused by hig fat/low carbohydrate diet, b starvation, by glycogen storag disease, by renal glycosuria, b insulin hypoglycemia, in certai conditions where metabolic re quirements are increased such a rapid growth, fever, and cold ex posure and some diseases such a diabetes mellitus.

Amounts of carbohydrates tha can be stored in the body are small but they perform a protective rol in some of the most vital organ such as the heart, the liver, and th central nervous system. Because o the limited amounts of carbohy drates that can be stored in th body it is best to replace them daily, as used. Dr. Robert Good hart of the New York Academy o Medicine suggests that a minimum of 100 grams of digestible carbo hydrate seems wise in order to avoid ketosis, excessive protein breakdown, involuntary water loss or dehydration, and other prob lems.

Any of the following combinations would provide about 100 grams of carbohydrates for a day

"Less protein is necessary in the diet when generous amounts of carbohydrates are included"

Include carbohydrates in your diet every day. Choose them by the company they keep. Those that provide additional nutrients are your best choice.

Grains rich in carbohydrates and products made from grains are excellent meat extenders, helping you save on that meat bill while offering many nutrients. I even like bulgar wheat as a breakfast cereal. It is a wheat pilaf that can be purchased at any large grocery store. Bulgar wheat, which was known long before the days of Genghis Khan, has been a staple food of Eastern peoples for many centuries. For dinner I especially like this wheat pilaf recipe from Fisher Mills, Incorporated.

Armenian Kufte

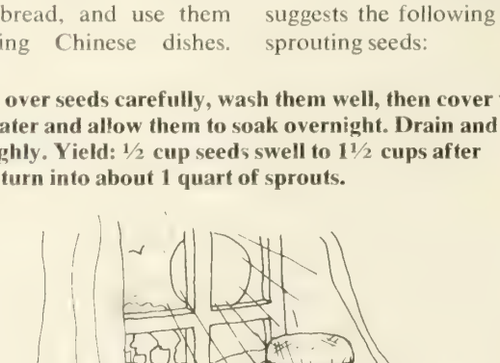
1 cup wheat pilaf, uncooked
1½ pounds ground lamb or beef
1 teaspoon salt
a dash pepper
1 small onion chopped
2 tablespoons finely chopped almonds
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
2 tablespoons currants
¼ teaspoon allspice
3 cups water
1 cup tomato juice
1 packet spices and chicken soup ingredients (found in box of wheat pilaf)

Blend well the pilaf, meat, salt, and pepper. Form into balls (about 18). Make depression in center and stuff each ball with filling made by combining onion, sautéed in oil until clear, nuts, parsley, currants, and allspice. Bring meat around stuffing to seal. Drop gently into boiling water, tomato juice, and contents of packet of spices, and chicken soup ingredients. Cover. Simmer 25 minutes. Remove meat balls and thicken the gravy. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Sprouted seeds are another carbohydrate that is becoming more popular, probably because they can be used in so many ways. Try them on sandwiches instead of using lettuce, in salads, omelettes, homemade bread, and use them when making Chinese dishes. Many seeds may be sprouted, but those that produce the most delicate sprouts are from mung beans, wheat, and alfalfa.

Miki Bond, a Maryland expert who sprouts just about everything, suggests the following method for sprouting seeds:

Always pick over seeds carefully, wash them well, then cover with lukewarm water and allow them to soak overnight. Drain and rinse thoroughly. Yield: ½ cup seeds swell to 1½ cups after soaking and turn into about 1 quart of sprouts.



Place 2 to 3 tablespoons soaked seeds in a quart jar. Cover the top with cheesecloth. Wrap the jar in aluminum foil and place it on its side somewhere warm and dark. Two to three times a day put lukewarm water in the jar, swirl it around, and pour off excess water. Seeds should be moist but not wet. Sprouts develop in 3 to 5 days. When the first young leaves appear, place in direct sunlight for the development of chlorophyll. Wait 8 hours after last rinsing before refrigerating in a closed container.

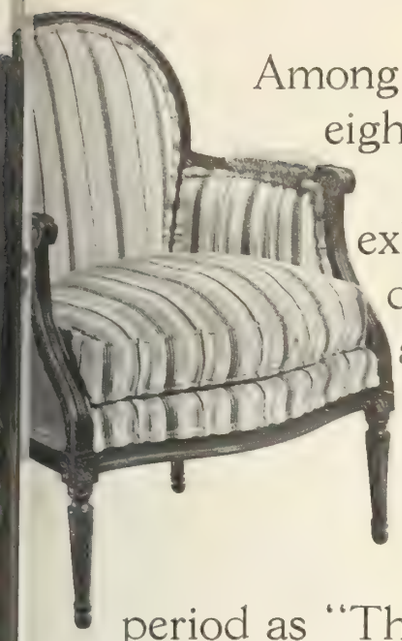
th Century French reproductions.



Among antiques of the eighteenth century, those of France exhibited such individual artistry and diversity of form and character that the connoisseur refers to this period as "The Golden Age". The secretary pictured here in a ıker, Knapp & Tubbs showroom ıs reproduced from one in the ıker Museum. The arched cresting d incised mouldings faithfully fol- w the nuances of the original.

The Bergère shown above, a most aracteristic form of Louis XVI ating, was first created to permit dies of the day to sit comfortably hile displaying their costumes to ll effect.

The Louis XV stool is also a delicate ample of handcraftsmanship, as is ıe Empire refraîschissoir, a table sed in the dining room to chill wine.

No other furniture requires such aried skills to faithfully reproduce. rom sophisticated court furniture to provincial pieces of the countryside, from the refined carving to the wood and painted finishes, authenticity rests in the hands of each Baker artist and craftsman.

The Eighteenth Century French collection and our English, American and Far East collections may be seen at select stores and, through your interior designer, at the Baker, Knapp & Tubbs showrooms in the cities listed below.

A 400-page two volume casebound catalogue of over one thousand Baker designs is available for fifteen

How to cut a task down to your size, get it done and on time

A sure-fire system by Dr. Robert Tyson

Everybody has things to do, work, household, family responsibilities, and we all know that feeling that sometimes it's all too much. Things won't get you down, says Dr. Robert Tyson, if you tackle chores on a two-goal basis. Here he explains a plan that leaves you with a comfortable feeling of satisfaction and serenity at the end of the day.

Face the reluctance and tension of getting down to chores, firmly and squarely. Endure it. In a short time it will give way to real satisfaction.

Here is a simple example of action to achieve a given task. The wife of an executive, who is transferred by his company every few years, learned to face the overwhelming task of packing up and moving house frequently. Once she fixed the moving date, she asked the moving company to send packing crates in advance to the house. She programed packing over three weeks, from Monday to Friday, giving herself a break over the weekends for recreation with the rest of the family. Assigning thirty crates logically for separate collections of household items—the china and glass, linens, books, for instance—she then set herself a specific task for each day. To pack up a group of items and fill two crates. When the task was finished, she went on to more interesting projects for the rest of the day. In this simple fashion she set herself: 1. The distant goal, the total hou packed up. 2. The near goal fo day, two crates at a time. Im ately this process changed he look. The task, when cut do 24-hour size, offers satisfactio job well done at the end of single day. Anxiety is relieved knowledge that this system ge whole job done in time.

Knowledge of results is the e sion for this—having a plan th you know when you've done e and are finished! Industrial ps ogists have compared two grou workers. The first group had duction goal (Continued on pag

Recycle aluminum

Old aluminum cans are the best trash we have. A ton is worth $300 or more. Recyclers brought back 2.3 billion cans last year to 1,300 centers in 42 states (a list of centers is available from Dept. O, Aluminum Assn., 750 Third Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017), and got paid about $14 million for them. They can be turned back into aluminum ingots for 5 percent of the energy it took to make them in the first place. Soon cities will be saving aluminum, too. Twenty-seven cities have municipal waste-recovery systems planned or under construction, to separate and save metal, glass, and aluminum, and to burn the rest of the trash as fuel to power generators.

Michael E. Reynolds of Taos, New Mexico, has patented another way of recycling for his company, World Energy and Materials. He lays aluminum cans like bricks on either side of a panel of insulation, to build house walls (one example below). Or he binds steel cans with wire and cement to make low-cost building blocks, above, for bearing walls. He has built eight houses already—that's one, above left. People seem to be standing in line for more. Banks make standard mortgage loans on them.

The Birds

"Birds are far more than cardinals and orioles t brighten the garden," ornithologist Roger Tory Pete son told the Earthcare conference recently held b the Sierra Club and the National Audubon Society t explore the problems and practical choices we wi soon face in keeping the earth, living within an energ income we now know is finite. "They are indicator of the environment, a sort of ecological litmus pape They reflect changes in the ecosystem rather quickly They are an early warning system, sending out sig nals." Are there too few kinds? Something has hap pened to drive off or kill the more responsive one (early coal miners carried canaries to warn them deadly coal gas). Are they all scavengers? Nearb there's pollution, garbage, potential disease. Are ther no birds? Then people had better watch out, becaus what is bad for birds is ultimately bad for people

Food time-savers

- Pick all the salad ingredients into a big plastic bag as you wander through the garden—lettuce, spinach, parsley, chives, dill, in bite-sized chunks. Rinse when you get back to the house, put in the refrigerator to crisp until dinner time.
- Use a pressure cooker. Twenty minutes for potatoes, 45 for stew meat straight from the freezer. Less fuel used, less heat produced.
- Freeze chicken stock in ice-cube trays. Two cubes, 2 ripe tomatoes (pe some sour cream, some dill whirled together in the blender make a quick, cold soup for two.
- Small appliances—a hot plate, a broiler, a toaster—frequently save ene well as heat. Consider using one instead of heating up the whole stove.

Magnavox. Quality in every detail.

Look ma, no fingerprints.

Over the years, we've talked to many women about refrigerators. And one point that almost always comes up is fingerprints on the door. So we decided to do something about them.

Now you can buy a Whirlpool refrigerator-freezer that has a textured steel door. It's strong. It's attractive. But best of all it's designed to minimize the fingerprint problem.

And if you don't believe us, go down to one of our dealers and put your hand on the door. You'll see what we mean.

And of course that's just the beginning of all the benefits you'll enjoy with a new Whirlpool refrigerator-freezer.

Things like: Our Activated Charcoal Filter that helps control odor and flavor transfer from food to food. Handy adjustable shelves for convenient shelving throughout the refrigerator. Crispers with special humidity seals to help keep vegetables from drying out. The Whirlpool easy-to-clean, long-lasting porcelain enameled interior.

And when you combine these with everything else we offer, well, you're talking about one of the best refrigerators ever made.

"Take about ten minutes out of each hour to read, relax, or do something just for fun. Let your muscles go limp in those ten minutes, too" set a whole month ahead. The second group had a production goal set one week ahead. You've guessed it. The group with a near goal outproduced the first group by a large margin, and got more satisfaction out of it, too.

How to cut a task down to your size continued from page 28

How to set your two goals?
Face your particular problems squarely. A pile of unanswered letters? Sort them out. Deal them into a number of piles, on your desk, a table, or on the floor if necessary. Pile 1 will be for the most urgent letters. Pile 3 is for those that can wait. An in-between pile 2 is for those that require action, but not quite as urgently as the first pile.

Put each pile into a separate large envelope with its number on it and the number of letters it contains. Make a good guess as to how many of the letters in the first envelope you can take care of today, tomorrow, and the next day. Each day do that day's "assignment." And each day notice carefully the amazing rewards that come from knowledge of results!

If you have work to do, household chores, a closet to sort out, letters to write, a book to read, whatever there is in your special collection of things to do: Face it, analyze it, sort it out, and assign a reasonable portion of the job for each working day. Perhaps you'll want to use more envelopes, a file drawer with folders, or boxes into which items or slips of paper can be sorted. A large desk calendar will let you jot down your "assignments" and come to them in due time.

Notice that a lot depends on the difficulty of each obligation. You can do a lot of simple pieces of work in one day, but perhaps only a part of a big task in each 24-hour period. The two-goal plan is truly magical in its effects. It will let you live in 24-hour compartments that are a set-up for earning relief from your commitments and obligations. Literally, it lets you be a success every single day.

Finally, some guidelines to the two-goal system.
Before you start each day, get organized. Assemble at your desk or other place of work all the things you'll need: supplies, stationery, stamps, sewing items. Arrange a good light, too. This will help you avoid wasting time getting up and searching. If you can manage to do so, work in the same place every day. The same chair, the same desk, and the same room help you get in the mood for tackling things. Don't force yourself. Except in an emergency, be a good "boss" for yourself. You're a human being, not a machine to start and keep going at the pressure of a button. Machines usually don't need a rest, but you do. A grim stick-to-it-through-thick-and-thin attitude may sound noble, but it will weary you, wear you down, and get you into a state of mind that actually obstructs your efforts.

To be efficient, you simply must take time out. Plan your rest p riods in advance. If your work easy, pleasant, and smooth-flowin perhaps you won't need to both with formal rest periods. Howeve if it's more difficult, take about te minutes out of each hour to rea relax, or do something just for fu Let your muscles go limp in tho: ten minutes, too.

Take tabs on incoming task As each new job, letter, or oth obligation comes your way, make habit of jotting it down on a pa you keep with you—one job on page so it will be easy to take ca of. Then transfer your note to day on your calendar, or put it in file folder or an envelope or bo depending on what system you lik best. As you do this, pay particu lar attention each time to the eno mous comfort of knowing that eac obligation has its place in you schedule, and that you can tak care of it at the right time.

So as you can see, you can reall get things done. ■

Dutch Boy® Latex Stain beats oil stains two ways.

Protects longer.

At the Dutch Boy testing fields oil stain and Dutch Boy Latex Stain had a duel in the sun, wind, and freezing cold for 3 years. Look at the pictures of the actual boards and judge the results for yourself.

As you can see, the oil stain has faded and left the wood exposed in several spots.

Meanwhile Dutch Boy is still giving good protection. And the colors are rich and strong.

Quality. The endangered species.

his country may be in danger. We could be sing something we can't afford to lose.

Once, when a man produced a product it as the best he could possibly make. He stood ehind it with pride. He lived a simple idea: Do right or don't do it at all. Nobody told him that. o government agency dictated it. And it built a andard of living for all the world to aim at.

Now that idea is threatened. Today that ride in workmanship, in the quality of things, is danger of slowly slipping away.

However, there are companies, actually any companies, that are working harder today an ever before to preserve quality in everything ey make.

We feel that Whirlpool Corporation is such company. And we feel it so strongly that we ave dedicated our entire company to the pres-rvation of quality. And that means more than st making quality dishwashers, dryers, auto-natic washers, refrigerators, freezers, ranges, compactors and air conditioners. We mean quality in everything we do.

That's why in 1967 we initiated our Cool Line service. Toll-free help that's available to you anytime. Just call with any questions or problems you might have concerning any Whirlpool appliance. The number is 800-253-1301. In Michigan, 800-632-2243.

That's why we have a Quality Control Department that assures you of appliances you can count on. Day in and day out.

That's why we have a simplified letter warranty that's easy to understand, easy to use.

That's why we have Whirlpool Tech-Care service. A franchised service network which means all the help you ever need is usually no more than minutes away.

Yes, quality may be endangered in many places. But at Whirlpool we simply won't let it die. It's too important.

And it means too much to all of us.

The Playpen
It's not for everyone

It's for people who lead their lives their own way—in style and comfort. People who are glad they're grown-up. Superbly constructed for extra softness with cushion-within-a-cushion seats and plump, wedge-shaped backs, this Selig original takes up no more space than a standard sofa, table and pair of chairs. Designed for easy living, the Playpen can be arranged and rearranged to suit any mood. The armless chairs, corner sections and ottomans with casters recombine beautifully to create sofas, loveseats, sectional, or individual seating. Separately, or together, the ten pieces look as good as they feel. And will stay good looking because they're treated with SCOTCHGARD Velvet Protector, which means that watery and oily stains can be blotted away. Deep stains can be spot cleaned easily, leaving the fabric smooth and fresh looking. Covered in plush 100% cotton velvet, the Playpen comes in thirteen lucky colors. Look for it at fine stores near you. For our Folio of Contemporary Designs send $1.00 to Dept. 9-HG, Selig, Leominster, Massachusetts 01453.

How to watch your watts

Controlling your light bill

By Sandra Oddo

A penny saved is a penny earned—or at least it used to be. Nowadays, as electric bills go up and up, a watt saved is more than a penny earned. Nearly a quarter of the energy spent in the U.S. goes for residential uses. It would be a lot easier for us to cut our own electrical expenditures and conserve some of that energy if there were a reasonably simple formula by which we could figure out which appliances cost what, in energy.

Well, there is, a three-step process that starts with the plate screwed into some unobtrusive place on every electrical appliance you have. Here goes:

1. The plate lists voltage and amperage for the appliance. If you multiply one by the other, you get the wattage that the appliance uses. For example, a blender might say "115 volts, 3 amps." The blender, therefore, uses 345 watts of power.

2. To get the kilowatt hours—the figure you are charged for—you divide the wattage by 1000, then you multiply it by the number of hours you used the appliance. To take the blender again: 345 watts divided by 1000 is .345. If you used the blender 2 hours this month that means you will be charged for .690 kilowatt hours (.7 to round it off) of electricity.

3. Multiply the kilowatt hours by your electrical rate—say 9¢—and you have how much your blender cost to run: 6.3¢.

If all that arithmetic seems a bit much, here are two substitute aids, a rule of thumb and a table. The rule of thumb: When electricity turns to heat or cold—in a radiator, a range, a clothes drier, a refrigerator—it is expensive. When it turns a motor—a mixer, a blender, a washing machine—it is cheap.

The table: a list of wattages and costs (based on 9¢ a kilowatt hour) for appliances and uses. Your own may differ because of size, horsepower, or patterns of use, but by comparing you can figure out where your electricity is going.

What better way is there to celebrate our Bicentennial than to rediscover your rich heritage as an American? And to bring some of it right into your home? That's why Pennsylvania House has created this indispensable Collector's Book. 288 lavish pages. 619 color photographs. With this book, you can:

See the historic American home styles—from New England to California. With six expert guides, such as Carolyn Bishop, home furnishings and equipment editor of Family Circle. And Helene Brown, interior design editor of American Home. You'll see splendid Georgian mansions, romantic Victorian homes, famous townhouses and pioneer homes. Longfellow's home and Lincoln's home.

You'll learn how to give a room an elegant look. Or a nostalgic country look. Discover the decorating pow of red, white and blue. See how to make the most of a small room or apartment. And how to mix the old and the new.

You'll get original ideas in the six Decorator's Notebooks on subjects like windows, walls, floors, fireplaces, etc. You'll learn about color and wood finishes. You'll find an easy way to plan a room. Even how to care for furniture.

And you'll see the exquisitely crafted line of American Traditional furniture by Pennsylvania House. And learn the fascinating history behind these authentic designs.

You can get this fabulous Collector's Book by sending $7.50, along with the coupon on the opposite page, to Pennsylvania House. Or you can get it free simply by going to one of the Pennsylvania House dealers listed on the opposite page.

Do you really want to see the world through rose-tinted spectacles? Are blue eyes more sensitive than brown eyes? Do you ever experience indoor glare?

How, why, and when to choose sunglasses

Most people own a pair of shades these days, whether for glamour, for anonymity, to intrigue people, to separate you from the world, to conceal wrinkles, or—their original purpose—to protect your eyes from glare.

The main question about sunglasses today is what color to choose, how dark, and when to wear them. And now here's a surprise. "It used to be felt that certain colors, the pinks and the blues for instance, were not only not helpful, but harmful," says Dr. William C. Cooper, Assistant Professor of Ophthalmology at Columbia Presbyterian Hospital and in private practice in New York. "This is no longer felt to be true. The lighter tints filter less and are therefore less effective, but we no longer believe that they are harmful.

"Wearing tinted glasses depends upon the environment in which you wish to wear them. At the beach, on the water, or skiing, where the glare is particularly strong, a very dark tint is required. For normal city wearing, where there's a great deal of shadow and not a lot of direct or reflected light, then such a dark tint is not necessary.

"The amount of tint is registered by the percentage of filtration of light—and for very bright light, as at the beach or on ski slopes, upwards of 85 percent filtration is required to get glare protection. This is a very dark tint—so dark that you cannot see a person's eyes through the glasses, and so dark that you cannot wear them indoors without groping your way around.

"And this is where choice of color is important—the only two colors that will tint this dark are browns and grays. The other colors cannot be as densely tinted, so are unsuitable for very bright glare." (Gray also most accurately reproduces the actual color spectrum. American Optical's line of gray lenses is called "True Color."

The obvious conclusion one draws from this is that we should all have two pairs of tinted glasses —one very dark pair for the beach, for sailing, or for skiing and one lighter pair for everyday wear. Wonderful science has almost solved this problem for us, however. The latest sunglass discovery on the market is the photochromic lens—a glass that is impregnated with a photo-sensitive substance so that when light strikes the lens it darkens. These lenses come in degrees—a lesser amount of tochromic substance in one m it wearable indoors and out when light is not too bright; there's a stronger photochr lens that can be used exclus outdoors, going from a me tint to a very dense tint. (These lenses, however, cannot achieve the 85 percent filtratio quired in very bright glare they do not give perfect pr tion.)

One of the most dramatic provements provided by these photochromic lenses is in the of indoor glare—particularly rescent. "Most people who plain of indoor lighting difficu are suffering from fluores glare," says Dr. Cooper. "Ph chromic lenses have been helpful for this, and for in glare of any kind, because as amount of glare intensifies, th gree of tint in the lens incre Pale tinted glasses in any color also help prevent this kind of g —even the pinks, blues, greens."

So those delicately hued gla people are attracted to have s therapeutic as well as cosmetic But do be careful about what c you choose for your tint. W may look a wonderful match your wardrobe may do strange things to your mind. I experiment on a mink farm Cary, Ill., it was found that minks exposed to light throug deep pink glass became increas ly aggressive, difficult to man and in many instances actually cious. Whereas when some of minks were placed behind c blue plastic they became frie and docile. "The psychiatric lit

The Martex Master Plan. It started i

Wherever you are, whatever part of the house you're in, take a moment to look around you. And imagine how The Martex® Master Plan could transform the room you're in.

In the bedroom of course, your options are a bit more expected.

After all, The Master Plan did begin with sheets, pillowcases, bedspreads and comforters.

The Nature of Bakuba, our latest collection from The Design Works of Bedford Stuyvesant, makes the bed itself the focal point of this bedroom.

But if these same sheets were used on the walls, they'd give the room a totally different character.

Add table rounds and draperies and you change the room again.

Out of the bedroom? The Nature of Bakuba includes enough colors, patterns and—most important—combinations of these colors and patterns, to carry off any look you desire.

Here it brings a feeling of the outdoors to a greenhouse-dining room. But our jungle print could bring this same feeling to any closed-in space you choose.

If you're standing in your living room or den, perhaps what we've done here may kindle your imagination. You can turn a day bed into a cozy couch by slipcovering it with a quilted bedspread. Surround it with lots of pillows. And tie it all together with tall fabric-covered screens.

Actually your options are limited only by your imagination. That's the nice thing about The Martex Master Plan.

We know where it started. But no one knows where it can end.

ne bedroom. But it didn't end there.

"If you are near-sighted, you are likely to be more light-sensitive than a far-sighted person—near-sighted people's pupils are larger and therefore gather more light"

How, why, and when to choose sunglasses continued from page 40

ture is filled with reports that red is a vibrant, stimulating color," says Dr. Cooper. "Blue is more placid and soothing."

Which brings us to the next question—plastic or glass? The Federal Government now requires all lenses be impact-resistant, but this means glass has to be specially treated, making it heavier. Perhaps you will be able to choose from looking at this chart:

GLASS		PLASTIC
Advantages	Disadvantages	Advantages	Disadvantages
Cheaper Doesn't scratch	Heavier Less accurate prescription*	Very light More accurate prescription*	Scratches easily More expensive

*Prescriptions can be made more accurately in plastic lenses because they are molded in the lens, whereas glass lenses are ground, and the grinding process is less accurate.

Having decided what color to choose, and whether to have them in plastic or glass, the next question is, how big? "The eye, when wearing spectacles, gets accustomed to the size lens that the eye is continually exposed to," explains Dr. Cooper. "And the size of these lenses is usually governed by the frame one chooses to wear. The lenses are made from a base curve to which the eye gets used. Now, if you dramatically change the base curve of the lens you wear, even if the prescription is not altered in any way, you may have a great deal of difficulty in adjusting to this new base curve." In other words, if you put on very large glasses after being accustomed to small ones, you may become nauseated, dizzy, and unhappy. If you stick with them, and don't change back, then the eye can adjust. But be consistent.

The size of your glasses depends, of course, on the frame you choose. If possible, try on several types of frame in front of a full-length mirror—look for a shape that complements your facial structure. Try smiling with them on to see whether they hit your cheeks or ride up. Look down to the floor to see if they ride down your nose. If so, they need adjustment. If you are going to use them for sporting activities or driving, check to see that the peripheral side vision is good.

For those who wear contact lenses, the same rules about tint apply as for glasses. Dr. Cooper almost always prescribes tinted contact lenses for two reasons: "One, they are easier to see if they get lost; and two, because people who wear contact lenses are usually light-sensitive at first, since they are not accustomed to them—so a small degree of tint is helpful. A light tint can be worn indoors or out, the very dark tints can only be worn outdoors and must be changed as soon as you come inside."

One more tip—if you are near-sighted, you are likely to be more light-sensitive than a far-sighted person, because generally speaking, near-sighted people's pupils are larger and therefore gath more light.

Special note for blue eye

Did you know that blue eyes we the most sensitive? Not only light—because they contain le pigment than brown eyes and car absorb so well—but also to touc An ophthalmologist in a survey Great Britain recently found th the corneas of those with blue ey are more sensitive to touch tha those with brown eyes (thus co firming what has been suspected b doctors fitting patients with co tact lenses). So, combining all th together, what have we got? Blu eyed, near-sighted people are th ones who really need good su glasses to protect them from glar

How Much Younger Could You Really Look?

Aren't you sometimes curious? You've taken good care of yourself over the years. You've learned exactly the kind of clothes that look right on you. You've experimented with different kinds of makeup so you know how you like to look during the day and on special evenings out. But it's quite possible that you may not yet have discovered a special secret for looking as young as you possibly can.

Now may be the moment for you to discover the beautiful benefits of a mysterious beauty fluid, known to enlightened women in many different parts of the world, who have experienced the delights of looking as young as they can, whatever their age. This unique beauty fluid is known in the United States as Oil of Olay beauty lotion.

Find out for yourself the happy results of Oil of Olay, discovered by beauty connoisseurs. Let your skin drink in the skin-loving liquid. A profusion of pure moisture, along with tropical oils and other emollients, goes to work almost immediately to gentle away dryness. It's dryness that accentuates aging little lines and wrinkles that often make you look older than you'd like. You'll be astonished how completely and quickly Oil of Olay penetrates the surface of your skin (the part of your skin the world sees), bringing a smoothness, radiance and a look you once had and probably never expected to see again.

Oil of Olay works with nature in a mysterious way to help maintain your skin's delicate oil-moisture balance, needed if you're to look your youngest. It not only acts like natural moisture in alleviating dryness. The fluid actually helps keep your own moisture in your skin so it can work beautifully against dryness.

Let Oil of Olay (from your drugstore) work its wonders for you, by making it a regular part of your grooming ritual. Faithfully each morning, either under makeup or to let your complexion live in its own moisty, misty climate. Faithfully before bedtime, to work beneficially during the nocturnal hours. And any other times during the day when you'd like dryness eased.

Aren't you curious to see how you might look your youngest? Oil of Olay may well answer that tantalizing question.

Beauty Secret

Oil of Olay® is too precious to waste. When you've smoothed it on your face and throat, use leftover drops on your elbows or any other dry area crying out for attention.

"Your hair ages faster than you do. 30 minutes with condition* will keep it looking young."

Julius Caruso

The first thing people notice about you is your hair.

"Your hair grows up to ½" a month. By the time it's 6" long, it's one year old. If you're wearing it shoulder length, you've been wearing the same hair 2½ years. That's a lot of wear and tear.

Sharp bristled brushes, fine toothed combs, harsh shampoos, hot dryers, curlers, hair-sprays actually make the hair shaft wear thinner towards the end.

It splits. It breaks. It frazzles.

When your hair looks older than you are, you look older than you are.

Fortunately, you can help turn back the clock with condition* Beauty Pack Treatment from Clairol. In 30 minutes this intensive treatment starts repairing years of damage.

You see, condition* has 4 times as much protein as any leading conditioner. It sinks right into the protein-deprived gaps in the hair shaft, adding new body and manageability.

It helps mend split ends, so your hair looks smooth and silky again.

And it adds a beautifully healthy shine.

condition* is more expensive than other conditioners, but it's a small price to pay to keep your hair looking young.

After all, if your hair looks young, isn't that half the battle?"

condition*

The 30-minute treatment for mistreated hair.

Herbed butters, vinegars,

and other tasty surprises to brighten year-round meals

By Mary Moon Hemingway

Early autumn is a time for harvesting garden treasures you can preserve for good eating during the rest of the year. Even if you are a city dweller, you can put up specialties easily—fillips to transform the ordinary into memorable meals. Before starting to concoct any of them, however simple they may seem, you would do well to bone up on sound techniques to avoid spoilage. Any standard American cookbook can tell you how-to—or see July House & Garden, page 87.

Do the unexpected with herbs. Should you grow your own, you will, no doubt, set some aside for drying or freezing in butters and infusions. Home-grown, fresh or dried, no matter, herbs add flavor to make your vinegars, mustards, sugars, and jellies special treats to savor yourself or to give as thoughtful presents.

If using dried herbs, use them sparingly: One teaspoon of dry to one tablespoon fresh is about right. For the leafy vinegars—basil, borage, rosemary, and tarragon—use 2 cups of fresh leaves stripped from the stems. Crush the leaves gently and pack in quart jars about three-quarters full. Heat 2 cups white or red wine vinegar to a boil and fill the jars. Steep for two weeks covered; strain into bottles, cap or cork.

Unusual—and unusually good—are mixed herb vinegars: Combine tarragon, spearmint, lemon balm leaves to make 2 cups of leaves. Add minced shallots and garlic to taste plus 2 peppercorns and 4 cloves. Steep as usual in 2 to 3 cups of white vinegar, following the above method.

Mint vinegar is made with 1 quart white wine vinegar, 1 cup sugar, and 2 cups crushed mint leaves. The vinegar is brought to a boil, the mint added, and the infusion simmered 15 minutes. Allow the usual setting period before decanting. Lovely in lamb dishes and gravies. Good with fruit salads, iced teas.

Celery seed vinegar may be made with 1 quart chopped celery or ¼ pound crushed celery seed infused in 1 quart hot vinegar. Garlic vinegar is simple: Crush 6 garlic cloves and put them in a pint jar with a little salt. Heat cups vinegar, pour into jar, an let stand two weeks. Strain. Sha lots may be used too, but doubl the quantity.

Concoct spiced vinegars wit all manner of seeds: celery, dil caraway, cumin, fennel, anise Two teaspoons each of the firs four; 2 tablespoons of the last two plus 4 peppercorns, 2 sliced garli cloves, 3 cloves, 2 tablespoon sugar, and a whiff of curry powder Follow the standard procedure using 1 quart vinegar. Should it b too potent, dilute the mixture with additional vinegar after it has set tled.

Herb and spice mustards ar good enough to eat as spreads an they add real tang to all kinds o sauces and dressings. Before the flavoring is added, make the basic batch with 8 tablespoons dry mustard or crushed mustard seed, 8 tablespoons flour, and 2 tablespoons salt, moistening with garlic vinegar to make a fairly stiff paste Add 9 teaspoons sugar and then spark up the mixture with any of the following (using 4 tablespoons minced herbs or 3 tablespoons of other material): tarragon and parsley, sage with a pinch of marjoram, horseradish, thyme, rosemary, grated lemon peel, curry or chili powder. Mustards are always packed in sterile jars and left for a month. In attractive pots, they make great gifts.

Herb sugars add delicious difference to fruits, whipped cream, and dessert sauces or icings. Make them as you would vanilla sugar by burying 3 tablespoons of any sweet herb, rose geranium leaves, mint, lemon balm, spearmint in 2 cups fine or regular sugar, and cover until the herbs are dried. Sift before using. If you like, combine a vanilla bean with the herbs.

Enjoy flavored cooking and salad oils, as the French do, by heating and steeping herbs in a good-quality oil in the same proportions as vinegars. Whole sprigs of the herbs floating in the bottled oils look pretty and help identify them.

Herb jellies are easily made from prepared pectin if you follow the directions on the package or bottle for mint jelly, using the

FRENCH DUMBWAITER

What can you tell me about my table? The top has two metal-lined wells for plants. W.W.B.—Syosset, N.Y.

Your French Louis XVI style table, dating about the 1920s, is called a rafraichissoir, a kind of dumbwaiter with superimposed shelves. In the upper part were one or more recesses for chilling bottles of wine. With plates, flatware, and glasses, they stood near the dining table (it was usual to have four) and diners could serve themselves.

On my spoon's back is "Ball, Black & Co." Who were they? Can you identify the pattern?

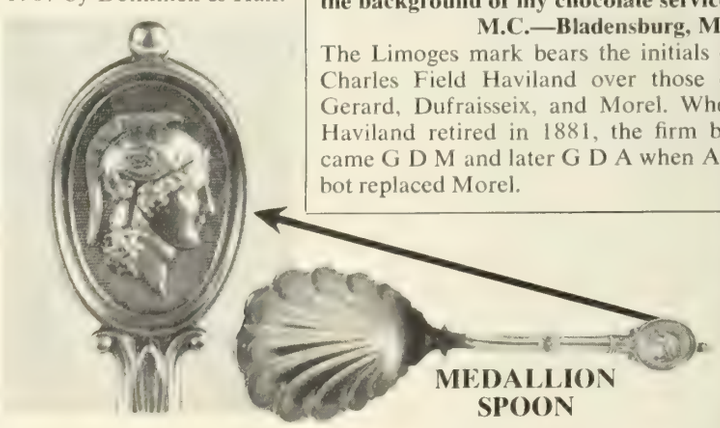
E.B.—Carfree, Ariz.

Ball, Black & Co., the retailer of your medallion-pattern berry spoon, was active in New York, 1851-1876, when it was succeeded by Black, Starr & Frost. In the second half of the 19th century, a number of American silver manufacturers introduced, for flatware, their design of a profile head in the Renaissance taste. Your medallion pattern was "reintroduced" in 1907 by Dominick & Haff.

HAVILAND SERVICE

From this mark, what can you tell me of the background of my chocolate service? M.C.—Bladensburg, Md.

The Limoges mark bears the initials of Charles Field Haviland over those of Gerard, Dufraisseix, and Morel. When Haviland retired in 1881, the firm became G D M and later G D A when Abbot replaced Morel.



MEDALLION SPOON

EMPIRE STYLE DAY BED

I would appreciate information about the period, origin, and maker of my day bed. M. Mc.—Salisbury, N.C.

The form of your day bed has been freely adapted from the French Méridienne, characterized by a shaped back panel, and introduced during the First French Empire, 1804-1814. Yours is American, about 1900, when the Empire style enjoyed a lively revival and contemporary catalogues advertised a "Roman divan couch," for ancient Roman furniture had much to do with the Empire style. (Continued on page 56)

Introducing Royal Doulton Stoneware. It's not our traditional look. It is our traditional quality.

Whether at a buffet on the patio or inside around a blazing fireplace, or at a sit down dinner, our Stoneware looks right at home.

Although informal in appearance, it is created with as much care as our renowned Bone and Fine china.

In fact, our Stoneware is so well made that it is dishwasher proof and we guarantee to replace it at no cost if any breakage, chipping, cracking or crazing occurs within two years of normal home use.

The pattern shown above is Ting. A five piece place setting costs $20. Our 45 piece service for eight including serving pieces, $179.95.

For our complete Dinnerware brochure, send 25¢ to Royal Doulton, Dept. 47, 400 Paterson Plank Rd., Carlstadt, New Jersey, 07072.

Beautiful Stoneware with a beautiful two year guarantee. It goes into your oven, onto your table and into your freezer.

The worth of Woodard

It begins with a blacksmith.

Instead of a cookie-cutter kind of production line, each piece of Woodard furniture begins with an anvil, some brawn, and an honest-to-goodness blacksmith.

Woodard furniture is shaped, joined and finished by hand, right down to the careful hand-wiping of the final antiquing. There is no mass production. Employees are artisans and craftsmen.

And Woodard endures to add to its worth. Each piece of furniture, for example, receives a layer of molten zinc to inhibit rust and to protect the finish. This is an expensive way to protect furniture, but it is also the best way. And when you add the 14 separate finishing steps, you begin to see why Woodard furniture can be passed down from generation to generation.

The eyes have it.

The beauty of Woodard is evident with another quick glance at the photographs below. For three generations Woodard has been a style leader, both indoors and out. And this leadership is not confined to wrought iron alone. Few manufacturers offer such a wide range of fabrics and coverings. Woodard also knows that not everyone likes white. That's why you can choose from a rainbow of 25 beautiful finishing colors.

In this clickety-click, mass-produced, computerized world we live in, isn't it nice to know there's still a Woodard around?

For color brochures and the name of the store near you that carries Woodard indoor and outdoor furniture, write to Woodard, 317 Elm Street, Owosso, Michigan 48867. Woodard

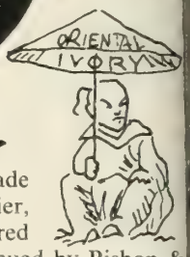
ENGLISH JARDINIERE

Because I am totally disabled I cannot get to the library to find out anything about this piece, which I feel is quite old. Can you help me trace its origin? B.G.—San Mateo, Cal.



The trademark indicates that your jardiniere was made by the Staffordshire potters Powell, Bishop & Stonier, who were active at Hanley, 1878-1891. They registered this basic form trademark in 1880 and it was continued by Bishop & Stonier from after 1891 to about 1936.

GERMAN CLOCK

Do you know who manufactured our wall clock? I've sketched the mark that's on it to help you identify it.

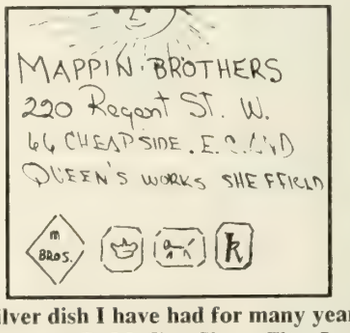
F.G.—Staten Island, N.Y.

The prominent German clock manufacturer, Junghans, who started in business in 1900, made your wall clock in the early 20th century. This eight-day type clock, which has an enameled dial and strikes on the hour and half-hour, was a popular export timepiece.

TOY PIANO

This is a toy Schoenhut player piano. Who was Schoenhut and was he well known? G.R.—Fremont, Ohio

Albert Schoenhut is one of the best known toy manufacturers in the United States. His name is first and longest associated with toy pianos, for on 1872, the first toy piano made in America was manufactured at his shop in Philadelphia. Through the years he has put many toy pianos into American homes.



SHEFFIELD SILVER DISH

This is what is on the bottom of a silver dish I have had for many years. What can you tell me about it? B. McG.—Sioux City, Iowa

According to your unusually informative mark, your sterling silver dish was made by Mappin Brothers at Sheffield, England, 1902-03.

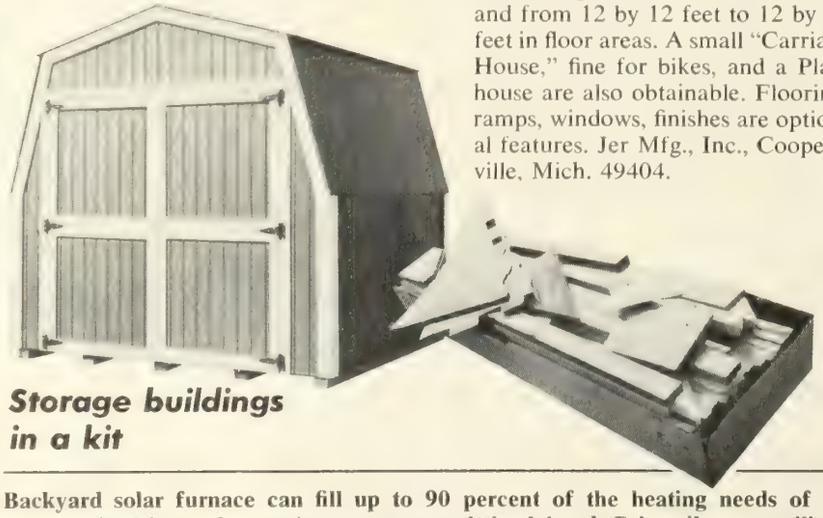
Building supply dealers at home centers, and lumberyards sell the kit and also the ten 4-by-8-foot, ⅝-inch-thick wall siding panels and the twelve 4-by-8-foot, 1-inch-thick roof panels you choose to enclose the building. Total retail cost, $199.95 including 8 pounds of nails. This "Standard 'Lil' Red Barn" is 8 feet high, 8 feet wide, 8 feet long in floor area. There is also an 8-by-12-foot model, and there are big Red Barns 12 feet high and from 12 by 12 feet to 12 by 24 feet in floor areas. A small "Carriage House," fine for bikes, and a Playhouse are also obtainable. Flooring, ramps, windows, finishes are optional features. Jer Mfg., Inc., Coopersville, Mich. 49404.



Solar furnace heats average-size house

Backyard solar furnace can fill up to 90 percent of the heating needs of an average-sized house by snaring sun energy, it is claimed. Primarily an auxiliary unit to supplement a forced-air heating system, it is about garden-toolshed size but A-frame in shape. Placed facing south, within 75 feet of a house, it is connected to it with ducts, which conduct sun-warmed air to the house. The south face of the furnace is a solar heat collector plate with a double glass wall facing the sun and with a mirror-like aluminum panel on the ground to gain added sun heat by reflection. Behind the glass, aluminum collector cups trap heat from the sun. Forced warm air, circulated through the cups, transfers heat to a storage area within the furnace where 25,000 pounds of rocks hold the heat until needed. A second blower fan pulls heated air over rocks into underground ducts connected to house's forced warm air heating system. Furnaces in three sizes range from about $4,500 to $6,300. Developed by the International Solarthermics Corp., Box 397, Nederland, Colo., 80466 for licensed manufacturers.

BOOKS ABOUT CRAFTS

For people into crafts, Christmas is now

By Jerome H. Denne

If you want to make your own gifts for Christmas giving, now is the time to start—and personally made gifts are always especially treasured because of the thought and time put into them. There are many good books to help you get started on a new craft or to tackle more complicated projects once you've mastered the basics. Good, in a craft book, implies: (1) It has thorough, easy-to-follow, step-by-step instructions. (2) there are copious illustrations to make the bumpier processes crystal clear. (3) The finished project is worth all the effort you've put into it. Here is a selection of recent craft books that meet these criteria:

Varieties of Needlework

Texture and Color in Needlepoint. Michele Weal (Harper & Row, $19.95). How to combine and integrate various stitches to create unusual textures, extraordinary designs for everything from pillows and vests to a complete staircase cover.

Needlepoint Plaids. Marion Broome Pakula (Crown $7.95; $5.95 paperback). Twenty projec with plaid designs created by usi numbered patterns.

Now Needlepoint. Jan Orr (V Nostrand Reinhold, $14.95). T "now" means contemporary d signs, modern methods, far-o projects.

More Needlepoint Design. L Gartner (Morrow, $16.95, a Hou & Garden Book, available in O tober). Eighty new, original d signs by the author of the bes selling Needlepoint Design, wi instructions for transferring the to your own canvas.

Chinese Rugs Designed for Ne dlepoint. Maggie Lane (Scribner $12.50, available in November Stunning designs for fourteen rug (with a maximum 54-inch width fully graphed with directions f translating graph to canvas, work ing pattern, finishing off, bindin and lining.

WHERE TO FIND CRAFT SUPPLIES AND HOW-TO INFORMATION

Craft Sources. Paul Colin and Deborah Lippman (Evans, $12.50; paperback $5.95, available in October). Subtitled "The Ultimate Catalog for Craftspeople"—and it really is. It's a guide to books, magazines, organizations, supply sources, and schools that teach crafts throughout the country; a general handbook containing interviews with craftsmen, samples from books giving instructions for a particular object, so you can use this book also to make things.

The Mail-order Crafts Catalogue. Margaret A. Boyd (Chilton, $15; $7.95 paperback). Indexes by firm name, craft item, and state-by-state sources throughout the country where you can obtain whatever supplies you need for whatever craft turns you on. Includes lists of magazines specializing in crafts articles, courses you can take, kits to buy.

National Guide to Craft Supplies. Judith Glassman (Van Nostrand Reinhold, $12.95; $6.95 paperback, available in October). Over 600 craft supply sources across the U.S. as well as in Canada, Great Britain, Australia, New Zealand, and Taiwan. Complete descriptions of what each has to offer. Includes bookstores, fairs and shows, galleries and museums, craft periodicals, and a bibliography of more than 800 books.

Make It: an Index to Projects and Materials. Joyce F. Shields. (Scarecrow Press, $15). A source book for all handcrafters seeking information, it covers 475 titles of articles about crafts, and materials for them, published between 1968 and 1974, with book or magazine source and page numbers.

Kirsch Bedspreads. Colorful floral, solid and geometric patterns in styles for every decor. Many are machine washable—with Kirsch durability stitched into every one. Matching draperies, too.

Kirsch Coordinates. Handsome hardware for every room. From switch plates to drawer pulls to countertop bath accessories—in brass, chrome or antique white. Coordinate them with your Kirsch drapery hardware.

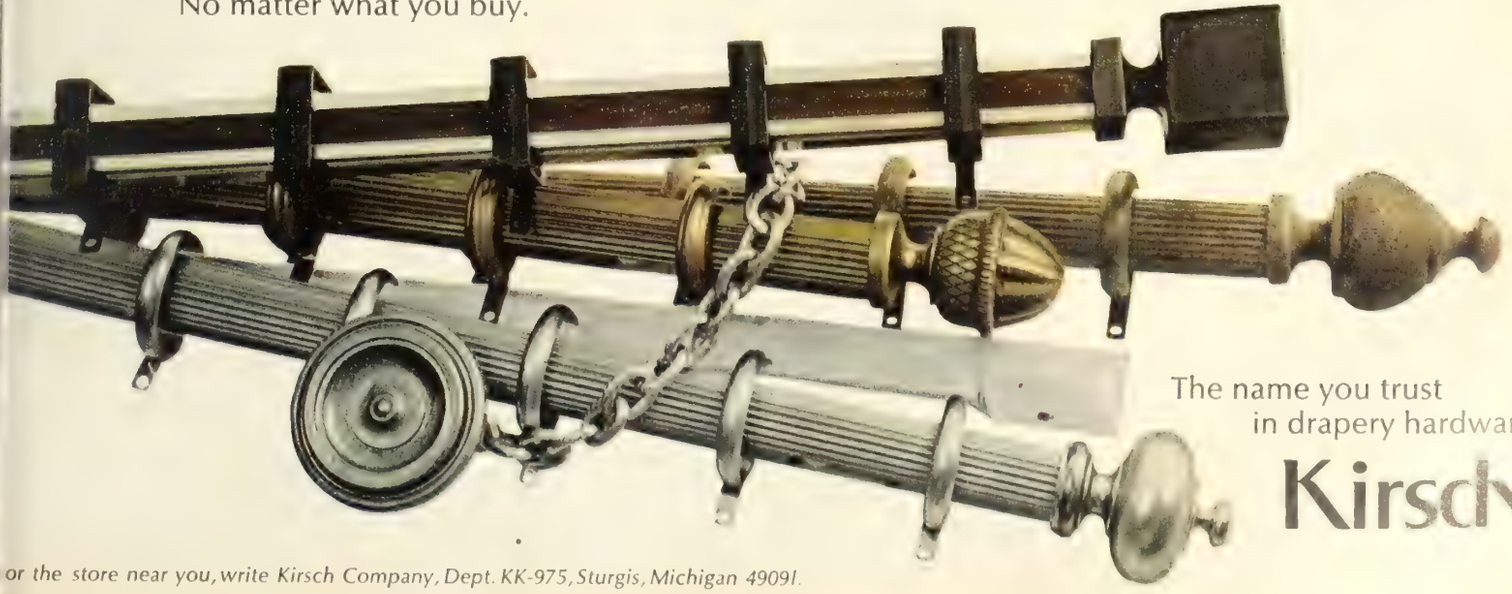
Let the Kirsch name be your guide.

When you buy something with the "Kirsch" name on it, you already know a lot about that product.

For example, you know it offers value. The kind of value that's kept people coming back to Kirsch since 1907. And it offers quality. The kind of quality—Kirsch quality—that doesn't cost you a penny more.

No matter what you buy.

Kirsch Shelving. No tools. No glue. Just twist components together to make a stereo center, a bookcase or any number of space-saving arrangements. Choice of styles and finishes. Wall-mounted shelving also available.



The name you trust in drapery hardware.

Books about crafts

One Book: Many Crafts

Joy of Crafts. The Blue Mountain Crafts Council (Holt, Rinehart, and Winston, $19.95). For beginner or expert, more than 100 projects in weaving, leathermaking, woodworking, appliqué, potting, knotting, or just about whatever you want to do.

Jann Johnson's Discovery Book of Crafts (Reader's Digest Press, $14.95). Fifty-five projects, each of which will produce an enchanting present (you'll be sorely tempted to keep it yourself)—laminated wood boxes, silver jewelry, macramé evening shawl, embossed stationery, stuffed dolls.

Traditional English Country Crafts and How To Enjoy Them Today. Andy Pittaway and Bernard Scofield (Pantheon, $5.95 paperback). A directory to the crafts of Great Britain with supply sources and information for the U.S.—make your own paper, corn dollies, baskets, pomanders; start a pottery; spin flax.

The Complete Book of Home Crafts. Pamela Westland (Viking, $16.95). Great for the would-be craftsman in search of a craft.

Phyllis Fiarotta's Nostalgia Crafts Book. (Workman, $10.95; $5.95 paperback). Things your mother used to make and your grandmother and even, maybe, your great grandmother.

By Children and For Children

Snips & Snails & Walnut Whales. Phyllis Fiarotta (Workman, $4.95). Fun for pint-size craftsmen. A selection of over 100 simple projects that children can make, using objects picked up from nature—shells, leaves, pine cones, nuts, seeds, berries, even spider webs!

How to Make Wooden Toys and Games. Walter E. Schutz (Macmillan, $8.95; $4.95 paperback). Fun for you to make; fun for your children to play with—87 projects, some simple (wood blocks, a boat), some elaborate (dollhouses, miniature furniture), all within the realm of a reasonably adept woodworker.

Try a New Craft

How to Make Furniture without Tools. Clement Meadmore (Pantheon, $4.95 paperback). What you do is take the ready-drawn patterns from the book to your local lumberyard, get the plywood cut to specifications, then follow the diagrams for assembling, and just glue.

Paper Folded Cut Sculpted. Florence Temko (Collier, $12.95; $5.95 paperback). Delightful whimsies you can make using the Japanese art of origami and adaptations thereof.

Ideas for Découpage and Decoration. Betty Lorrimar and Margaret Hickson (Van Nostrand Reinhold, $8.95). Cut it out, paste it on, create your own fantasies. Many clever ideas to start you out.

Natural Collage. Sally Miles (Scribners, $9.95). Arranging seeds, leaves, grasses to form birds, fiery dragons, portraits—the sky or your imagination, is the limit. The basic how-tos and with-whats are here.

America's Indigo Blues. Florence H. Pettit (Hastings House, $18.50). If you're interested in batiks and dying fabrics, this is a gold mine of information describing just about everything anyone has ever done or made or discovered about the 18th-century bold-patterned fabrics called indigo blue resist prints.

Pottery. Cora Pucci (Little, Brown, $3.95 paperback). A basic approach to perhaps the oldest of crafts. For the beginner with facile hands and a good supply of patience.

String Art. Robert E. Sharpton (Chilton, $12.50; $5.95 paperback). One of the newer crafts rapidly increasing in popularity. Works of art are created with colored string that you loop in and out of myriad nails to form striking patterns.

Straw Work and Corn Dollies. Lettice Sandford (Viking, $8.95). A country craft, currently having a revival. Here, instructions for birds, jewelry, a Mexican sun mask, even a chandelier—all made by the careful interweaving of pieces of straw.

Everlasting Flowercraft. Dorothy Shipman and Moyna McWilliam (Arco, $8.95). Many methods of preserving flowers and then instructions for using them to create decorative gift tags, calendars, party pieces, unusual floral arrangements.

The Art of Shellcraft. Paula Critchley (Praeger, $10.95). Dozens of things you can make—whimsical animals, ornamental frames, eye-arresting jewelry—from the interesting shells you've collected this summer on the beach. ■

What happened when these "wall artists" challenged Tru-Test E-Z Kare latex flat enamel?

They got "wiped out."

LIPSTICK | CHOCOLATE BAR | SHOE POLISH | KETCHUP | BLUEBERRY PRESERVES | WATER COLORS

Can you picture a wall that withstands such stains without need of repainting? These unretouched photos make it clear: the entire "exhibition" wiped clean from the E-Z Kare enamel-hard finish. All the stubborn, greasy stains shown here—plus eye shadow, mustard, cheese, egg and charcoal—can't spoil the beauty of Tru-Test E-Z Kare latex flat enamel. Even under hard scrubbing, it retains its original beauty without "shining," rubbing off or fading out. Disastrous stains that mean re-painting with most latex paints simply wash off of E-Z Kare.

Tru-Test E-Z Kare combines the scrubbability of enamel with the flat finish of latex. So you can do a whole room, walls and woodwork, with the same paint. Goes on latex-easy, dries in about 20 minutes, tools clean up in soap and water. E-Z Kare latex flat enamel, exclusively from our own Tru-Test Paint Factories. White and custom colors including House & Garden American Watercolors.

The Wash 'n Wear Paint... perfect for walls and woodwork.

Insulate while you decorate with Del Mar Woven Wood.

Del Mar Woven Wood provides year 'round savings in heating and cooling costs by stopping winter's cold and summer's heat at the window. The insulation quality which makes woven wood a better energy saver than other popular window coverings is in the wood. Wood, the natural insulator, is combined with yarns from a broad palette of colors. The result is Del Mar Woven Wood, a beautiful way to save energy for any decorating style. And today's "natural look"—a combination of self-expression and unpretentious natural elements—is superbly enhanced with the impeccable tailoring of woven wood.

Del Mar Woven Wood...a beautiful way to conserve energy and money too!

Please send your booklet "Idea Windows 2" 20 pages of woven wood decorating ideas in 30 different room settings. $1.00 to:

The real beauty of Aristocon™ is what you don't see.

You're looking at Sonora. Our newest Aristocon pattern.

Drenched in color. Cushioned for comfort. With the thickest wear surface on the market. Beautiful.

But the real beauty is, Aristocon can take the scuffs and spills. And it should never need wax. That's because of our JT88 finish, a Mannington exclusive, that seals in the gloss. And seals out stains.

Another beautiful thing. Even after months of use, normal care with water and detergent and an occasional buffing bring back its original luster.

No other cushioned flooring gives you all you get from Aristocon. Available in 6 and 12 foot widths for few, if any, seams. So, before you decide, make sure you look at Mannington.

Write for mini sample and free brochure showing other Aristocon patterns.

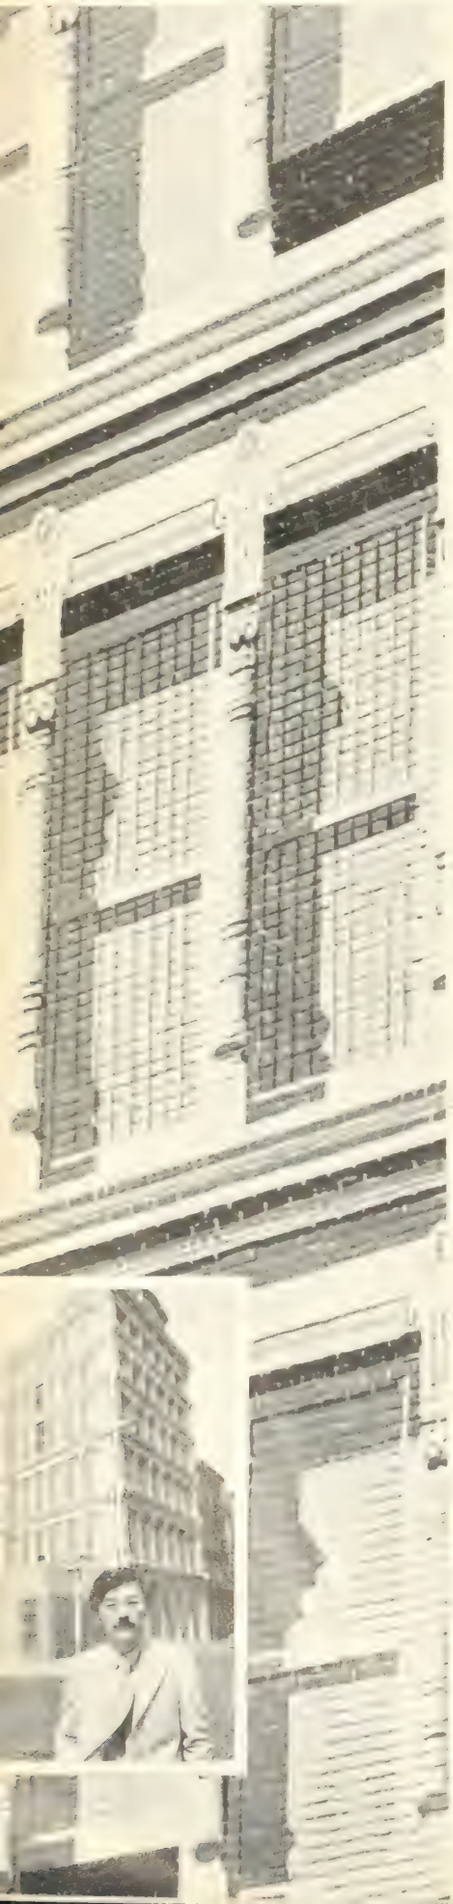
THE ENCHANTED EYE

New glamour for a cast-iron building, a great art auction, covered mall in Minneapolis, a see-it-all traveler's guide to the Bicentennial

By Kenneth E



THE PAINT BRUSH AS ARCHITECT

Soho, to most people, is London's version of New York's Greenwich Village. But New York's version of Soho is a complex of old buildings below Washington Square that artists and sculptors and architects are flocking to as the place to live and work. Restored, remodeled, rejuvenated, these once decrepit old factories and warehouses are now a handsome new down-to-business Bohemia full of apartments and studios, most of them cooperative, all of them beautifully livable and workable. One of the most imaginatively restored of these buildings, left, was an old toy factory with a cast-iron, street-side façade—an ornate, highly decorative elevation that, as far as design was concerned, had nothing to do with the rest of the structure, which was faced very simply with brick walls concealed by adjoining buildings. All of the fantasy was kept streetward.

"With trompe l'oeil painting, the old brick side wall became a replica of the front façade."

As architect Handford Yang, left, below, who lives in the building, explains it: "Around the 1800s, when cast-iron buildings were popular, architects designed the façades to resemble Italian palazzi, which were usually built of marble and stucco worked in a very extravagant manner. Iron, of course, can be cast to look like anything, and since marble was costly and, for a factory, inappropriate, iron did very nicely once it was painted in the stone-like colors you see in old Italian palazzi today.

"Now, at some point in its history, the old factory must have lost one of its companion buildings—although there is a little one there now—thus exposing a highly unesthetic, unromantic brick wall. When the factory became part of Soho and was remodeled (Continued on page 74)

"ARTISTS OF THE HAMPTONS"

Benefit art auctions hold a double lure: They offer the bidder a chance to acquire a work of art usually available only at a gallery—and to do a good deed. Wednesday, September 17, at 8:30 p.m., an auction called "Artists of the Hamptons" will be held at the Parke-Bernet Galleries in New York, with viewings on September 11, 12, and 15. Proceeds are for the benefit of Guild Hall in East Hampton, L.I. About 80 major works will go on the block—all donated by such distinguished names as James Brooks, Elaine deKooning, Willem deKooning, Jimmy Ernst, Balcomb Greene, Harlan Jackson, Alfonso Ossorio, James Rosenquist, Saul Steinberg, and Esteban Vicente—only ten of the contributing group of painters and sculptors who live in the pretty string of Long Island towns known as "The Hamptons."

Guild Hall in East Hampton was founded in 1931 as a cultural center, and, like all museums, needs money. The Hampton artists, who often exhibit there, are making the kind of deeply personal gesture only an artist can make to help

Jacqueline Onassis honorary chairman the auction committ which is headed Guild Hall trustee He Hoie and Mr. and M George Plimpton.

PRIZE-WINNING PLAZA

Honored this year by the American Institute of Architects for distinguished design, the new I.D.S. Center in Minneapolis covers an entire city block in a complex of buildings surrounding a covered plaza called The Crystal Court. "This lean-to galleria," says the A.I.A., "is by no means the greenhouse variety, but a . . . scintillating, crystalline, multiple reflective ambiance." Very high praise, and earned. The entire project with its air-conditioned Court was designed by Philip Johnson and John Burgee with Edward F. Baker Associates.

You can get a brand-new Early American lowboy for $197. Or a used one for only $15,000.

. The Queen Anne Connecticut lowboy at the bottom (circa 1750-60) costs $15,000 at Bernard & S. Dean Levy, Inc., 981 Madison Avenue, New York, New York 10021.

The Queen Anne American Drew lowboy at the top (circa 1974) costs $197 at furniture stores.

So much for the differences.

Both the lowboys are authentic Colonial designs. Both of them are all wood, painstakingly finished.

And both are built to be used not for years, but for generations.

into apartments, it also became a landmark building, which meant that the facade could not be touched except for restoring and repainting. The Landmark Commission, as is its responsibility, limited the colors to the authentic, original grays, beiges, and browns. Which was fine, except that this new elegance would have been incongruous when you looked around the corner and saw a dreary expanse of plain old brick. It was out of the question to superimpose a decorative iron 'cover-up' on the brick wall, far too expensive, and we—the building's tenant-owners—didn't know what to do, until one day I met Richard Haas, a well-known Soho artist who is fascinated by old cast-iron buildings and has done a lot of etchings and paintings of them. Somehow, we hit on the idea of trompe l'oeil, and funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts which was obtained through an association called The City Walls, Mr. Haas went to work.

"It's an incredible job. The design of the front façade now moves around the corner and extends the length of the building. It's all paint, of course, but unless you're very close to it, you'd swear it was iron. Haas used the same proportions, the same floor levels, the same decorative details. He even incorporated two existing windows into the total design. He studied the way the sun hits the front façade, where shadows are cast, how the colors change with the light, and then painted relevant shadows on the trompe l'oeil wall. There is nothing flat about it, it's three-dimensional—to the eye, at least. Some of the windows are painted closed, some partially open. In one of the half-open windows, Haas painted a cat sunning itself on the sill. Charming.

"I might add that you don't ha[ve] to be an artist with Mr. Haas's ta[lent] to give an old building a lif[t]. There are times when a graphi[c] which can be very lively and amu[s]ing, is effective. But sometimes [it] is wrong for the architecture of th[e] project in question, and tromp[e] l'oeil is a better solution. It cou[ld] be a communal effort. If you'v[e] ever painted scenery for a schoo[l] play or a summer theatre, the knac[k] would soon come back to yo[u]. Trompe l'oeil isn't all that difficu[lt] if you keep it simple, have a bit o[f] flair, and a firm hand on the pain[t] brush.

"As of now, the old toy factor[y] is the most popular building i[n] Soho, and from morning to nigh[t] you find artists and students an[d] tourists studying it, praising it, be[ing] amused by it, loving it. Quit[e] aside from its wonderful tromp[e] l'oeil, the building was certainl[y] worthy of restoration. Cast-iro[n] buildings really forecast moder[n] American construction in that the[y] used much of the technology o[f] modern building—precasting, stan[-] dardization, prefabrication, spee[d] of erecting. Later on, when the ele[-] vator was invented, this technology produced skyscrapers.

"Anyhow, it's a very nice plac[e] to live and work. The New York City branch of the Larry Aldrich Museum, which is in Connecticut, is on the ground floor. It's mainly for completely contemporary artists who don't have a gallery of their own, and gives them a chance to show and sell their work, which they otherwise might not have. There is something very inspiring about living over a museum in a building that is almost a museum in itself, what with that beautiful big painting hung outdoors. We're very fortunate. What museum would have room for a picture six stories high? ■

A collector speaks her mind about placing, lighting, and caring for modern art

A conversation with Mrs. Barnett Malbin by Paula Rice Jackson

EDITOR'S NOTE: "Futurism in Modern Focus" was presented at the Guggenheim Museum, New York in 1972. The entire exhibit was composed of paintings from the Lydia and Harry L. Winston Collection (Dr. and Mrs. Barnett Malbin). Their collection includes Futurist, Dada, Surrealist, De Stijl, Abstract Expressionist, American Colorist, and Minimalist works—an almost complete span of 20th-century painting. It has been exhibited in many parts of the world and has been published extensively. Mrs. Malbin is Arts Commissioner and a trustee of the Detroit Institute of Art and a former trustee of Bennington College.

This collection represents an assembly of the tastes of one individual—a very different thing from a museum collection. There is a personal involvement in buying each work—a reason that may not be obvious or sometimes even explicable to anyone else. And so when I hang a painting, somewhat the same reasoning applies. Placing works on a wall in a certain way creates an artistic experience for the viewer.

"Every work has its own presence, its own light which requires its own space, especially in relation to the other paintings around it. Two important things govern my thinking about grouping works together. Of course, one is their physical size, shape, and their subject; the other is the historical origin, or perhaps even better, the 'emotional' spirit of the works. Certain periods can be placed together because their 'intention' can be seen as the same. This is what allows me to hang a Noland near a Kandinsky with an Arp between them—they work together. It is a personal communication, but these artists express the same thing to me, each in a very different way.

"We recently moved to New York into an apartment with fairly low ceilings. Our son-in-law, Eliot Robinson, an architect, designed the lighting for us. It combines both spot and wash in the same fixture. He used tubular 25-watt incandescent bulbs that are housed in long, shallow aluminum shields that run the whole length of the ceiling. Since they're about 3½ inches deep, we've run them wherever we've needed them. They're lined with reflecting Mylar that increases the light without adding any heat, which protects the paintings. Also, electric power is saved because of the low wattage of the bulb. And since we've hung some sculpture, it was very simple to add cylindrical spots to the shield fixture and light that as well.

We keep the humidity at a constant 50.1 percent. If the air is any drier, the frames tend to shrink and bulge the canvases, which can be dangerous. Repetitive bulging and shrinking could crack a canvas."

The protective aspects of framing concern Mrs. Malbin most. A Mondrian and a Balla have been enclosed in acrylic boxes although both works have frames: "They were imposed because the structures were becoming fragile. Both artists framed these works themselves. The boxes don't interfere at all with the design of the frames. They also prevent the canvases from becoming soiled. Most of these paintings are hung by a very heavy supporting back wire or two picture-hanging hooks that are driven into a wall. Supporting rods that hang from a molding aren't right for very modern paintings, such as a Stella. Since he sometimes works with unconventionally shaped canvases, those rods would impose a whole other design onto his, which would never be right. You must consider how the artist wants his work to be viewed. A frame that isn't consonant will never satisfy.

Futurist painters worked from the point of view that the viewer was in the center of the canvas experiencing the activity of it. That's one way I have of judging the level at which to hang paintings. [Pointing to a Balla of women descending a spiral staircase] I hung this low in order to experience looking down at the women who are looking up at me. It's marvelous! [It is.] Living with these paintings is like being in another world. Every day they change as the light passes through these rooms, each day at each season. I love them." ■

THE POSITIVE POWER OF COLOR

Color is therapeutic, a life-enriching power. It can lift spirits, change moods, turn a down feeling into an "up." Use this power positively.

Color flattery in fabrics

Look for decorating fabrics that make you look good and feel good. Do some private research first, if necessary. Find out which colors are self-enhancing as backgrounds. It depends on your personal coloring, hair, skin, eyes.

Color impact in paint

Consider the outside of your house. Does it express your life and your personality? Just because all the other houses around are white, doesn't mean you have to conform. The way you impress the world on the outside indicates who and what you are.

Color life with plants

Grow color that pulsates with organic energy. Flowering plants are richer and more intense than any color man can make. They also add another dimension in fragrance. In neutral rooms, plants create great natural color changes, as they flower in their season.

Color energy through art

Let art bring color energy to your surroundings. The artist's work has a living quality and the energy put down on canvas is transmitted through the picture into your room. Modern art has an architecture-like strength and power to give an ordinary room the look of an extraordinary space.

Color feasts

Create food that's visually exciting. A really mouth-watering dish owes its appeal to looks, as well as taste. The way food is arranged and served makes eating an event. Light simple meals—the calorie-conscious kind we all want today—can appear as satisfying as gourmet feasts, given the illusion of richness through color.

Color graphics with carpet

You can have smashing color effects with carpet. Take it over a banquette, up the wall, wrap tables in it. Play graphics with it. Carpet is warm, soft, absorbs sounds, adds insulation.

Color vibrations outdoors

Plant color like a painting—strident values of the modernists, or pale pastels of the impressionists. Take gardening a step beyond gardening, into land art. When you cultivate this idea, nature is the medium, flowers the palette, evergreens the frame.

Now turn the pages to see these and many more ideas in action. Our responses to your need to hole rooms in shades of one color are appeal-for their freshness," says Tom Britt. "For ains, and a bit of contrast, you might use r full widths of fabric in gradations of greens blues for a green or blue room; blues to ives for a mauve or blue room; ecru to sal-n to rose for a pinkish beige room. Just sew vertical panels together and hang them in ips of four."

lor does not have to be strong to be effec-," is John Dickinson's theory. "It's all a mat-of modulation. I'm using lots of pale clear ors like water green and sky blue in fabric carpet against neutral backgrounds of stone sand. A pale palette has both serenity and ity, and like sky and water, it's the natural k, but carried a step farther, and wonderful h something like steel—as much a natural say, wicker."

COLOR IMPACT— DISTINCTION FOR A VERY PRACTICAL HOUSE

Building on a $35,000 budget, with a need for four bedrooms, study, living room, and kitchen, meant low-cost materials for this beach house. Metal shingles for the roof, asbestos siding for walls. Paint had to supply the architectural impact. The choice of blue followed naturally, after the architects, Wurmann, Murphy, and Levy, selected blue-painted shingles, "which seemed right for the sea." They carried the color all over. Green for the door, "to show an entrance and take you inside."

ROBERT LAUTMAN

COLOR SURPRISE—AS YOU OPEN THE DOOR
INTO A SMALL VIBRANT ROOM

"It's very exciting to go from a big pale space into a small room crammed with brilliant color." This library, designed by Robert Perkins, is a perfect illustration. "Everything is Chinese vermilion: walls, upholstery, curtains. And everything paintable is lacquered. The lacquer gives the color texture, its full potency, and a luster that flatters both beautiful old books and people. The reflection of red, like that of apricot, pink, and lavender, gives a glow to the complexion."

HORST

"Concentrate vivid color in one grand punch," Mel Dwork advises, "rather than saturating a room with it. For a room with navy blue walls, bleached floors, white furniture—quite quiet, really—we found a fuchsia-bordered, multicolored Amish quilt and hung it like a painting."

"Colors from nature in almost any combination," Angelo Donghia feels, "are bound to be pretty: flowers, snow against blue sky, sand against blue sky, pale storms with pink coming through as the sun sets, rainbows, wonderful jungle or forest greens against pale blue or deep blue sky. Also, colors you wear will give you a cue. For a man, perhaps navy blue walls, cream floors, off-white woodwork, a navy blue sofa and chairs covered in beige suede."

"Color at the top," says Mrs. Henry Parish II, "has always been a marvelous idea. Colored ceilings, that is. Pale blue, yellow, silver leaf, or for sheer sumptousness—when a room needs it and can stand it—a hot Venetian red. Underfoot, there is still nothing better than a natural wood floor, and there is no reason not to stain it. A leafy green will give you a shimmer without hiding grain."

"Wood colors can be beautiful," says Michael Taylor, "and they're even better with an intense color complement. For example, in a really superb room, the walls were paneled in pale honey-colored pine, handsome, but they needed a lid, which they got with a deep cobalt blue ceiling—a midnight summer sky."

"Really striking color combinations," Arthur Smith has found, "are camel color with grays or black, dark brown with brilliant green, blue and white, and reds of all kinds. This is a color, certainly, that offers more value per square foot than just about anything else in the paint box."

"Graduations of white," George Clarkson thinks, "can produce an ethereal quality you can't get with primary colors. White everything, lots of texture, and in a big room with several sofas, use an upholstery fabric with a beige pattern woven into the white. It will have all the warmth of a strong color."

"Black shimmers, comes alive," say William Machado and associate Norman Diekman, "when it is used with neutrals. It's like a vital brush stroke in a Chinese painting. And it can be much more." Machado recently painted his kitchen black. "It was done to mask an ugly surface over which wood slats were to be applied. But the black was so extraordinary I left it alone. Against it, everything looked beautiful."

GROWING COLOR— TO ARRANGE AND CHANGE TO SUIT YOUR MOOD AND THE SEASON

HOW TO GIVE YOUR ROOMS A COLOR LIFT WITH PLANTS

Color "must not intrude but blend," says Enid Haupt. "I like an air of serenity—with color provided by flowers. With a movable pot garden you can put color where you want it—you can truly paint with flowers. White, pinks, and yellows go well with the green of the outdoors and with foliage plants."

The house is joyous "to me, because everything is personal. The art was selected at gallery exhibitions of talented friends. Even the plants are old friends. Many have been with me for decades. The geraniums are cuttings from one plant."

Balance "is all, as in everything in life. I have systematized my flower growing to complement the colors and scale of the rooms. I like things in harmony. For instance, I no longer use some azaleas indoors because as they aged their color became too strong."

Light "is vital to flowering plants. Most of mine come into bloom in the greenhouse or garden room, but once at their peak they can be placed according to one's own needs."

Permanence and change "are what we gardeners work for. A standard like the geranium tree may live three years or more but must rest from time to time. You do not need to repot—aerate the soil in heavy pots spring and fall with an ice pick to give roots fresh oxygen. Annuals like impatiens are easy to grow. They are grown from seed but can be renewed after a summer's bloom by shearing the plant back 6 inches above the pot and putting it in a sunny place. Daily grooming and misting will extend the lives of plants and give them a pristine look."

HOW TO GIVE YOUR ROOMS A COLOR LIFT WITH ART

"Living with paintings everyday is such a pleasure—you change, they change, it's a constant process," says Gwendolyn Warner whose recently remodeled living room, above, included some changes that give better light to paintings and sculpture. Skylights cut into the ceiling allow for more natural, diffused daylight; mirror-paneled walls beside the fireplace increase the effect. A painting by Jules Olitsky in pink and reds is a color focus for a room filled with natural colors and textures—tree trunk sofa, palm trunk tables, bleached oak floor, wicker, white hydrangeas. At dining end, right, a dramatic Morris Louis.

Living with modern paintings. Experts give you their thoughts

Hanging and Lighting

"Any system of diffused, indirect lighting is fine for lighting people and their paintings. A home is not a gallery. Table and floor lamps work perfectly well. Blend them with special lights for paintings, if you must, as long as the overall effect isn't too strong." Leo Castelli, Leo Castelli Gallery.

"Most paintings look better in natural daylight than they do in (artificial) night light. Lighting depends so much upon the painting... low light on pale colors, many shades or subtle hues. A painting with fewer colors can take a stronger light but no painting should have too bright a light on it. And I like a painting to hang rather low on a wall—almost below eye level." Betty Parsons, Betty Parsons Gallery.

"The greatest asset of track lighting is its flexibility—the wide range of fixtures to choose from, the ease with which changes can be accommodated, the variety of lamps that can be used. And when it's combined with a dimmer system to control lighting intensity the whole effect can be very satisfying.

"Hanging paintings on stark white walls will become a problem when you try to light them. Light reflected off the wall interferes with light coming off the painting and the result will obscure what you're trying to see. A soft wash of low-voltage incandescent light and a slightly muted color on the wall should solve the problem. Another advantage to using ambient light is that if you rotate your paintings often, you won't have to relight." Marvin Gelman, president of Lighting Services, manufacturers of special lighting installations at the Robert Lehman Wing of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York.

Framing

"Frames are furniture . . . not furniture for the room, but furniture for the art. Consider how the artist intended the work to be viewed when you choose a frame." Barbara Kulicke, Kulicke Frames.

"Find the focus of activity in a painting—that's one way to determine framing. A focus may be shifted from the center of the canvas to an edge so that an edge may become a 'limit' of activity. You may or may not wish to contain that activity with a frame." Ben Heller, Ben Heller, Inc.

"Neat bronze bands are often the the best replacements for elaborate frames. But I usually find myself with frames that are appropriate to the demands of the painting. For instance, I put no frame on a Rothko because the painting necessitates that it be left bare. A Dubuffet, however, which is extremely difficult to find a frame for, ends up looking fabulous in an old, blackened, 16th-century Italian frame." Richard L. Feigan, Richard L. Feigan Gallery.

Moving and Handling

"Large canvases, say 7 by 10 feet high, are more often being painted on stretchers with movable braces that allow them to be folded. When you can fold a canvas it is much easier to move. Canvases can also be unstretched and wrapped around a cardboard cylinder. Because every painting presents its own peculiar characteristics, leave it to the professional to have it moved, hung, repaired, and restored." Jimmy Le Brun, Le Brun Brothers, Art Movers.

Care

"A draftsman's brush is the only thing to use if you wish to dust a painting. A feather duster has quills and a cloth rag too much abrasive fiber for the surface of a painting." Jean Volkmer, Chief Conservator of the Museum of Modern Art, N.Y.

"Modern apartments almost force you to break traditional furniture arrangements to accommodate plants and large paintings. For instance, in order to hang a 9-foot painting in a room with 10 foot ceilings, bring the sofa away from the wall, even into the middle of the room." Arthur E. Smith, Arthur E. Smith, Inc.

Color decorating with feeling

PALE BACKGROUND FOR ART AND PEOPLE

LIVING-ENTERTAINING ROOM THAT'S INVITING AND REFRESHING

In one apartment, two approaches to color create several comfortable backgrounds against which an arresting collection of modern art and the people who live with it are both at home. The apartment is big, built during that solid era when rooms were large, glass came in little leaded panes, and wood paneling was always deep dark brown. To remodel it for new owners, architect Keith Kroeger and designer Filippa Naess moved a few walls, replaced a few windows—but mostly they used color to give formality and informality both a light and easy air. Living room, left, is all-over white punctuated with color—an Yves Klein painting over the fireplace, three Josef Albers squares, a circle by Kenneth Noland, tones respectfully repeated in cushions, plants, and flowers. A small powder room became a mirrored bar that can vanish when its flush door is closed. On the far right-hand side of the room, behind Moorish arches and draped white curtains, is a frivolous space with dais, cushions, a tiny fountain. "It's a folly," says Mrs. Naess, "a place for quiet conversations." Furniture, much of it designed by Mrs. Naess and Mark Hampton, made for them by Fleming-Hegner, is simple and dramatic. People entering the room for the first time tend to be a little stunned by all that white. "Do I dare sit down" was one reaction—but all that white is removable, washable, thoroughly practical. The rugs are white cotton rag. The white cotton upholstery on sofas and chairs is fastened with Velcro, easy to unstick and throw into the washer—with the curtains, if they need it—and easy to put back on. "Besides," says Mrs. Naess, "it's not $60-a-yard fabric. It's inexpensive enough that you can afford to get tired of it." Furniture bases where feet may rub are white-painted wood, simple to touch up. Only the cushion covers in clear pastels and chromatic shades, bengalene at $1.25 a yard, can't be recycled. The cushions, though, are a key to the character of the room. By rearranging them, the owners can shift its mood. By scattering the small batik pillows from the "folly," they can change the feeling entirely. "A room," explains Mr. Kroeger, "should be able to respond to the people in it."

HORST

Movable color—paintings, pillows, plants

Each painting, each lit by its own downspots, had an assigned place before the rest of the room was planned. Then furniture arrangements were decided upon. Sometimes the large and very comfortable furniture was designed to fit the plan.

Tiles in the bathrooms—pale cream or dark caramel, plus light-doubling mirror

COLORFUL BACKGROUNDS, APPEALING AND PRACTICAL

These bathrooms," says Mr. Kroeger, "are designed to make you feel comfortable and cared for while you are in them." The bathrooms are also very private, one for her, one for him. color is used by science and industry as a speedy detangler of complex systems. This dazzling display comes from a network of telephone wires. Each color combination is coded when installed into a telephone circuit—a great help for engineers, both in setting up new systems and in locating where repairs are needed. EXCITING CALMING COMMUNICATING COLOR

d out what color means to our readers, in our March questionnaire we asked you, t color or colors do you think masculine, feminine, sexy, ng, and stimulating?" We asked you, "What do these make you think of—brilliant pastel pink, bright orange, green, pale blue, soft beige?" dy had trouble answering question.

other words, people associate s, moods, scenes, or emowith colors just as naturally h the written word—which is extraordinary, when you come to think of it. What is even more extraordinary is that we all seem to have the same or similar associations with the different colors. For instance, 70 percent of people responding to these questions said that they thought brown a masculine color; 50 percent thought pink a feminine color; 60 percent thought red was stimulating; 50 percent associated pale blue with sky; and about 60 percent associated dark green with forest, woods, or jungle.

"I think there is a universal language of color in an off-the-top-of-the-head sense," says Dr. Deborah T. Sharpe, psychologist and color consultant, and author of The Psychology of Color and Design (Nelson-Hall). "Your immediate response to a color is common to many people, with cultural differences, of course."

The reasons for this include family and social background, and also go back much further to our earliest origins. Color in nature has an important functional role (green chlorophyll converts, by a chemical process of photosynthesis, the energy of the sun into food for plants; colors assist the pollination process; color in birds and animals is used as sexual identification; and as camouflage, for instance). For primitive man, the colors of the seasons were vitally important to survival; probably red became the danger signal because of the sight of blood. Indeed, even today, you'll find farmers, hunters, nomadic peoples, and sailors are far more sensitive to color than many people, since it signals crucial information to them about weather, growth, the earth's condition, and so forth. The fact that so many of our questionnaire responders associated colors with nature (sky, forest, heat, fire, sunset, sand, and ocean were all the highest scoring examples), shows our continued close relationship to nature.

Although the first color association may be similar for many people, it becomes more complex upon reflection, believes Dr. Sharpe. "If you probe deeper," she explains, "you will get more personal responses. If a person walks into a bright red room, then the first associations will probably be common to everyone, if you make your query within the first few minutes. If, however, the person stays longer and you continue to ask questions, then other, more personal meanings will emerge, based on the person's own life experience."

This also was confirmed in the questionnaire. Our readers' first associations were often concrete, then moved into more personal, emotional realms. Several people associated dark green with Security, for instance, Christmas, Emeralds, or Sad and Dreary. People found pastel pink was Warm, Happy, Good—one person sug-

Great news about architecture in color

"White is modern" is no longer necessarily the rule. Here are 13 leading architects bringing color into their work, to warm relationships between people and buildings.

Charles Moore, 1, eminent professor at U.C.L.A., innovative figure in architecture for over twenty years, winner of twenty-eight awards. 2, 3. Robert Stern and John Hagmann, a young team in partnership since 1969, recently won a first place award in the Roosevelt Island Housing Competition. 4. Peter Eisenman, Director of the Institute for Architecture & Urban Studies, New York. One of the group of architects now known as the "New York Five." 5. Stanley Tigerman, sculptor, painter, as well as architect. In practice in his home town, Chicago, since 1964. Until 1971, Professor of Architecture at the University of Illinois. 6, 7, 8. John Murphy, Alan Levy, Richard Saul Wurman, a young team based in Philadelphia since 1963. Richard Wurman studied under Louis Kahn, has written over a dozen books. The firm's most significant project the public improvement of Penn's Landing, Philadelphia. 9. Michael Graves, Professor of Architecture, Princeton University. Designed the award-winning Rockefeller House, at Pleasantville Hills, New York. Another member "The Five." 10, 11, 12. Hugh Hardy, Macolm Holzman, Norman Pfeiffer.

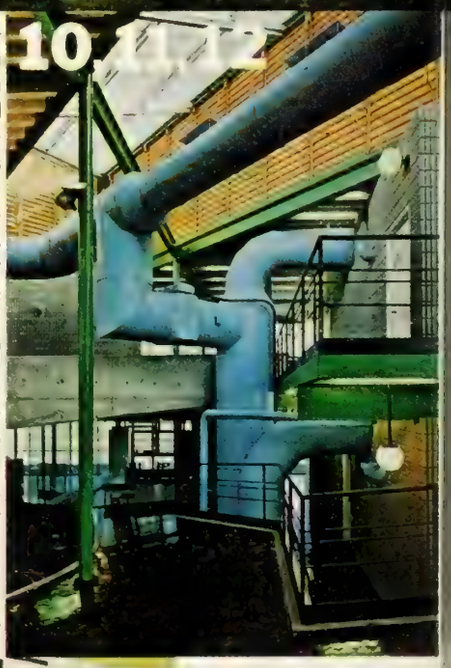
Known for their broad experience in civic design, schools, hospitals, and the visual and performing arts. Winners of the Brunner Prize in Architecture from the National Institute of Arts and Letters. Current projects include the Brooklyn Children's Museum, a concert hall for the Denver Symphony Orchestra. 13. John Johansen. A bold architect, author and lecturer who has received repeated honors in the last thirty years.

Mexican colors "seem appropriate for a house in California," and Charles Moore feels that "in white it would be too glary." In a scheme worked out by Yale graphic design student, Tina Beebe, for her Master's thesis, there are twenty-three colors "to make it look like a Mexican village." Pale adobe colors, mauves, buffs, for one side, oranges, yellows, pinks for the other. "But the values are about the same," Moore points out, "which seems the way to use lots of colors successfully."

Blue, green, and orange in the Columbus Occupational Health Center, by Hardy Holzman Pfeiffer, make the medical building human. Green denotes the structural elements; blue, heating and cooling. The orange wall, which catches sunshine from a strategic skylight, warms the rooms. "Color is a wonderfully humanizing device," says Hugh Hardy. "It's personal and exciting." By emphasizing all the machinery that goes into modern building he hopes people will question the necessity of it. "However anti-machine you may be, you can't really change a situation unless it is clear what the situation is."

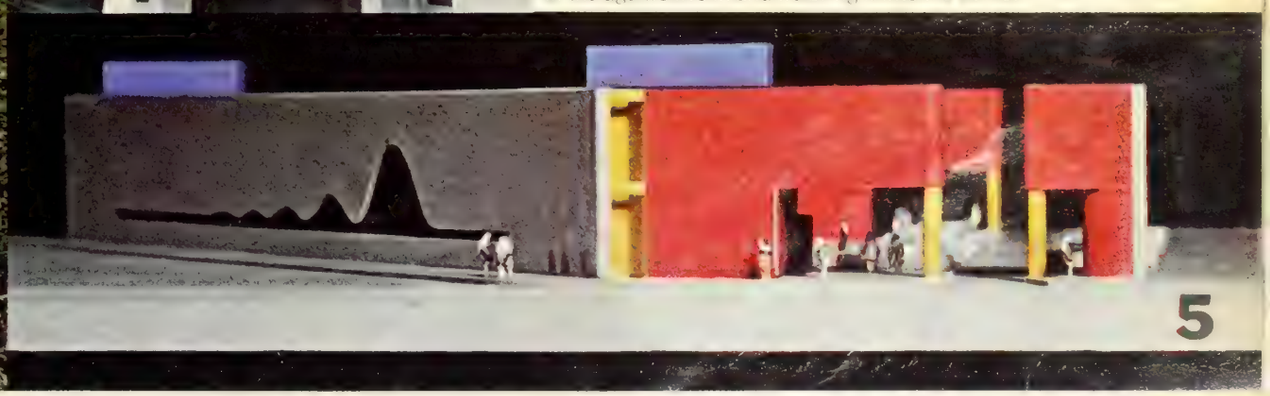


Terra-cotta, yellow, gray, and green in a house by Michael Graves refer to objects outside. Green stair rails reflect a privet hedge in the garden, and plants on an upstairs terrace, to which the stairway leads. Yellow paints a sunlit "gate" to the terrace. The terra-cotta and gray walls repeat outdoor walls. Mr. Graves, a notable painter as well as architect, often treats indoor walls with individual murals, capturing colors, shapes, and the varied forms of nature surrounding the building. "I play on remembrances; color is not additive, it has a real value for me because it employs myth"

ELYSE LEWIN, ED STOCKLE N, TOM YEE, ROBERT LAUTMAN, W LLIAMS & MEYER, NORMAN MCGIT

Yellow and white mark the start by architects Robert Stern and John Hagmann into more colorful houses. The location of this one, on a New England hill looking across a wide valley, partly led them into it. "We needed something that was bold, that would take command of the landscape. One element we could use to contribute a positive impact was color. Yellow is a vital color, good in a very long, bleak winter—and the owners live year round in this house." Aside from this, the material used for the outside (a new sprayed-on coating over plywood that gives an impression of stucco) plus the Italian spirit of the design, seemed to call for something other than white. "All of Italy is a Technicolor experience and the farther north you go, Germany, Finland, and Russia, the tradition has been for highly polychromed buildings. We've had a very limited view in this country."

Blue, gray, and terra-cotta in a house in Connecticut by John Johansen reflect the architect's strong views about technology, textures, and materials. Walls are precut asbestos sheeting, with color baked in; windows, factory-made units. The house is divided into three "components" each a different color, linked dramatically with silver metal tubes. "Nine years ago, I used a great deal of concrete; now I'm weary of it. We go through phases. There is a feeling today that all color is good, certainly, it's important. Color is the artist's way of making life bearable. It's therapeutic. Architects who don't use it now are simply not with the vibration of the time. We've made friends with color, with super graphics, Las Vegas, electric signage, color television. It's all part of the age we live in and we bring it into the home."



: to match sea and sky for a beach by Murphy Levy Wurman also shown on page a result of a limitation to low-cost materials. The ers knew color had to come to the rescue ("with os siding you have to paint") but they didn't want garish. "We like oneness. The outside of this house ways be blue. It's become quite a landmark, boats the water find their way by it. From the bay it very appropriate." This is a colorful house inside, nk for the hallway, green for a spiral staircase and ors. Building to stricter budgets will lead to more n housing, Mr. Wurman speculates. "With wood, is no need for paint, it has an indigenous color of n, but factory-made products do require color."

Green, red, gray, and silver show up for the first time in a house by Peter Eisenman. "Doing a whole white house now without an attempt to use colors seems to me to be almost a cop-out, too timid. This is still very timid, although the red and green are bold and the effect is quite staggering. Colors add to the density of the space, the house is richer for it." He uses color systematically. The center of the house is white and progresses through three shades of gray to the outside walls, "toward infinity, which is black." Staircases, volumetric as opposed to the planes of the other spaces, had to be identified in other colors, so he chose the complementaries of gray, red, and green. Silver for the stair landings denotes "the neutral level."

Red, yellow, and blue in the Illinois Regional Library for the Blind and the Physically Handicapped, Chicago, delineate the fifth project by Stanley Tigerman using color. (See another, the Hot Dog House, page 96.) Here, the structural parts of the building are painted yellow, exposed ducts for heating, cooling, plumbing are blue. Exterior walls, with the exception of one in concrete, are red-painted metal panels. "The purpose of it all," says the architect," is that a library should be fun, not something wildly serious. And then this is for the blind, some of whom are not 100 percent blind and upon whom color has impact. So here is this colorful object in the city for them, and to make sighted friends of totally blind people who go there say wow!"

Rough cut cedar, pre-cut boards for economy led to an exciting design

The young couple with two children who make this their weekend and summer vacation house were building on a very tight budget. $35,000 was the limit. As often happens, restrictions resulted in innovations. For one thing, architect Stanley Tigerman was forced to choose rough cut cedar in double height, 18-foot pre-cut boards for walls, which he then "soft cornered" to reduce labor costs. The house width, 14 feet, was predetermined by the use of 14-foot pre-cut joists inside. The building was put together by two young carpenters in two months. There are no ceilings, no doors on any closets. Floors are scrubbed, unsanded spruce. All windows are fixed. Everything electrical is exposed—wiring conduits, switch boxes, heating ducts. The furnace is in the downstairs bathroom, the water heater tucked under the stairs. Using every inch of the space, Stanley Tigerman fitted in three bedrooms, two bathrooms, plus living room, dining-kitchen, and family essentials, like a dishwasher, laundry, and fireplace.

The family owns 9 acres of prairie in Illinois, a commuting distance from Chicago. It is farm country; silos and granaries dot the landscape. But city weekenders are moving in. With a high speed road bordering the southern edge of the property, close neighbors to east and west, the first decision was to orient the house to the north, toward a view of a pond, now dug out as a family swimming pool, surrounded by oaks and willows. (It was this view and the rugged, wild quality of the country that prompted the owners to buy the land in the first place.) A further thought of Stanley Tigerman in siting the house, was to make a surprise out of the view. "It became clear in my mind that there was a chance to do a proscenium stage. At first you see nothing, just this granary wall effect, as you walk through. It's like parting a curtain. There's nature! When you enter the door all the neighbors are left behind, urbanity and all the problems of the week are left behind. You don't even see prairie any more because the land drops away 20 feet to the pond. The whole thing is entertaining and witty, rather like Alice Through the Looking Glass. When you finally walk out to the deck and you look back, you see another surprise. The house has changed, too. You enter a wood wall and you come out of a painting." The plan separates children from grownups both downstairs and up. They have their playroom and bedroom on one side upstairs. More play space in the dining-kitchen. Grownups have the living room space and a bedroom directly over it. Bathrooms are in the center. The family are people who live in a casual way; they like to use all the space all the time, entertain friends a lot. There are always children around. The wife wanted a house she could sweep with a broom, surfaces that needed little or no maintenance. "The house is responsive to this need. They wanted something simple; they have it," says Mr. Tigerman. "But I was able to imply sophistication at the same time. Everything is there." The wife, an artist and sculptor and a very visual person, made the colorful Marimekko print seat covers and cushions, which fit the curving banquettes in the living areas. Her drawings decorate some of the walls. She joined Stanley Tigerman in painting the outside louvers, and the deck black. Painted all the inside conduit pipes black, herself. "For me, things have to look right. I'm prepared to put up with some inconvenience for the final effect of something." Adds Stanley Tigerman: "I was very happy we participated in doing things together, that there was an interaction between client and architect."

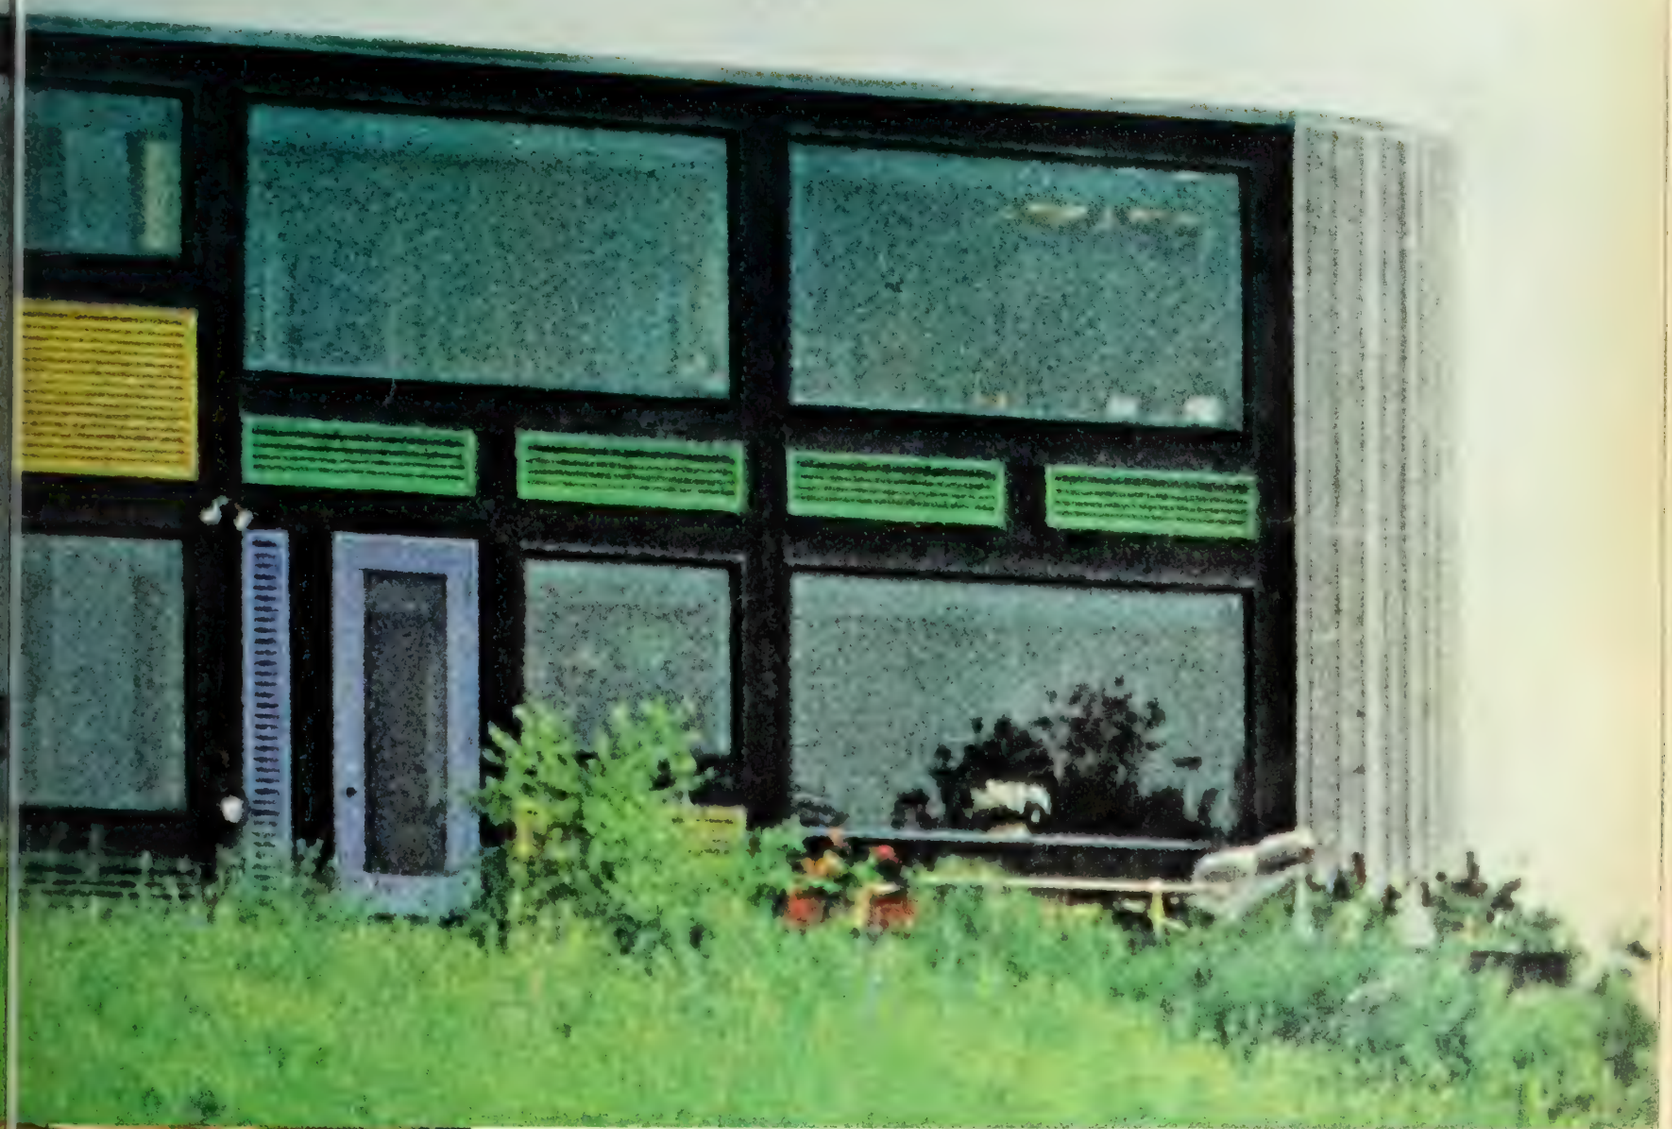
Heat, light, and ventilating systems made part of the visual design

Here is a painted wall that is more than a painted wall. It is a brilliant study in oppositions. In its attempt to contrast with nature, it actually captures nature, reflecting sky and clouds in the glass, so the "painting" becomes a moving canvas of shifting moods and images. As a way of handling the exterior of a very simple, low-cost house, it is as sophisticated in its allusion to abstract art as any outer wall could be. Beyond all this, the graphic treatment of a hot dog shape matches the contemporary, artistic spirit of the owners, who are seeking a new way of living, casually and practically, today. There is no symbolism involved in the choice of colors, just the owners' personal preferences. "We experimented, we changed." Building the house has developed the family's life considerably. They are learning to garden, grow their own vegetables, plant trees. Much of the land will stay natural; they are not the sort who like to mow lawns. "We prefer to see everything grow and watch the changes from month to month."

Below: Chrome Yellow, Real Red, Green Mint, and Wild Iris color ventilation louvers at the back of the house. The owners used ordinary enamel paint; same for the black deck. All canvas deck furniture comes from the Cado Collection at the Scandinavian Design store, Chicago. For building materials and equipment used in this house, please see page 136.



Far left to right: Master bedroom, quilted bed, long counter serves as make-up or desk space. The sculpture is by the wife. Open storage for personal belongings, trinkets, books. The "balcony" shows how the upstairs section is "cut out" to allow the double height spaces at each end in the living rooms below. Stairs in center of house catch view of pond. In kitchen, white Formica-topped counter divides working space from dining area. Counter stools are inexpensive, but good-looking design. Plants hang from exposed joists. Dining space flows into curved seating area. Overhead, exposed electric conduits with sockets along track for bulbs; the forced air heating duct.

Your Color Aura

What is it? How does it change with emotions, physical nd mental well-being? Why scientists are encouraged about using aura to detect, reat, and prevent illness.

By Beverly Russell

"What we are faced with is the fact that many aspects of reality which we comfortably thought were at best mythical...are emerging as vital for a complete understanding of the human organism as a whole."

Brendan O'Regan, Research Coordinator for R. Buckminster Fuller, Design Science Institute

Today scientists all over the world are investigating auras, the invisible patterns of energies and force fields surrounding living organisms. They perceive auras through radiation photography. This is a sort of X-ray technique first developed in Russia by scientists Semyon and Valentina Kirlian, and now being adapted and used in this country at a number of medical and research institutions. Dr. Thelma Moss, psychologist at the Center for Health Sciences, U.C.L.A. California, author of "The Probability of the Impossible" is one eminent investigator. Dr. Stanley Krippner, Professor of Psychology, Humanistic Psychology Institute, San Francisco, and Director, New York Institute of Child Development, editor of "Galaxies of Life," a collection of scientific papers, and Dr. William Tiller, at Stanford University are others.

Every living organism, including you, is surrounded by a color aura and now it can be photographed by a special process

RADIATION FIELD PHOTOGRAPHY BY KENDALL JOHNSON FROM THE LIVING AURA

Auras, streams of light—halos—are seen in luminous clusters of blues, lilac, green, reddish yellow, orange, and grays and can change color dramatically. The intensity of the glow and the shape can change too. At first, it was thought the alterations were due to variations in film or the technique of photography. But tests show conclusively now that the color changes are due to personal fluctuating emotions, and the physical and mental conditions of the subjects being photographed. What becomes increasingly clear is that the more scientists can find out about auras, the better they can learn to interpret them, then the more we shall understand about health and ill health and increase our ways of detecting, treating, and preventing human conditions, from depression to cold fevers. Prevention could be the most significant result. Some Soviet physicians agree they could diagnose and forecast the type of illness that would appear if the aura is not restored to its normal state.

Researcher Kendall Johnson, who works on experiments in the laboratory with Dr. Moss and is author of an informative new book The Living Aura, to be published by Hawthorn this fall, has noticed consistently that rest, relaxation, and a feeling of ease correlate with a wide, bright, smooth blue aura. Tension, apparently, tends to produce a weak interrupted aura. Anger and fearfulness can be associated with a large red blotch. Nervous conditions seem to affect the quality of color; physical disturbances affect the brightness. Experiments on cigarette smokers concur with other medical findings that smoking changes body metabolism and has a deteriorating effect on organic functions. "The energy image changes significantly after smoking and inhalation from cigarettes," reports Mr. Johnson.

Another further fascinating discovery is that auras can change when two people are in close proximity. In some cases there is a definite repulsion between respective auras, in other cases they join. Friends working together seem to generate brighter auras than two strangers working together. Is this telling us something about the "vibes" going on between two people, Mr. Johnson asks? Our vocabulary in everyday language is loaded with terms describing interpersonal relationships in terms of associations with energy. "He's really charged." "She's a drag." "He electrifies me." "She has a magnetic personality." "What a warm person." "She drains me," and so on. In human interaction and contact, Mr. Johnson concludes from his tests, there is a transaction taking place between some individuals so that energy is accumulated and has a nourishing effect. In other cases, energy is grounded, thrown off, or has a depleting effect.

The study of auras is providing a link to things that Chinese medical practitioners have been talking about for the last 5,000 years. To the Chinese, the art of acupuncture is a method of reestablishing equilibrium in a body that has lost its balance, where energy has been slowed down and sickness results. Oriental massage is practiced for the same effect. In Chinese medical thought there are no specific diseases. Bodily symptoms, whether we call them arthritis, asthma, or whatever, are re-

Your Color Dreams

■ ARE WOMEN MORE AWARE OF COLOR THAN MEN?

■ WHAT DOES THE COLOR MEAN?

■ WHY DO SOME PEOPLE DREAM IN COLOR AND NOT OTHERS?

New clinical findings that will help you understand your dream life

By Caroline Seebohm

We all dream every night, and yet funnily enough, it is often very difficult to remember whether we dream in color or not. And if we do remember, we seem not to agree about whether our dreams are in color or black and white. But of those House & Garden readers who answered our question in the color questionnaire, "Do you dream in color?" almost two-thirds stated they always or often do dream in color.

What, then about the other third? Why do some people dream in color and not others? What does it all mean?

An important experiment conducted by Dr. William Dement and Dr. Charles Fisher of the Department of Psychiatry, Mount Sinai Hospital, New York; and Dr. Edwin Kahn and Dr. Joseph E. Barmack of the Department of Psychology, City College of New York, reported the following findings:

1. A high 82.7 percent of their subjects dreamed in color.

2. People tend to say they dream in color more often when asked about it immediately after they wake up from the dream.

3. Dreaming should be considered a colored rather than a black-and-white phenomenon. "It would appear," the doctors declared, "that it is the lack of color rather than its presence in dream recall that requires explanation."

I asked Dr. Edwin Kahn, one of the contributors to this study, why people think they dream in black and white.

"Color fades," Dr. Kahn explained. "That is why it makes such a difference when you ask the question about dreaming in color. If you ask someone right after he or she has woken up from a dream, you are much more likely to get a color response. If you wait, and ask sometime later, then the color might have been lost. It is also possible that people who sleep very deeply may lose color in recalling their dreams."

We take color so much for granted, that often the color in a dream cannot be recalled. But you can check this yourself—if you wake up from a dream and cannot be sure if it was in color or not, start describing the dream. For instance, in Dr. Kahn's study, one subject mentioned she saw "a bar of soap in the bathtub with the baby." When she finished describing the dream, without making any reference to color, the experimenter asked, "What did the soap look like?" The subject replied, "Like any bar of soap looks. It was round, it was pink, and the baby was playing with it in the bathtub." In other words, you may not realize your dream was in color until you describe an object that you can definitely characterize as colored.

Color in dreams can mean a lot of things. It can simply represent reality. It can be symbolic, that is representing an emotion or situation that you do not wish to deal with in a realistic way. For instance, if you are very concerned about a person, the color or colors you associate with that person may dominate your dreams. Or it can be the effect of a recent memory. For instance, Dr. John Hermann, an ophthalmologist, made a group of people wear colored goggles all day long (the same type of experiment can be done with people sitting in a one-colored room for a length of time) and their dreams turned out to relate very vividly to the color to which they had been subjected.

Several reports indicate that women tend to dream more vividly in color than men. Some investigators suggest this is because women have more intuitive and imaginative natures than men. Dr. Kahn's more rational view is that women usually make more color decisions than men—they are constantly thinking about color in their clothes, in their houses, and so forth—and this is reflected in their dreams. Indeed, Dr. Kahn ventured to suggest that the reason for the high percentage of our questionnaire respondents dreaming in color might be attributed to the fact that House & Garden readers are more aware of color in their lives than other groups —an irresistible conclusion! ■

ded as an indication of where he body the energy flow is out balance or damned up. Acuncture needles are inserted in one of 700 points in the body timulate the energy flow. (When edles are used to produce anal-sia, the needles are stopping a w of sensation to the brain, so n is not felt.)

Skepticism about this mode of dicine and the existence of the upuncture points is gradually inishing in the West, following studies of aura photographers. Johnson has been able to de-t acupuncture points through eas of changeable luminescence auras. And from this discovery developed an acuometer, an trument capable of amplifying tiny current produced on the n at places that correspond h the traditional Chinese acuncture points.

n the same way, Dr. Moss and Johnson have been able to nclude that there is something re than meets the eye when it mes to therapeutic massage. At ir laboratories, people with own healing powers in their nds were called upon for experints with medical patients. Raition photography disclosed t after the healing experience, healer's aura became weaker d the patients, who began the periment with thin, broken, and tched auras, showed large ar auras. The healers wound in the place where the subjects gan. "The pictures spoke for emselves," says Mr. Johnson. omething occurred."

Why are some people blessed h a green thumb and how is it at others seem unable to make ngs grow and are known as own thumbs? Experiments on s level of touching have been warding, too. When Mr. Johnson ked Mr. or Ms. Green Thumb interact with a damaged leaf, holding his or her hand 5 or 6 hes above it, the leaf's aura came brighter. When Mr. Brown umb did the same thing, the ra dimmed. And when Mr. own Thumb did what he deribed as "zapping it," he found could almost make the aura sappear altogether. Energy exanges, then, undoubtedly exist rough the hands. "The implications of our research are very broad," concludes Mr. Johnson.

In the future, how will we go about detecting the state of our auras and checking on the balance of our personal color waves? Mr. Johnson suggests that instead of going to a doctor, we may climb into a Lucite cocoon and have various points in our body connected up to a whole complex of wires and scanning devices. This information might be processed through a computer to analyze harmony and disharmony.

Meanwhile, there are a number of Kirlian photographic kits available, which can be assembled at home by the amateur scientist, to experiment with. They range in price from $10 to several hundred dollars. One from Edmund Scientific Company, Barrington, N.J. costs $49.95. Mr. Johnson, who started out by assembling his own in a garage for $50 says: "No special knowledge is needed to operate your own equipment."

Does all this seem too unbelievable? Aldous Huxley said: "What should we do about events, which by all the rules ought not to occur but which nevertheless occur? Two courses are open to us. We can either shut our eyes in the hope that they will go away and leave us in peace—or we can accept them for the time being as inexplicable anomalies." ■

FRESH COLOR AND A FRESH LIFE FOR AN OLD HOUSE

When a couple with three young children decided to remodel this landmark farmhouse, they wanted colors and materials that would be practical and in airy contrast to the heat and brilliance of their hilltop overlooking the sea. They also wanted a small private garden with bright flowers that would flourish despite dry, sometimes roisterous, winds. Milanese architect Gae Aulenti glassed-in an open gallery at one end of the house to form a cool cave-like living room. Different size panes add interest to the arches. She terraced the lift of an adjoining slope to make an enclosed garden as refreshing to look at from indoors as it is for sunbathing, reading, sitting in the cool of the evening. For the house, Miss Aulenti used black slate for the floors, chose pale pink or natural linen for sofas, cushions and designed furnishings including tables, leather-and-chrome chairs, globe lamps.

A GARDEN IN STEPS

An amphitheatre of flowers—a surprise and yet so sensible. The small garden's enclosure of warmth, fragrance, and privacy invites everyone outdoors from earliest spring to the last golden drop of summer. No scouring wind can undo this garden's spring daffodils and tulips or summery cascades of lavender-pink ivy-leaved geraniums and passion vine. The rows of low sedums, succulents, and other plants are chosen to resist summer drought as well as wind. Although this garden is high above the Italian fishing village of Portofino, the idea and plants are suited to hot summers or dry climates anywhere: spiky aloes, red-flowering Dragon Blood sedum, red echeveria (E. pulu-oliver), pink-petaled ice plant (Lampanthrus, also known as Mesembryanthemum), a broad ribbon of golden gazania (G. ringens), lavender-blue ageratum. Flowers are always in bloom, or changed as needed from a nearby nursery bed at one side of the house. The terracing is sculptural land art; the planting is a kind of painting. To frame the garden at the top where land and sky meet, a sempreverde bed holds small evergreens so informal and hardy that they are no bother at all. More ideas and plan of this garden on page 200.

Thinking Carpet

What's available? What's best for you?
What should you know about carpet?
Some experts give you pointers.

What do you want it for? Where will you use it? How long must it last? Skidmore, Owings & Merrill are architects who think a lot of carpet—46,000 square yards, for instance, in a corporate headquarters just designed in Westchester. "We use a cut pile for a luxurious look," says Jack Dunbar, senior designer in charge of interiors. "Loop gives a tailored look." In hospitals and public dining rooms, he might specify a monofilament fiber for long-lasting strength. "With a central vacuum system, cleaning a carpet is easier than mopping a floor." Since many office buildings have wide-open spaces these days, he has begun to use patterns—"something interesting"—in public spaces, with solid colors for private offices. "Economics always affect what you decide to use," he says. Wool, his favorite—"a natural fiber, so it has natural reactions"—is expensive and sometimes in short supply. So he might recommend one of a range of man-made fibers.

What carpet?

"You should know the kind of feeling you want your room to have, but the less prejudice you have about fibers, the better," says Ted Einstein of the large carpet retailer Einstein-Moomjy. "Ten years is a perfectly reasonable estimate for the life of a carpet, and it's quite likely that you'll be bored and want a change long before a good carpet wears out. If you put yourself into the hands of a knowledgeable salesperson, let him help." It should be a pleasant experience, says Mr. Einstein. If it isn't, look elsewhere.

How might YOU use carpet?

If designer Bill Machado has a small space and wants a feeling of size, he might carpet the walls too. If he carpets, he covers up the whole floor. "It simplifies floor care if you have to do only one kind." His favorite is natural wool in uncut pile, undyed, to let objects supply the color.

Architect Douglas Kahn, who designed the room on the opposite page, carpets walls—and furniture, too. Carpeted platforms become chairs, lounges, tables, places to put things. He likes a room to be firm, but to feel soft.

WHAT DO YOU LOOK FOR?

Face weight is the first key to carpet quality, says K. Robert Najarian of Skidmore, Owings & Merrill. That's the amount of yarn you have to wear through before you wear the carpet out. There are federal standards for minimum face weights, and most major manufacturers include the face weight in their descriptive brochures. Thirty-five ounces of wool or Acrilan per square yard is fine for residential use, says Mr. Najarian. S.O.M. specifies 50 or more ounces for commercial installations. Your carpet salesman should be able to get the face weight figures for you.

Be sure the label identifies 100 per cent of the materials used in making your carpet. Carpet makers can buy reject yarn and identify it as "other" on the label—though legally "other" may merely mean less than 5 percent of the total. Muddy colors are one giveaway. The best insurance of quality is to shop in a quality store, to buy name-brand carpet.

Backing may be jute, a synthetic, or cotton. If the carpet is good quality, the backing is not likely to give trouble.

Construction is a matter of choice, and of use. Woven carpets have the more stable structure. Most fine Orientals are woven. Wilton and Axminster carpets are woven by processes that allow a pattern to be put in on the loom. Tufted carpet—broadloom—is the most widely available, 60 percent of all sales according to retailer Einstein. Yarn is punched through a backing to whatever depth is wanted. Loops—pile—may be cut or left whole. Indoor-outdoor carpets are often felted. Carpets can also be knitted. It's an inexpensive process and is used almost entirely for small rugs. Several manufacturers have other new and promising processes.

Check flammability. Most deaths by fire are due to inhaling the smoke and toxic fumes of burning materials, so all carpets must now pass a federal test for resistance to fire.

Check insect proofing. Man-made fibers are naturally resistant, but natural materials should be permanently treated against moths and carpet beetles.

A good carpet deserves a good underlayment. Mr. Najarian of S.O.M. recommends hair and jute sandwiched between rubber sheets, which sells for about $2 a yard. Any underlayment will protect and prolong the life of a carpet, and the best is only marginally more expensive than a makeshift.

How do you care for carpets?

- Put it down with a good underlayment—and do watch where you put it. If it's within 15 feet of an outside door, put a mat outside the door and a small rug inside to catch tracked-in grit that can cut the life out of a carpet.
- Vacuum thoroughly at least once a week. Vacuums with beater bars can generally dislodge more dirt than straight suction vacuums.
- Wipe up spills promptly. If you use a chemical spot remover, test it in an out-of-the-way corner first to make sure it won't affect color. Avoid getting the carpet too wet.
- Periodically the carpet will need a more thorough cleaning. Most people find it easiest to call in a professional who will either clean it where it is, or take it to his plant. It is also possible to do it yourself. The Carpet and Rug Institute (Dalton, Ga. 30720) and the Consumer Education Center (Johnson Wax, Racine, Wisc. 53403) give details in guides to carpet care.
- Shift your carpet from time to time if you can, to even out the wear. Consider using small rugs in traffic lanes.
- Save the label. It has information you may need later.

A one-room place to live where the furniture is mostly carpet

A long, high, narrow space with skylights to contain all of a full city life—how to do it? Architect Douglas Kahn and designer Stephanie Mallis did it with carpet, an all-over neutral loop that pads three levels, eliminates need for most furniture. Sleeping is high on the third level at one end (opposite, top); eating is low, at the other (opposite, bottom). Yellow paint emphasizes structural beams, draws the eye to the skylights. Why carpet? It's warm to look at, soft to touch, it absorbs sound, and it adds a little to energy-saving insulation. Besides, it's fun. With carpet you can turn a hallway into a three-dimensional piece of modern art, or make a table, or deal with a problem wall. Architect Douglas Kahn and interior designer Stephanie Mallis, of Kahn & Mallis Associates, use it to solve a lot of tricky design problems, either where space is tight and they want to make it look uncluttered and relaxed, or where space is plentiful and they want to fill it with furniture that looks a little sculptural. Projects shown here are some of their answers. Most home carpenters would have the skills needed to make them, according to Joseph Staiano, who put the stripes on the walls on these pages. Here's how you do it: Collect a chalk line, a plumb bob, a ruler (preferably metal), a razor knife, a crayon or felt-tipped pen for marking, some contact cement, and a staple gun. To carpet the wall, mark the project onto the wall exactly, using chalk line and plumb bob, making sure it's perfectly straight and plumb. Unroll the carpet upside down on the floor, copy the measurements from the walls, marking the carpet backing every 4 to 6 inches, making straight lines with the chalk line. Remember that curves must be reversed because the carpet is upside down—and if you feel uncertain, make a pattern with newspaper or wrapping paper. Lay the ruler along the lines and use it to guide your razor knife. Cut the carpet. Check the pieces to make sure they fit, then spread wall and carpet backing with contact cement, wait until the cement gets tacky, then apply the carpet to the wall. Staple to hold in place until the cement dries. The pile will hide the staples. To carpet furniture, make a paper pattern, check to make sure it fits. Do outer sides first, cutting carpet an inch larger than side. Notch the edges, then spread cement. Wrap carpet around the edges of the furniture (notches will prevent puckering, pile will hide them), staple in place. Cut a paper pattern for inside surfaces, and cut carpet to butt the wrapped edges—don't overlap them. Apply cement, staple in place, and let dry.

What's new that's good to your eye, taste, figure, and health?

FOOD, WOND

We're moving to lighter, healthier food faster than you may think. What do the doctors say? What's the food world doing about it? Plus lots of terrific new light food ideas from across the country

Today we know more than we've ever known about nutrition and health. The right diet now comes into any expert discussion about good bones, skin, eyes, teeth, hair, blood sugar, and—the most talked-about subject of all in recent years—a healthy heart. That is why the way we eat, what we eat, and how we eat has suddenly moved into a new sphere.

Wherever you go, here or abroad, you'll feel a new awareness—about protein and vitamins, about nutritional values, about the world food situation, about using lower calorie ingredients in recipes, about making healthy food more attractive. People today lead busy, energetic lives and entertain more and more at home—who wants to be slowed down by heavy meals?

According to the Economics Research Service of the Department of Agriculture, meat consumption per capita is down—from a high of 192 pounds in 1971, to 188 pounds in 1974 and a projected 185 pounds in 1975. Sugar consumption is down—from 103 pounds per capita in 1972, to 97 pounds in 1974 and a continued downswing projected for 1975. Butter consumption is down; potato consumption is down. Fresh vegetable consumption is up; fresh fruit consumption is up—from 75.6 pounds in 1973, to 78 pounds in 1974 and upwards again for 1975. Starch consumption is down by 50 percent and corn by even more.

So what's happened to our food? It's more healthy, yes, but it's also more interesting. The old "diet food" image is vanishing before the enticing new light ways with classic recipes that our great cooks are coming up with. Cooking classes are booming. Meatless days are becoming a habit. Chinese and Japanese foods are more and more popular. Health food stores, once a fad, are now a familiar sight in cities and towns. French haute cuisine is in the middle of a revolution—from recipes full of rich ingredients, cream and butter, and heavy cream sauces, to new, irresistible lighter food. Even in the top French restaurants in America, people are asking for lighter things. At the Bistro in Beverly Hills, the number one most popular luncheon item is cold salmon served with sliced cucumbers. Number 2, is boeuf en gêlée, and number 3, chicken princess in aspic. Says the Bistro: "We serve one potato salad a year. Our regulars lean to fruits for dessert more and more. The most popular are big stem strawberries served on crushed ice." At New York's La Grenouille, Madame Masson says people are choosing cold poached striped bass with a starter of fresh asparagus.

In short, food-for-health is here, now—but as Julia Child said, "Haven't we been doing this for years?" At House & Garden, for instance, we offered two new reducing diets back in January, 1970; in May, 1971, look for our luscious fruit—quick delights and surprising recipes; then our fresh from the garden cookbook, April 1972; 20 quick fresh fruit ideas, July 1973; 20 quick ideas for summer salads, August 1973; delicious quick meals in a wok, January, 1974; ten diet sherbets, June 1974; cook-ahead cool summer meals, July, 1974; 10 great vegetable main courses, April 1975; low calorie salad dressings, June 1975; irresistible diet food, July 1975.

The new "light food" consciousness that is happening everywhere comes together in this issue; new American home cooking on page 125; wonderful calorie-conscious French menus from Michel Guérard on page 126; delicious light eating, Italian style on page 123; ideas and recipes from doctors, food experts, restaurant owners, and hostesses across the country, who are sharing in the light food movement that is changing—for the better—all our lives.

Dr. Richard Hurley,
Deputy Vice President, American Heart Association
"Diet has changed for many reasons. People are getting more information about nutrition, based upon the diet recommendations of various groups. People are more health conscious because they believe in the role of diet in reducing risk of heart disease. They are watching their weight more, they are exercising more. You don't see nearly so many people who are overweight as you used to. We live with it ourselves—our Heart Association volunteer staff are very health conscious. For instance, the menus at our meetings are based upon our diet recommendations—fruit or a clear broth to start, broiled chicken or poultry, a green vegetable without butter, tossed salad with corn oil and vinegar dressing, and a light sherbet dessert or fresh fruit. That's a typical luncheon menu we might have."

ERFUL light FOOD

A report by Caroline Seebohm

Dr. Georgina Faludi,
'ormer chief of the Special Diabetic and Obesity Clinic,
Hahnemann Hospital, Philadelphia
'The problem of excess weight and ncorrect dieting cannot be over-emphasized. At the moment we ıave 10 million people struggling to ceep down to their normal weight—ınd as long as two eggs with bacon s the standard American breakfast ve are not helping them. We have oo many fad diets—but with more ıutritional knowledge, this is chang-ng. It's not eating little, it's eating ›roperly that counts. I'd much ather see children drink water or nilk or fresh juice than soft drinks. n a country where we have the ›est food available, it would be vonderful if everyone could learn ıow to eat properly and enjoy it—hat is the way to good health."

Dr. E. Cheraskin, ›rofessor and chairman of the )epartment of Oral Medicine,
t the University of Alabama,
ınd coauthor, Psychodietetics
Stein & Day)
More and more patients are asking heir doctors about diet, and that is ›utting pressure upon the medical ›rofession to become more knowl-dgeable. (Even the American Aedical Association's Council on Foods and Nutrition has said that ne of the worst taught courses in ıedical school is diet.) It is time ow to talk about diet—it is vital to ımerica's health. If we can influ-nce large numbers of people to ›rovide their brain cells with nough nutrients (mineral, vita-ıins, essential fatty acids, amino cids, and others) to keep them in easonably good working order, we ave done more to combat all nown ailments than we could by iscovering one more miracle drug. Common sense would dictate that Vhat is good for the body is good or the mind. We agree with that old statement—'you are what you eat'—physicially and emotionally. The nation can enjoy a healthier future if we can improve our eating habits."

Julia Child,
food writer, teacher, and TV personality
"I think the French are catching up to us! At last they are becoming more health conscious and a little more sensible. Some of those meals with nothing but foie gras, truffles, and pastry are enough to choke a horse. We've been serving informal, light meals for a long time—it's been going on in America for years. You at House & Garden have been running low-calorie recipes for some time—yoghurt salad dressings, and so on. Anyone who is sensible and watches calories will cook like this."

Helen Corbitt, food consultant to the Greenhouse Spa, Texas
"Wherever I've traveled, I've seen people eating much lighter food in America—plain grilled food, less sauces, fresh vegetables and fruit, less heavy desserts—and more wine than hard liquor. It's a health awareness that is completely new. People entertain more informally. On a recent visit to Colorado, almost all the entertaining was buffet."

Maurice Moore-Betty, food expert and cooking teacher,
New York City
"The secret to healthy eating is the balance of a menu, and Americans are becoming aware of it. I like a menu to have three courses—from a diet point of view, one stands a better chance of getting everything the body needs in three courses, rather than having a lot of food in one course. Plan light menus—light soups, such as consommé, for a first course, or good fresh vegetables as a course served separately; light meats without sauces, or with a natural sauce—in other words, not a sauce fortified with cream or egg yolk. For dessert, some wonderful fruit. Lamb with pommes boulangère, for instance (recipe, House & Garden October, 1974) and—vegetables as a first course on their own."

Mrs. Eugene Strauss, hostess, Kansas City
"Recently at a series of buffets divided into age groups, the young people ate the least. So perhaps it is the young who are most in tune with calories, cholesterol, and the new food consciousness.

"Foods that used to be starters—such as tomato aspic—are now main courses. And in earlier days, if you went to a cocktail party there would be chickens, hams, and so on as hors d'oeuvres. Now it's cocktails and little else!

Maurice Tuckman,
Curator of Modern Art,
Los Angeles County Museum of Art, and party-giver
"At a recent luncheon, the menu was large platters of smoked fish—whitefish and salmon. Another platter had sliced corned beef, sliced pastrami, sliced prosciutto; a third sliced melons. Bread was rye, pumpernickel, sliced bagels in baskets. All but the bread was devoured—only 5 percent of my guests ate any bread at all."

Marilyn Evans, hostess, New York City
"You can cook with skim milk—and egg substitute can be used in baking. In soufflés we don't use flour—we use cornstarch, potato flour, or arrowroot.

"In summer you can make wonderful cold soups that are not fattening at all—and very healthy—with vegetable bases and without cream. Use yoghurt instead. Cold pea soup, for instance, or romaine lettuce soup. Romaine soufflé is superb. Make a meal out of hors d'oeuvres—tiny little shrimp with a Russian dressing made with yoghurt; pressed cucumbers, grilled sardines, a cold string bean salad—or salad Niçoise. The tradition of five courses went out long ago.

Mrs. Warren H. Clark, hostess, San Francisco
"For a small dinner, we serve three courses; if it's a big dinner, four simple ones. Soufflés lighten a meal, either to begin with or as dessert. A sample light menu for a party would be avocado mousse to start with, then a bouillabaisse made with a basic fish and fresh clams, and salad; then a soufflé for dessert."

The recommended dietary allowances issued by the Food and Nutrition Board of the National Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences are also down—in calories, and in proteins. For instance, in 1968, the recommended number of calories for females aged approximately 35 was 2,000, and 55 grams protein per day; in 1974, the revised number of proteins was down to 46 grams; and for females aged 51 plus, the revised number of calories was down to 1,800—a significant trend.

with three days of superb food planned especially for House & Garden readers by the famous young French chef, Michel Guérard. The spa-hotel he and his wife Christine have created is the talk of food lovers and health seekers

By Naomi Barry

This nature-defying miracle has been realized by Michel Guérard—the most deliciously inventive French chef of our generation—at Eugénie-les-Bains, a charming hideaway in southwest France where smart Parisians are slimming down in an atmosphere of festive gaiety.

The first step was a Personal History. Guérard wanted to lose weight to win the girl. (He is now married to the willowy Christine.) While paring down the avoirdupois, however, he had to keep his balance. Working in a professional kitchen can be fury and violence, demanding stamina and cool control. The usual programs had reduced him to a state of nervous distemper followed by disastrous eating binges.

Guérard turned his back on the doctors and the specialists and decided to test-pilot his own way. He went at the problem like a chemical researcher in a kitchen laboratory, applying his usual logic, imagination, talent, and taste. He is enough of an artist to admit his trials occasionally result in error.

It is an established fact that on approximately 1000 calories a day, even "too too solid flesh" eventually will melt away. From his own case, Guérard had observed that prolonged deprivation and boring repetitiveness had a depressing effect upon the spirit. He set about to develop delectable dishes—strong on flavor, short on fat—the sum of which would fit within the desired calorie count. An occasional excess could be countered the next day.

His goal was a Regime Minceur (Slenderness Regime) with sensory excitement. The new repertoire is rapture to the palate and delight to the eye. Non-weight-watchers effusively praising an estouffade of milk-fed lamb with tiny onions and purée of green beans or a navarin of lobster have no idea they belong to the category of Non-Fattening Spectaculars.

To rise from a beautifully set table, lightly but satisfied, is a savvy way for civilized people to eat. The three-course meals are designed for total pleasure, including the after effect. Never before have I followed a regime supposedly good for me without having my mind riveted to the image of a chocolate cake. Guérard has not renounced the principles of French haute cuisine. Rather he has employed every trick and technique to adapt French haute cuisine to the dynamics of contemporary life. Instead of bemoaning the absence of bread, potatoes, and foie gras, one is captivated by Guérard's unexpected combinations, subtle counterpoint of flavors and stunning composition of elements on each plate.

Pots of green plants roll around terrace on old iron bedsteads, below. Christine Guérard may set a basket of pumpkins on a stair landing or a chestnut-filled copper fish poacher on a table.

...the ideal way to buy your presents from The Metropolitan Museum

Every three months—four times a year—the Museum will announce by mail remarkable new replicas—exact copies of Museum originals: sculpture, decorative objects, tableware, and ornaments.

The variety will be extraordinary: ancient jewelry in gold and silver; Oriental and European porcelain; early American glass in crystal and rare colors; bronze from Egypt, Greece, China, and the medieval world; silver, pewter, brass, and pottery from Colonial America.

These copies, often produced by the same techniques used for the originals, are made by artist-craftsmen working under the Museum's direct supervision. The care taken in production frequently limits the quantity, and the majority of replicas can be bought only by mail or at the Museum. (Above: Ship's Tumblers, pressed in the Ashburton pattern about 1845. Height 4¼". Boxed set of four, $45.00 plus $1.25 shipping.)

To receive all of the advance announcements to be issued during the next year, send the coupon below with one dollar to cover mailing.

On September 1, you will receive the first of these, the 116 page Christmas Catalogue. A brilliant array of new presents includes an ancient Egyptian necklace of blue lotus flowers; golden stags, panthers, lions, and griffins from the Scythian treasure hoard; needlework kits of a tiger from a Chinese ceremonial banner, and puppies and kittens from a New England rug; a rose and a star in stained glass; a book of Persian miniatures in full color and gold; a bronze Etruscan acrobat; art nouveau stationery; a new cookbook, To the King's Taste, and next year's engagement calendar, Secret Gardens. In addition, there is an unparalleled selection of Christmas cards.

Hostess thoughts

herb of your choice. Try tarragon with turkey, basil with beef, horseradish with any cold meat, and color them various, natural greens to help keep them apart.

There are other small indulgences to preserve for the winter. Uncooked brandied peaches are delicious. Peel the peaches and place them carefully in sterile jars, filling the jars with sugar. Strike smartly, add more sugar, cap and leave in a cool dark place for 24 hours. Uncap, force in one more peach and fill up with more sugar. Cap tightly. Wrap the jars in paper and store in a dark place for a month at 40° to 75°—no cooler or hotter.

Pickled vegetables provide variety to an hors d'oeuvre tray and can be kept on hand for emergencies. Wash 3 pounds button mushrooms in hot water; boil them in salted water to cover for 15 minutes, rinse, and cool. Spoon the mushrooms with a wooden spoon into pint jars and cover with a mixture of 1 cup oil, 1 cup vinegar, and a tablespoon of pickling spices. Be sure the jars are sterile and well-sealed. The vegetables may be used in one week. Keep them in the icebox and eat as soon as possible. Canned, water-packed artichoke hearts or cooked frozen ones may be pickled the same way.

For crunch use carrot strips, whole green beans, turnip slivers, celery sticks. Plunge them into boiling water and cook until just tender. Place in sterile jars, sprinkle each jar with a teaspoon of dill and celery seed and cover with hot, white vinegar. Leave a week. For unexpected taste and texture, place small, hard-cooked eggs in the above mixture and let pickle for two weeks. They're dandy as snacks with drinks.

Many worthwhile recipes are to be found in those fund-raising collections of local prized recipes, usually ring-bound and abounding with good and different cookery. I collect them, give them as house presents, and delight in using them. Some of my favorites are:

The Three Rivers Cook Book (Child Health Association of Sewickley, Inc.; P.O. Box 48, Sewickley, Pa. 15143. $4.50). A paean from Pittsburgh celebrating its great restaurants, its ethnic variety, and its native cooks. Attractive, too.

Fiesta—Favorite Recipes of South Texas (The Junior League of Corpus Christi; P.O. Box 837, Corpus Christi, Tex. 78403. $5.95). As you might guess, a good Texan-Mexican cookbook.

Entirely Entertaining (The Junior League of Montclair, 411 Bloomfield Ave., Montclair, N.J. 07042. $4). Long a pet of mine, this New Jersey book has imaginative menus, excellent recipes, and a sound approach to feeding a party.

The Attorney's Appetite (Women's Division of the Legal Aid Society of New York, 42 West Forty-fourth St., New York, N.Y. 10036. $6.50). Volume 2, as it were, is the second in this dandy assemblage of dishes offered by lawyer-cooks from all over the world. It's bound in such a way that it will stand up, too.

The Farmington Cook Book (The Junior League of Louisville, 3033 Bardstown Road, Louisville, Ky. 40205. $5.35). Interesting, very well thought out, and presented with style.

Small ideas with big results:

Place a small wineglass of Triple Sec alongside each dessert plate for dunking strawberries before dipping in sugar.

Give a breakfast guest an empty juice glass for getting the most out of a grapefruit gracefully.

Make a smooth dessert using Irish whiskey (one-fourth the total liquid), espresso coffee, and gelatin; top with whipped cream. ■

Light eating—Italian style

The freshest, simplest buffet lunch—each element a still life to eat just as it is. From top left, fresh red and yellow peppers to cut up and dunk in a simple oil-and-vinegar dressing; a basket of fresh peas to be unzipped and eaten as they are, nutty and sweet to the taste; glossy ripe cherries and peaches; a beautiful summer lettuce in a frame of leaves picked at random from the garden, each lettuce leaf to be pulled off and dipped in oil and vinegar at will. Splendid crudités: cucumber, carrot and fennel, tender cooked beets. White wine and champagne, wild geraniums tucked against the cold bottles, to sip as they are or dilute with a single ice cube. A nutty Parmesan cheese to eat with a crusty loaf. A perfect lunch set in a perfect setting—a granite table in a grape arbor in the hills of Northern Italy.

n France, they call it the "new wave cuisine," and n America it is a new emphasis on healthy, natural ood. It's simplifying cooking, dispensing with rich sauces, substituting instead lots of fresh, chopped vegetables to give flavor. It's whizzing up a fresh vegetable soup in the blender and thickening it with yoghurt, not cream. Here some great cooks share some new cooking ways. By Jane Ellis light, healthy, interesting, and quick

new American home cooking

Quick Green Soup

from José Wilson

Chunk zucchini and cucumber and cook in a good strong chicken stock. Add some green leaves —lovage, parsley, spinach, or chard. To thicken, not a smidge of butter or flour is needed, simply add an avocado to give a velvety texture to the soup when it is puréed in a blender. At the last minute stir in a little lemon juice and yoghurt.

Orange Sherbet

from Catherine di Montezemolo

Cut oranges in half and remove pulp. Add the pulp to bought orange sherbet and whirl in the blender with a little fresh mint. Return to freezer. When frozen, spoon into orange shells and top with a mint sprig.

Snow Pea Soup

from José Wilson

Flavor a good chicken stock with fresh ginger and coriander. Throw in a handful of snow peas which have been cut into julienne, and heat through until cooked but still crispy.

Apple Salad

from Edna Lewis

Slice a Granny Smith apple in wedges, top with a little mayonnaise perfumed with a speck of curry. Celery sticks can substitute for the apple.

Quick Carrot Purée

from Babs Simpson

Cook carrots quickly in a little water for about 15 minutes or until tender. Drain. Purée in a blender with a knob of butter, a little salt and pepper, and a generous handful of chopped chives.

Cottage Cheese Dressing for Crudités

from Christopher Idone

In a blender, put 1 pint low-fat cottage cheese, 2 tablespoons wine vinegar, kosher salt and freshly ground pepper to taste, and purée together with 1 tablespoon puréed basil. Remove from blender and add 1 tablespoon mint, sliced into thin ribbons, ¼ cup chopped scallions, 3 tablespoons chopped parsley or any fresh herbs. Serve with cherry tomatoes, cauliflowerets, radishes, or sliced raw zucchini.

Yoghurt Cheese

from José Wilson

Into a pint of yoghurt, stir ½ teaspoon salt (or more if you wish). Pour into a square of dampened cheesecloth, tie corners together, and suspend over a sink or bowl overnight. You can also put the yoghurt in a cheesecloth-lined colander to drain. Yoghurt cheese is delicious plain, mixed with freshly cracked black pepper or with fresh herbs. And it is a good low-calorie substitute in any recipe calling for cream cheese.

Zucchini Mélange

from Joie McGrail

Sauté 2 finely chopped onions in a little knob of butter and add 4 zucchini, that have been sliced thin on a grater. Season with salt and pepper. Cook, stirring with a wooden spoon, for 5 minutes. Add 6 chopped scallions, a handful of chopped chives, finely chopped parsley and basil; cook covered about 3 more minutes.

Lettuce, Watercress, Broccoli, or Mushroom Soup

from Nika Hazelton

Cook vegetables in chicken broth with a chopped up onion. Add a cut up potato to thicken it. Purée in blender and serve with a dash of sour or sweet cream.

Marinated Fresh Raw Salmon and Bass

from Christopher Idone

Check a 1-pound fillet of fresh bass and a 1-pound fillet of fresh salmon for bones. Tiny bones can be picked off with tweezers. Slice as thin as possible, as you would for smoked salmon. Combine ½ cup good olive oil with 2 tablespoons good cognac and ⅛ teaspoon ground cloves. Half an hour before serving dip fish in mixture. Do not refrigerate but arrange on plates using both fishes. Sprinkle with freshly cracked, green peppercorns. Serve with garlic-toasted French bread.

Frozen Grapes

from Melvina Kinard

Cut seedless green grapes into small clusters and freeze. Serve garnished with mint leaves.

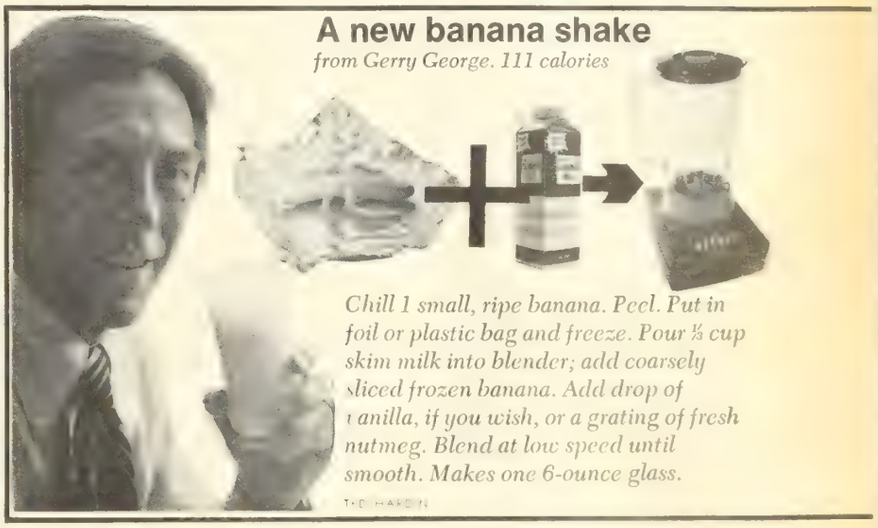
Steak Marinated in Vinaigrette Dressing

from Bettina McNulty

Marinate an inexpensive steak (chuck or shoulder) overnight in a vinaigrette dressing sharply flavored with anise. Drain and pan fry with just the liquid that sticks to the meat. As soon as it is cooked, put the meat on a platter and spoon some skinned grapefruit sections over it. They'll warm a little as you serve.

A new banana shake

from Gerry George. 111 calories



Chill 1 small, ripe banana. Peel. Put in foil or plastic bag and freeze. Pour ½ cup skim milk into blender; add coarsely sliced frozen banana. Add drop of vanilla, if you wish, or a grating of fresh nutmeg. Blend at low speed until smooth. Makes one 6-ounce glass.

Roast Eye Round of Beef

from Craig Claiborne

The easiest way to roast a 3½-to-8-pound eye round is to put it on a rack in a shallow roasting pan. Salt and pepper and roast in preheated 500° oven for 4 or 5 minutes per pound without opening door. Then allow to rest in turned off oven 1½ to 2 hours depending on size of roast.

Vegetable Sautéed Chicken

from Pierre Franey

Sauté a cut up chicken in a little butter in a skillet until golden brown. Add a little chopped mushroom, carrots, celery, onion or leeks, potatoes, and tomato together with a little diced Virginia ham. Cook stirring for about 45 minutes. Remove from skillet and deglaze juices with a little white wine.

Strawberries and Pistachios

from Maurice Moore-Betty

Wash 2 pints of strawberries under cold running water, drain, and hull. Mix them in a serving bowl with a little superfine sugar if the berries need it and ⅓ cup Cointreau. Toss gently. Sprinkle with ½ cup shelled pistachios before serving.

Grapefruit, Apple, and Blueberry Salad

from Maurice Moore-Betty

Peel grapefruit (½ per person) over a bowl to catch juice and cut into clean sections. Slice hard, crisp apples (½ per person) thin and drop into grapefruit juice. Add sugar if you wish and sprinkle with kirsch. In a glass bowl, combine grapefruit and apple sections with a few blueberries for each serving. Decorate with mint or lemon balm.

If you were a guest at the famous French spa, Eugenie-les-Bains, you would enjoy these delicious menus and recipes as part of your special health regime. LUNCH

Onion Tart
Grilled Escalopes of Veal with Tomatoes Provençale
Assortment of Sherbets with Fruits

ONION TART

INGREDIENTS

- 1 cup plus 2 tablespoons water
- ¾ cup carrots, very finely diced (same size as peas)
- 5⅔ cups onions, sliced very fine
- 1 cup mushrooms, very finely diced (same size as peas)
- 4 tablespoons green peas, cooked
- salt and pepper
- 1 green cabbage, leaves separated and stems cut away
- 7 tablespoons skimmed milk powder
- 3 eggs, beaten
- 1 tablespoon parsley, chopped
- 1 tablespoon chervil, chopped
- ½ teaspoon tarragon, chopped

METHOD

Preheat oven to 200°. In a Teflon pan add 2 tablespoons water, carrots, and onions and sauté for 10-15 minutes, add mushrooms and peas at the last few minutes. Salt and pepper to taste and set aside.

Boil cabbage in salted water 8-10 minutes and drain. Line six 4-inch individual tart pans with leaves and reserve leftover ones. Fill pans with vegetable mixture and set aside.

A few principles of Michel Guerard

Low-calorie food must taste so good and look so good that psychologically you never feel deprived but mentally prefer it. In time, you well may.

You can have haute cuisine with a low calorie count—approximately 1000 calories a day.

★

A feast for the eye is an important element of nourishment. Every Guérard dish is a stunning composition. Automatically you slow down to contemplate and admire it. Eating slowly is one key toward oral satisfaction.

★

The judicious use of a blender gives a creamy texture without resorting to cream.

You need sharp knives, a blender, and a Teflon pan.

Vegetables are sliced and diced so fine, they can be cooked in a few turns around a Teflon pan without the addition of any fats.

★

Sauces are one of the delights of French cuisine and are featured in Guérard's Eat Yourself Slim regime. As thickening agents, he uses puréed vegetables or low-calorie white cheese. (In France, Taillefine. In America, farmer cheese, diet cream cheese, ricotta, yoghurt cheese.)

★

In this lighter way of eating, there are no potatoes, rice, noodles, or bread.

Every lunch and dinner is a three-course meal, ending with a dessert made with an artificial sweetener.

★

The Tisane d'Eugénie—an infusion of five health-giving herbs and plants—is served several times a day. At breakfast. Before lunch. Before dinner. The tisane is a natural diuretic. It is presented with the charm of a Planter's Punch, in tall glasses garnished with a slice of apple, a slice of orange, a grape, a chunk of pineapple, a sprig of fresh mint.

★

Meats can be grilled without fat or oil by giving them a fast dip in water. The evaporating moisture will keep them from sticking to the pan.

To banish hunger pangs for familiar but fattening foods, Guérard offers a variety of pleasurable taste surprises and the excitement of totally new culinary inventions.

Seasoning is vital. Salt, pepper, and generous doses of fresh herbs. Much of the sensory excitement comes from the seasoning.

Mix milk powder with 1 cup water and add eggs, parsley, chervil, and tarragon and mix well. Pour mixture over vegetables and cover each with a cabbage leaf.

Bake for about 45 minutes. Unmold and serve hot. Serves 6. 123 calories per serving.

GRILLED ESCALOPES OF VEAL WITH TOMATOES PROVENÇALE

INGREDIENTS

- 6 tomatoes, cut in half crosswise
- salt and papper
- 1 teaspoon garlic, chopped
- 2 tablespoons parsley, chopped
- 6 thin escalopes of veal
- water flavored with 1 garlic clove, crushed

METHOD

Preheat oven to 350°. Sprinkle each tomato half with salt, pepper, garlic, and parsley and bake for 10 minutes.

Season veal with salt and pepper and dip in garlic water. Broil 1 minute on each side. Serves 6. 195 calories per serving.

RASPBERRY SHERBET

INGREDIENTS

- 2 cups raspberry pulp, sieved
- juice of 2 lemons
- 1 cup water
- *artificial sweetener to taste

METHOD

Combine raspberries, lemon juice, and water. Sweeten to taste, stirring until sweetener is dissolved. Freeze in an ice-cream maker. Serves 6. 31 calories per serving.

Michel Guérard worked out his desserts with a French artificial sweetener called ODA (Laboratoires L. Lafon). In testing the recipes with American artificial sweeteners, we liked a slightly tart Raspberry Sherbet sweetened with 4 packages of Sweet 'n Low (3½ calories per package). Since some may prefer it sweeter, and since artificial sweeteners differ in strength, we have left quantities to taste and omitted the sweetener from the calorie count.*

Introducing Bloody Mary's Big Brother.

Bloody Thomas.

Available at supermarkets and many liquor stores.

Zesty. Delicious. Better than an ordinary Bloody Mary. Because it's made with something different. Snap-E-Tom. The Mexican tomato cocktail with green chiles and other good things.

Add vodka and ice, of course. Stir. And after one spicy, refreshing sip we're sure the next time you thirst for a Bloody Mary, you'll ask for (or make yourself) a Bloody Thomas.

Bloody Thomas. The best Bloody Mary you'll ever taste.

MELON SHERBET

INGREDIENTS

½ cup skimmed milk
2 cups cantaloupe melon pulp, about 2 melons artificial sweetener to taste

METHOD

Purée pulp in a blender and strain. Mix well with milk, sweeten to taste, and freeze in an ice-cream maker. Serves 6. 23 calories per serving.

LEMON SHERBET

INGREDIENTS

3 lemons, grated and squeezed
1 cup water
artificial sweetener to taste
1 egg white, beaten

METHOD

Add water to lemon juice and grated peel. Sweeten to taste, stirring until sweetener is dissolved. Let mixture rest for 5 hours. About an hour before serving, fold lemon mixture into beaten egg white and place in ice-cream freezer. Serves 6. 8 calories per serving.

Presentation of sherbet: With soupspoons form ovals of sherbet and place two in the center of a flat plate. (Guérard would offer 2 flavors.) Surround sherbet with fruits arranged according to pleasing color combination: strawberries, raspberries, melon slices, mango slices, pear slices, cherries, apple slices . . . whatever is at hand. Serves 6.

DINNER

Artichoke à la Poule
Fish under Prairie Herbs with Mousse of Watercress
Lemon Pots de Crème

ARTICHOKES À LA POULE

INGREDIENTS

½ pound mushrooms, diced
salt and pepper
6 artichoke bottoms
6 poached eggs

METHOD

Sauté mushrooms in a Teflon pan. Purée them in a blender and season to taste with salt and pepper.

Poach artichoke bottoms in salted water for about 10 minutes. Drain. Spread each artichoke bottom with a layer of mushroom purée; nestle a neatly trimmed poached egg on top, and mask with a layer of mushroom purée. Serve at room temperature. Serves 6. 95 calories per serving.

TROUT OR SEA BASS UNDER PRAIRIE HERBS WITH PURÉE OF WATERCRESS

INGREDIENTS

3 branches wild mint
10 pieces clover, plus some for garnish
3 branches of nettles
2 fistfuls of meadow grass
2 fistfuls of hay
6 trout, about 6 ounces each, or 1 sea bass, about 2½ pounds, cleaned, but do not remove bone or scale
salt and pepper
about 1 cup water

METHOD

In a deep oval iron casserole make a bed of half the herbs and grasses, lay the trout or sea bass on top, salt and pepper to taste, and cover with a blanket of remaining herbs and grasses, add water, cover. If using trout, steam 5 minutes over very high heat; if sea bass is used, steam 15-20 minutes. Trout are served whole; sea bass is skinned and filleted. Sprinkle a few clover leaves on each fish. Reserve fish stock. 135 calories per serving.

SAUCE FOR TROUT OR SEA BASS

INGREDIENTS

1 large carrot, julienned
½ cup mushrooms, julienned, plus 5 cut into quarters about 4 tablespoons leeks, julienned
1 tablespoon celery, julienned
salt and pepper
2 cups reserved fish stock
3⅓ tablespoons skim milk
1 tablespoon no-fat white cheese

METHOD

In a covered casserole cook, without liquid, carrots, ½ cup mushrooms, leeks, and celery, seasoned to taste with salt and pepper, for about 8 minutes. Add fish stock and cook an additional 5 minutes. Drain and reserve stock.

In a saucepan cook quartered mushrooms in milk for about 7-8 minutes. Purée in blender with cheese and stock from vegetables.

Remove mixture from blender, add drained vegetables, mix well. Top trout or sea bass wth sauce. Serves 6. 15 calories per serving.

PUREE OF WATERCRESS

INGREDIENTS

4 bunches watercress
salted water

METHOD

Cook watercress in salted water. Drain. Purée in blender. Serve with fish. 13 calories per serving.

LEMON POTS DE CRÈME

INGREDIENTS

7 tablespoons skimmed milk powder
2 cups hot water
zest of 3 lemons
artificial sweetener to taste
2 eggs, beaten
mint

METHOD

Preheat oven to 150°. Mix milk with water and delicately stir in the zest and sweetener, beating constantly. Strain. Add eggs and pour into 6 individual molds. Set into a pan of water and bake for about 1 hour. Chill. Serve with sprigs of mint. Serves 6. 40 calories per serving.

LUNCH

Eggplant Caviar
Cider Poached Chicken with Apricots
Orange à l'Orange

EGGPLANT CAVIAR

INGREDIENTS

3 eggplants, about ½ pound each oil
½ cup mushrooms, diced very small
1 shallot, minced
1 small egg yolk
2 tablespoons fat-free white cheese
¼ cup tomato, peeled, cut into chunks, and diced
2 tablespoons red pimiento (tinned), diced
1 garlic clove, minced or pressed
2 tablespoons chervil juice of ½ lemon
salt and pepper

METHOD

Preheat oven to 200°. Wash eggplants but do not dry. Remove caps and stems and slice stems in half lengthwise; blanch and set aside. Place eggplant on a rack, cover with a thin film of oil and cook for 20 minutes, turning occasionally. Slice eggplants lengthwise, remove flesh, leaving skin intact, and chop fine.

Sauté mushrooms and shallot in a Teflon pan and set aside.

In a mixing bowl, whisk together egg yolk and cheese and add eggplant and continue to beat until mixture is supple. Add tomato, pimiento, garlic, mushrooms, chervil, lemon juice, salt and pepper to taste. Pile mixture into eggplant shells, place on a plate, refill with blanched eggplant stems. Chill. Serves 6. 71 calories per serving.

CIDER POACHED CHICKEN WITH APRICOTS

INGREDIENTS (VEGETABLE FARCE)

⅓ cup carrots, diced very fine
⅓ cup turnips, diced very fine
6 ounces veal, all fat removed and diced small 3½ tablespoons bread crumbs soaked in 6⅔ tablespoons milk
2 tablespoons tomato, peeled, seeded, and chopped
2 eggs plus 2 egg whites handful of chopped parsley, chervil, and tarragon

METHOD (VEGETABLE FARCE)

In a bowl, mix all ingredients together. Fold a kitchen towel in half horizontally and along the folded edge spoon a line of the farce and roll the towel, shaping the farce into a sausage form. Tie the two ends tightly with string.

INGREDIENTS (POACHING CHICKEN)

1 2½-pound chicken
8 cups dry apple cider
2¼ cups young carrots, cut into olive shape
2¼ cups young turnips, cut into olive shape
2 cups zucchini, cut into olive shape
3 cups leeks, cut crosswise small cabbage, stem cut off and leaves removed 6 apricots

METHOD (POACHING CHICKEN)

In a large covered casserole poach the chicken in cider with the carrots, turnips, zucchini, leeks, cabbage, and roll of vegetable farce in towel for 30 minutes. During the last 10 minutes of cooking, add the apricots.

INGREDIENTS (APPLESAUCE)

1 cup cider liquid
1 cooking apple, peeled, cored, and quartered grated peel of 1 lemon

METHOD (APPLESAUCE)

At the same time you are poaching the chicken add cider, apple, and lemon peel to a saucepan and cook for 6-8 minutes. Sieve the ap-

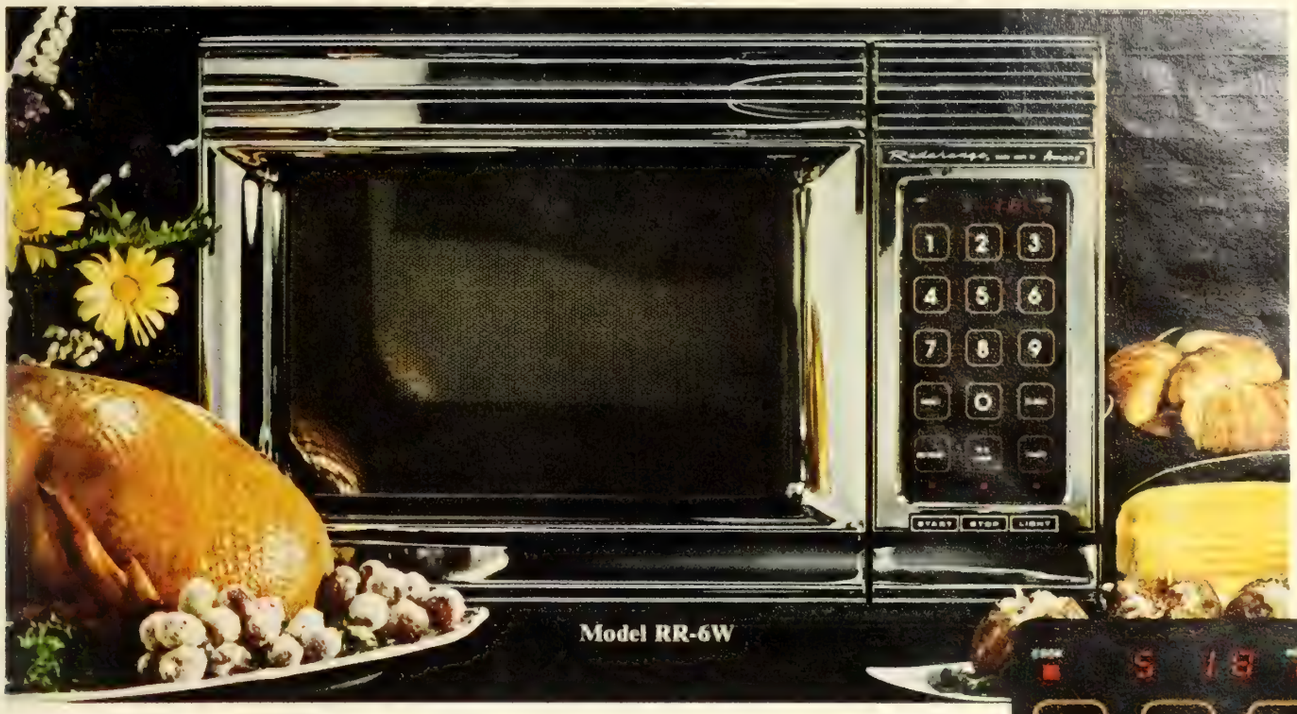
Amana makes the greatest cooking discovery since fire even greater.

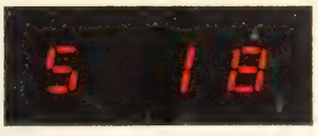


New Amana Touchmatic Radarange® MICROWAVE OVEN revolutionizes microwave cooking.

Makes microwave cooking simple as 1-2-3!

The Amana Touchmatic Radarange Microwave Oven makes it possible to get food from the freezer to the table—sizzling hot—with one setting at the beginning. It's as easy as 1-2-3! Because you can program defrost and slo-cook or defrost and cook—in combination. Put in a frozen roast. Touch the numbers for the defrosting time and cooking time—and the solid state "computer" takes over. It will defrost the roast—automatically wait for the temperature to even—and then cook the roast. It's all automatic. It even shuts itself off and tells you dinner's ready with a "beep."

There's a digital clock on the control panel that displays the time in big, bright numbers. When you're cooking, this is a split second timer that displays the remaining cooking time. Then when cooking's done—it remembers, and displays the time of day automatically. You can use the timer without cooking to time other things . . . like long distance phone calls.



At last, with the Amana Touchmatic Radarange Microwave Oven, you can enjoy gourmet cooking, simmering and high speed cooking versatility . . . combined with an ease of operation never before possible with a microwave oven.

The Amana Touchmatic Radarange Oven cooks fast, clean and cool.
With 675 watts of cooking power, the Touchmatic Radarange Oven cooks almost everything in about one-fourth the usual time—on paper, glass, china—right on the serving platter. The food gets hot but the oven stays cool. So cleanup is a snap.

The Amana Touchmatic saves energy too!
It uses 50% to 75% less electricity than a conventional electric range. And with the cost of energy going up and up—using an Amana Touchmatic Radarange Oven will help keep your electric bill down.

For a demonstration see your Amana Retailer. Or write Ann McGregor, Dept. 529, Amana, Iowa 52203.

ple or purée it in a blender, without the liquid; strain liquid and add about ¾ cup of purée.

INGREDIENTS (ASSEMBLING DISH)

applesauce
chicken cut into 6 serving pieces, skinned vegetables from poaching liquid vegetable farce cut into thick slices apricots, peeled, halved, stoned

METHOD (ASSEMBLING DISH)

Spread each plate with a layer of applesauce, center a piece of chicken, and surround it with the vegetables from the poaching liquid, disposing them according to color. Place a slice of vegetable farce on each piece of chicken. Lay an apricot half on each side of the vegetable farce. Serves 6. 416 calories per serving.

ORANGE À L'ORANGE

INGREDIENTS

6 small oranges, peeled and peel sliced into a fine julienne
water
artificial sweetener to taste
1 cup strawberries, puréed
1 kiwi or 1 kumquat, sliced lengthwise into 6 thin slices

METHOD

Place peel in a saucepan, cover with water, and add sweetener. Cook orange peel gently until it boils and continue 2 minutes.

Remove the white inner skin from the peeled oranges and carefully separate the sections.

On individual plates, spread a layer of strawberry purée, top with a layer of orange sections placed in a circle, like pinwheel petals of a flower, and at the heart place a slice of kiwi or kumquat. Sprinkle with orange peel. Serves 6. 69 calories per serving.

DINNER

Asparagus Soufflé
Grilled Fillet of Beef
Chocolate Granité

ASPARAGUS SOUFFLÉ

INGREDIENTS

1 pound asparagus plus 18 stalks, woody ends removed and sides peeled
salt and pepper
pinch of mace or nutmeg
6 egg whites, beaten until firm
2 egg yolks

METHOD

Poach asparagus in salted water and drain well. Reserve 18 stalks and purée the rest in the blender. Season purée with salt, pepper, and a pinch of mace or nutmeg. Mix egg whites with purée and add yolks. Pour soufflé into six 4-inch individual molds and bake in 220° oven for 7-8 minutes. Cut points from reserved asparagus stalks and slice lengthwise. Before serving, decorate each soufflé with 3 asparagus points, halved. Serves 6. 60 calories per serving.

GRILLED FILLET OF BEEF

INGREDIENTS

water
6 juniper berries, crushed
1 branch thyme
¼ bay leaf, crumbled
6 fillet or beef steaks (about ¼ pound per person)
salt and pepper to taste
3½ tablespoons parsley, chopped
3½ tablespoons chervil, chopped
¾ teaspoon garlic, minced
2 shallots, minced
juice of 1 lemon
3 leeks, cut crosswise into 4 sections
3 cups chicken consommé

METHOD

Mix water, berries, thyme, bay leaf and dip steaks into mixture until just barely covered; this will keep them from sticking to grill. Grill on each side 2½ minutes. Salt and pepper steaks to taste.

In a bowl, mix parsley, chervil, garlic, shallots, and lemon juice and spoon over top of steaks.

Poach leeks in 2 cups of consommé. Purée leeks in a blender, smooth consistency with about 1 cup consommé. Serve with steaks. Serves 6. 224 calories per serving.

INGREDIENTS

2 cups water
1 vanilla bean
7 tablespoons skimmed milk powder
5 tablespoons cocoa powder
artificial sweetener to taste
1 teaspoon heavy cream
1 cup frozen coffee crystals

METHOD

In a saucepan, combine water and vanilla bean and bring to the boil. Remove from heat, remove bean, and add milk, cocoa, and sweetener and stir well. Let mixture cool.

Add cream and mix well. Just before serving add mixture to an ice-cream machine and turn for 15 to 20 minutes; or place in a refrigerator tray and freeze for 1 hour. As liquid solidifies, turn with a fork a few times. At last moment stir in frozen coffee crystals. Serves 6. 32 calories per serving.

COFFEE CRYSTALS

INGREDIENTS

1 cup hot water
1 tablespoon decaffeinated coffee

METHOD

Mix ingredients; place in freezer, stirring with a fork a few times to form granulated crystals.

LUNCH

Tomato Tart
Blanquette of Veal with Purée of Cauliflower
Coffee Pots de Crème

TOMATO TART

INGREDIENTS

6⅔ cups tomatoes, peeled, seeded, and chopped, plus 1 tablespoon for garnish
1 shallot, minced
3 cloves garlic, minced
1 branch thyme
¼ bay leaf
salt and pepper
4¼ pounds spinach, cooked and drained

METHOD

Preheat oven to 200°. In a saucepan, place tomatoes, shallot, garlic, thyme, bay leaf, salt, pepper; cook gently until liquid evaporates.

Line six 4-inch molds with spinach leaves, fill with tomato mixture, and cover with spinach leaves. Bake in oven for 15-20 minutes. Unmold and decorate with a bit of tomato. Serves 6. 128 calories per serving.

BLANQUETTE OF VEAL WITH PURÉE OF CAULIFLOWER

INGREDIENTS

8 cups chicken consommé or bouillon
5 carrots, cut in large pieces
2 onions, cut in large pieces
1 leek, cut in large pieces
8 mushrooms, cut in large pieces
1¼ pounds veal from the leg, fat removed, and cut into chunks
salt and pepper
chopped parsley, peeled tomato 1 cauliflower cut into 4-5 pieces salted water

METHOD

In a deep saucepan, add consommé or bouillon and carrots, onions, leeks, and mushrooms. Wrap a kitchen towel around a large strainer that just fits the pan, and place the veal in the strainer. Cover and steam the meat over the simmering liquid for about 45 minutes. The veal will be faintly rose-colored at interior. Remove vegetables and whirl in the blender. Season with salt and pepper.

California's reputation as one of the world's best wine-growing areas continues to grow, as her thousands of acres of top varietal grapes, planted in perfect climatic conditions, yield better and better wine. There seems to be no end to the ferment of experiment, improvement, and growth. By José Wilson

Good news from the California wine world–

Exciting new wine tastes from Monterey county

■ Things are happening so fast in California's wine country that the best researched books on the subject are out of date before they are published.

Much of what we are seeing and hearing about can be traced to the over-optimistic wine rush of four or five years ago. Then, with the price of premium grapes and wines escalating in a heady spiral, it seemed that everyone, lured by the prospect of a solid-gold investment, was planting grapes and starting wineries, unaware that the first harvest would coincide with a world-wide recession and a precipitous plunge in the price of the leading European wines.

The golden future may look less bright to some grape growers, but we wine drinkers can selfishly rejoice, for the present glut of premium varietal grapes is going to raise the quality at every price level, notably in the $2 to $5 range most of us can afford. Even such huge Central Valley producers as Gallo, Guild, as well as Italian Swiss Colony, long known for inexpensive generic wines, have brought out a line of varietals, while those wineries long established in the premium wine field, such as Almadén, Paul Masson, and The Christian Brothers, are constantly improving theirs. Louis Benoist and Frank Schoonmaker, who, back in the 1940s at Almadén, pioneered the labeling of California wines by their grape varietal names, rather than giving them customary, confusing European geographical designations, can be credited with initiating the move that determined the future direction of the wine industry.

Undoubtedly the biggest story of 1975 is the emergence of Monterey County as a major wine region equal to, though different from, Napa and Sonoma, and sharing with them the most desirable of grape-growing climates, classified in the 1930s by Professors Amerine and Winkler of the University of California as Regions I and II. Region I, with much the same climatic conditions as northern Burgundy, the Champagne district, or Germany's Rhine and Moselle, is ideal for early-ripening grapes such as Pinot Noir, Char-

Vineyards have mushroomed in Monterey County, where climate and soil provide perfect growing conditions for fine California varietal wines.

Going metric– a new international standard for bottle sizes

■ A recent breakthrough in the wine industry that should be of benefit to us all is the establishment, at long last, of an international standard of metric sizing for bottles. Currently there are forty-three different bottle sizes on the market, sixteen used by American producers and twenty-seven by the countries that send wine here. Although at a casual glance one wine bottle looks much like another, differences in shape and size can make a difference of 8 ounces in the contents, from a generous 30 ounces to a stingy 22 (the standard American bottle, or fifth, holds 25.6 ounces). As of January this year and continuing until 1979, the old sizes will be gradually phased out and replaced by a range of seven standardized metric sizes that have been established by international agreement. The chart at the right demonstrates how the miniature, split, tenth, fifth, quart, magnum, and jeroboam will be converted to milliliters and liters.

While all of these bottles may appear to hold the same amount of wine, there is actually a difference of 8 ounces—1½ servings of wine, if you half fill a 10-ounce wineglass.

The Christian Brothers, which sells its wines overseas, has already begun bottling three of its white wines in the metric 375 milliliters (formerly the tenth, or half bottle) and have very savvily proposed that the old terminology should be changed to miniature, small, medium, regular, large, magnum and extra-large, which is far easier to remember than fractions of liters.

It may be confusing at first, but there should be no real problem. Most of us are accustomed to ordering carafe wine by the liter (a fraction over a quart) in restaurants here and in Europe. Furthermore, since each metric-size bottle will also be marked with the equivalent fluid-ounce measure, we will be able to compare the unit pricing, just as we do with food in supermarkets. Eventually we are going to have to switch to the metric system in cooking, like the rest of the world, so it might be a good idea to start adjusting right now. □

Present terminology	Present U.S. ounces	Suggested metric terminology	New metric bottle size	New metric fluid ounce	Per bottle differences or fill in ounces. Present U.S. measure vs. metric standards
Miniature	2.0	Miniature	100 Ml.	3.38	+1.38
Split	6.4	Small	187 Ml.	6.34	−0.06
Tenth	12.8	Medium	375 Ml.	12.68	−0.12
Fifth	25.6	Regular	750 Ml.	25.36	−0.24
Quart	32.0	Large	1.0 L.	33.81	+1.81
Magnum	51.2	Magnum	1.5 L.	50.72	−0.48
Jeroboam	102.4	Extra large	3.0 L.	101.44	−0.96

With the advent of the new international metric sizing, wine bottles will be standardized. A regular wine bottle, or fifth, will be 750 milliliters or 25.36 ounces.

donnay, and Riesling. Region II, slightly warmer, is, like Bordeaux, best for the Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot, and Sauvignon Blanc, and the Chenin Blanc of the Loire. Monterey's southernmost vineyards are in the Region III climate that nurtures, among others, red grapes such as Gamay, Zinfandel, and Barbera.

Plantings in Monterey have been steadily increasing since the 1960s, when Mirassou, Wente, Paul Masson, and Chalone started vineyards there, but it is only within the last three or four years that the area has really come into its own, with the grape acreage now at a staggering 44,000, more than the combined total of the Napa and Sonoma Valleys' 43,000 acres. At present only a small number of acres, perhaps 7,000, are being harvested, but each year will see more of the fledgling vines reach four-year maturity and by 1980 the area should be in full-scale production.

Take route 101 from King City to Greenfield to Chualar, through the rich, fertile agricultural bottom land of the Salinas Valley, once known as the world's Salad Bowl because of its vast fields of lettuce and celery, and you are in a different world. Here is none of the meticulous, manicured elegance of Napa, or the semipastoral ambiance of Sonoma, with its old stone wineries and Spanish-mission towns. Monterey is simpler, rougher, more Western. The radio chatters Mexican news and songs, the small towns where the grape-pickers live have a dusty somnolence, horses and cattle graze in meadows, and you can go for miles on the bumpy back roads without seeing anyone or anything but the tender green of the young vines that blanket the sand-and-gravel slopes of the foothills, in some places an unbroken 8-mile wave of straight rows. It is impossible not to be impressed with and slightly awed by this wine region of the future.

The Monterey appellation of origin is one to look out for. Anyone who has tasted Mirassou's Monterey Harvest or Limited Bottling wines, the remarkable Johannisberg Riesling Spâtlese from Wente's Arroyo Seco vineyards or the superb Pinot Noir, Pinot Blanc, Chenin Blanc, and Chardonnay made in the Burgundian style by Dick Graff at the tiny Chalone Vineyard, 2,000 feet above the Valley floor in the Gavilan Mountains, knows that Monterey is capable of producing wines that are like no others.

The Salinas Valley has everything going for it that fine wine could need. The climate provides a long, cool growing season that preserves the fragile range of organic acids in the grapes and intensifies their varietal character. The morning mists and strong afternoon winds that stream down from Monterey Bay are natural air-conditioning, tempering the midsummer heat (in the cooler regions of Monterey, the temperature does not even reach 100), and in September the mists disappear just when the grapes are ripening and need that extra boost of sunshine. Decomposed granite forms a light, gravelly soil perfect for growing the finest grapes and the underground flow of the Salinas River can be tapped for plentiful irrigation. Finally, Monterey is completely free from phylloxera, the scourge that wiped out so many of the European and Californian vineyards and necessitated the grafting of vinifera vines onto a sturdier American rootstock. Monterey vines can grow on their own roots, although no one yet knows if this is an advantage, apart from being more economical.

It would be difficult to isolate the factor responsible for the excitingly intense varietal characteristics that are so evident in the wines of Monterey. Most likely it is a combination of soil and climate. The young wines explode with fruit. They are almost overpowering in the assertiveness of the bouquet and flavor, an assertiveness that some winemakers feel may need to be toned down. That is rare in California, where the problem is usually how to step up the varietal taste.

From the early plantings of the sixties, vineyards have proliferated. Many of the big names are here. Almadén has 2,000 acres near King City, and will be marketing a Monterey appellation 1974 Zinfandel and Chenin Blanc this year, Paul Masson's plantings are scattered from below King City to north of Greenfield. New York State's Gold Seal Vineyard has established a beachhead (as International Vineyards) near Greenfield and Chualar.

Most extensive are the 10,000 acres of The Monterey Vineyard, stretching beyond Gonzales at the northern end of the valley. The wines from its first, 1974 harvest are now being distributed throughout the states and, more than any others I have tasted, they exemplify the style of Monterey—fresh, clean, very fruity, with an unmistakable varietal nose and taste.

"The style of Monterey—fresh, clean, very fruity, with an unmistakable varietal nose and taste"

Gamay Beaujolais, a deliciously zesty wine that should be drunk young and slightly chilled, like a Beaujolais Nouveau, the 1974 reds are being aged in oak. The whites are ready for drinking now. My favorite (and, at under $3, the least expensive) is the Del Mar Ranch White, a blend of Pinot Blanc, Chenin Blanc, and 10 percent Sylvaner with a light, bone-dry fruitiness that makes it a good apéritif, a refreshing summer wine, and a pleasant accompaniment to many foods, from pâté and smoked salmon to seafood and sweetbreads. The other whites are priced from just over $3 for the Chenin Blanc to around $4.60 for the early bottling Chardonnay, without wood aging. (A later bottling, to go on sale this fall, will have been aged for a few months in oak casks.) The Grüner Sylvaner and the Johannisberg Riesling are unusual and interesting examples. The Grüner Sylvaner, made in a light, soft, fresh style reminiscent of a German Palatinate wine, is different from most California Sylvaners, which tend to be undistinguished and therefore have never been very popular. The Johannisberg Riesling is gorgeous, delicate, and complex, with the haunting touch of sweetness imported by Botrytis cinerea, the grape-shriveling, sugar-concentrating fungus that gives the famous dessert wines of Sauternes and Germany their luscious richness. Botrytis, which California winemakers have for years been trying to induce on Sauvignon Blanc and Semillon, occurs spontaneously in Monterey. Dr. Richard Peterson, who followed the great André Tchelistcheff as winemaker at Beaulieu and is now winemaker and winery president of The Monterey Vineyard, hopes to be able to make a glorious dessert wine in the Sauternes style from the botrytised Sauvignon Blanc and Semillon he is now aging in wood.

While the 1974 wines of The Monterey Vineyard are in rather short supply, only 40,000 cases, as more of the acreage starts producing we can look for a steady flow of its well-made, reasonably priced wines to join company with the familiar big three of the medium-priced premium-wine echelon—Almadén, The Christian Brothers, and Paul Masson. According to Gerald Asher, president of the marketing company, only the most outstanding wines will be sold under The Monterey Vineyard label. The rest will be sold in bulk, either to other wineries or for private-label bottling. Already there has been a flurry of interest on the part of some Central Valley producers, who can improve their own varietals by blending them with those of Monterey.

While it is the wines from the large producers that most Americans are going to be drinking in the coming years, the small wineries with limited production continue to play a very important part in raising the overall sights and standards by showing what can be done given the right soil and climate, and painstaking vinification. Chalone, which makes what I and many others consider to be California's finest Pinot Noir, is a case in point. Despite the discouraging economics of the times, little wineries continue to appear, adding an interesting extra strain of color to what California has to offer. Three new ones in Napa that have put out their first estate-bottled wines this year are Stag's Leap Wine Cellars, Carneros Creek, and Clos du Val, which enjoys the distinction of having for winemaker Bernard Portet, son of the régisseur, or manager, of Château Lafite Rothschild. M. Portet, who came to California in 1968 and fell in love with it, says he is trying to make his Cabernet Sauvignon as close as possible to the wines of Pauillac in the Médoc. He was unfortunate in having 1972, a rainy year and one of California's lightest, as his first vintage, but the 1974 promises to be a bigger, more tannic wine, which may not reach drinking age until 1981.

Although Cabernet Sauvignon is probably California's most famous and praised wine and more Cabernet grapes were planted in 1974 than any other variety, I continue to find the metamorphosis of the white wines of greater interest. Ten years ago they all tended to taste alike, but now, mainly due to slow, low-temperature fermentation that retains the fruit and brings out the varietal character, the differences are marked. Pinot Blanc and Chardonnay, the classic white grapes of Burgundy, reveal their true and separate natures. Chenin Blanc, so often blandly nondescript and semisweet, now flaunts an almost flagrant fragrance and fruit. Sauvignon Blanc, called by some wineries Fumé Blanc or Blanc Fumé, the name it goes under in the Loire, displays a distinct earthiness or goût de terroir. Even French Colombard, formerly regarded as a rather acid and neutral blending wine, has proved delightfully fresh, clean, and fruity in versions made by a few wineries such as Parducci, Chateau Souverain, Chalone (under their second label, Gavilan Vineyards, from Napa grapes), and Almadén.

Yet another wine region, south of Monterey, is beginning to be talked about. Around coastal San Luis Obispo there are vineyards of varying sizes, some six or seven years old. The growing conditions resemble those of Napa and the wines are heavier and chewier than those of Monterey. So far most of the grapes have been sold to Napa wineries, but it may not be long before we will all be drinking wines made in San Luis Obispo County.

Did you ever wonder what happens to the prunings from California's millions of vines? It seems wineries have to pay someone to haul them away. When I visited The Monterey Vineyard with Richard Olney, author of the award-winning Simple French Food, he suggested that the cuttings be packaged as fuel for outdoor cooking, the way they are used in Provence to impart aroma and flavor to meats. Someone then remembered that a restaurant in San Francisco serves a "vintner's hamburger," grilled in the dining room over a big bundle of vine cuttings. Chuck Williams, of San Francisco's Williams-Sonoma kitchen shop, who had been considering importing vine prunings from France, is enthusiastic about this recycling of California's own byproduct, so if he and the winery can get it all together, we may soon be able to drink and eat à la Monterey. ■

Swing-a-way is not only the "BEST" can opener you can buy, but one you can afford as well.

Back to basics.
In today's economy, people are looking more and more for products that do the job—really perform. They demand quality and value. Our answer is the Swing-A-Way Portable.

COFFEE POTS DE CRÈME

INGREDIENTS

- 7 tablespoons skimmed milk powder
- 2 cups hot water
- 2 rounded teaspoons decafeinated coffee powder
- artificial sweetener to taste
- 2 eggs, beaten
- frozen coffee crystals (recipe on page 130)

METHOD

Mix milk powder with water and delicately stir in the coffee and sweetener, beating constantly. Strain. Add eggs and pour into six individual custard cups. Set into a pan of water, bake in a 150° oven about 1 hour. Chill. Serve with a few sprinkles of coffee crystals. Serves 6. 40 calories per serving.

Carrot Kugelhupf with Chervil and Purée of Artichoke

Brochettes of Scallops with Sauce Sabayon

Melon with Strawberries

CARROT KUGELHUPF WITH CHERVIL AND PURÉE OF ARTICHOKE

INGREDIENTS

- 2¼ cups carrots, sliced fine
- 4 tablespoons water
- 2 tablespoons butter
- ½ cup chicken consommé or 1 teaspoon powdered chicken consommé
- salt and pepper
- 10 tablespoons diced mushrooms
- 1 shallot, minced
- 2 eggs
- 2¼ tablespoons Gruyère, grated
- 1 rounded tablespoon chervil or parsley
- clarified butter

METHOD

In a large pot, cook carrots, water, butter, consommé cube or powder, salt and pepper to taste. Pass through the largest disk of a vegetable mill.

Sauté mushrooms in a Teflon pan with the shallots; a few turns in pan will suffice. Mix mushrooms into the carrot purée.

In a bowl, mix eggs, Gruyère, chervil or parsley, and combine with carrot purée.

Line the interior of a medium-sized, glazed terra-cotta mold (for kugelhupf) with a thin film of butter. Pour in the carrot mixture and set the mold in a pan of water. Cook in a 200°-220° oven for about 45 minutes. Serves 6. 99 calories per serving.

PURÉE OF ARTICHOKE

INGREDIENTS

- 3 artichoke bottoms, cut in quarters
- 3 asparagus tips
- salted water

METHOD

Poach artichoke bottoms and asparagus for about 10 minutes. Drain. Purée in a blender. Serves 6. 4 calories per serving.

Note: Guérard presents the unmolded carrot kugelhupf on a chopping board strewn with green resinous leaves of a thuya tree, resembling a form of ferns.

- 1 cup water
- 1 cup carrots, cut into eighths
- ½ cup leeks, cut into eighths
- 6 small onions, sliced
- branch of thyme
- ½ bay leaf
- salt and pepper
- 2 tablespoons fresh tarragon, chopped

METHOD

In a saucepan, place wine, water, carrots, leeks, onions, thyme, bay leaf, and season with salt and pepper. Simmer mixture for 15 minutes. Remove 15 tablespoons of court bouillon to another saucepan, add tarragon, reduce by half. Set aside.

INGREDIENTS (BROCHETTES)

- 30 scallops
- 1 large tomato, cut in quarters and again in sixths
- 3 large mushrooms, quartered
- 1½ bay leaves

You'll spend more when you buy it. But you'll work less and cook better afterwards.

As you'd expect, the CORNING® 3+1 range costs more to buy than a conventional range, and most other smooth-top ranges. But over the 12 or more years that you'll be cooking on it, you'll find that its higher purchase cost was a small price to pay to change your life in the kitchen.

Only the Corning 3+1 range has temperature controls that can eliminate burning and scorching.

Three cooking areas are regulated by thermostats that actually read the temperature of the bottom of the pan and do the pot watching for you. A simmer stays a simmer automatically. You can even melt butter or chocolate or thicken a sauce without a double boiler.

Very simply, with a CORNING 3+1 range, you'll cook better and work less. No other range can make that promise.

No other smooth-top gives you this choice of cookware.

Use your own flat-bottom pans on the three thermostatically-controlled elements. Or use the Cookmates® cookware that comes with the range. They go from freezer to range to table, saving you more work.

The fourth, or "Multipan,"™ element lets you use any pot or pan in your kitchen, flat-bottomed or not. And the self-cleaning oven is one of the largest made.

In fact, there is a brochure full of reasons why the CORNING 3+1 range is worth more. For a free copy, see your dealer. He's listed in the Yellow Pages under Ranges. heard of territories. In 1965, he opened his first restaurant, the Pot-au-Feu, on a Simenon-sinister street in the dreary Parisian suburb of Asnières. (He couldn't afford the high rent in the chic quarters of town.) Within weeks, le tout Paris was seeking directions to the culinary genius who was boiling up a storm in that dismal location on the outer fringes. Within two years, the real out-of-towners were telephoning from New York for advance reservations but even a dramatic long-distance call couldn't assure one of the coveted forty places.

In 1974, Guérard was dispossessed. The building of the Pot-au-Feu was slated for demolition. To the dismay of his partisans who cried he would be forgotten, he announced he was leaving Paris for Eugénie-les-Bains, a deep-country hamlet of 150 persons, to help Christine with the hotel and spa that belonged to her father who was rejuvenating a chain of five watering places in the region.

The Guérard-istes now are streaming to southwest France. Easiest access to Eugénie is Pau, 50 kilometers away, linked with Paris by two Air-Inter flights a day. The Pau airport now hums with an international buzz and an exchange of hails and farewells from Guérard friends who are coming or going. When there is no room on the Pau line, the Eugénie-bound fly to Bordeaux or to Biarritz and drive from there.

The late Christian Dior used to say that the lines of a future collection could be discerned in his collection of the season before, provided you had the eyes to see.

Guérard's lightening refinement of French cuisine has been en route for some time. In an article published by the International Herald Tribune in July, 1973, I found that at the recommendation of Paul Bocuse, I had tried a "sea bass au varech," a Guérard creation that has won the accolade from the top professionals of France as the discovery of the year. The fish is steamed under a heavy tangle of a particular seaweed sent to Asnières daily from Brittany. This varech imparts its moisture to the bass and infuses it with incomparable flavor of the sea. There is no other seasoning. The dish is a sublime of simplicity.

"When the bass is scraped of its seaweed and its scales, Guérard serves a small bowl of sauce vierge. This is olive oil acidulated with a little lemon juice, to which has been added chopped tarragon, chervil, crushed coriander, and a few bits of peeled and seeded tomato for color.

"Because he feels that potatoes or rice are boring accompaniments to fish, Guérard has arranged each individual 'platter' with a fan of fresh asparagus tips."

After that lunch, Guerard told me he had been inspired by the delicacy of Japanese cuisine and the lithe energy of the Japanese.

At that same Pot-au-Feu luncheon, I had eaten a lobster salad, in which each element maintained its distinction. Reading the description now shows it was a forerunner to Eugénie-les-Bains.

"The dominant note is lobster served in generous chunks. Carrots, sliced paper-thin and previously treated to a suggestion of simmer without destroying the freshness of taste, lend an important touch of orange to the color scheme. Green beans, crunchy and barely cooked, have their place here as well. From the Chinese, Guérard has adopted the rule that vegetables, even when cooked, should still be raw enough to resemble 'just picked.' "

Vegetables, "just picked," figure largely in the menus at Eugénie-les-Bains. Often running them through the blender seems to bring out the very essence of artichokes, string beans, watercress, leeks, cauliflower, mushrooms. Only salt is used, to bring out the innate flavor. He obtains tonalities of flavor by introducing surprising additions. . . . puréed pear to puréed spinach or puréed cauliflower to puréed leeks.

The blender has become a necessary extension to his good right arm. Sauces have always been one of the elegant accomplishments of French haute cuisine. Guérard's contribution is a collection of superlative sauces, more taste than substance. He does not deny the rich goodness of fresh butter and cream. For his "Regime Minceur," he thickens his sauces with puréed mushrooms, a combination of puréed vegetables, or a low-calorie white cheese the French call Taillefine. So successfully has he adapted the sauce of one of his famous Pot-au-Feu dishes—Duckling au poivre vert—that only an exceptional palate or someone forewarned would detect the difference. The similarity of visual appearance makes it possible for a weight-watcher to eat opposite a non-weight-watcher without feeling cheated of all the fun.

The blender has become his magic wand, transforming vegetables into unctuous purées.

"It is useless to incorporate butter or cream," he says, "for they cause the natural flavor of the vegetable to disappear. Finally, parboil them or steam them and salt at the moment you put them in the blender. That is all. Infinite combinations are possible. I very much like a mélange of carrots, mushrooms, celery and onions. The artichoke can be remarkable provided you cook it whole, then remove the leaves and pass only the bottom round in the blender."

Simple Cooking is somewhat of a misnomer. It is not the same thing as Easy Cooking. Guérard's food at Eugénie-les-Bains is referred to as Simple, because it is purified of all the elements of grease and fat that might make it heavy. The efforts involved often surpass what is known as Grande Cuisine.

Although as he points out, it is a return to Grande Cuisine, which demanded that every particle of fat be meticulously skimmed from a sauce. "Then a lot of people began to neglect this Golden Rule, alas," he said. "In a traditional pan-fried steak, how many people remember to throw away the cooking butter?"

In the hierarchy of his present kitchen tools, a sharp knife ranks after the blender. A great deal of time is spent on chopping, dicing, slicing, and mincing. For instance, minced mushrooms can be cooked in a few turns around a Teflon pan because the many exposed surfaces give forth the maximum of inherent moisture. Furthermore, the infinitesimal bits of green pepper or red pimiento or orange carrot are necessary for their esthetic value. In his presentations, Guérard is closely allied to the Japanese.

Individual portions are composed on plates the size of platters. "I like comfortable plates," he says. The use of over-sized plates he borrowed from the Troisgros Brothers (having first asked their permission). It started years ago when he found he could not style a serving of pot-au-feu in the dining room but needed the comparative calm of the kitchen to make an artful arrangement. A commodious plate gives him the opportunity for special effects with everything from salads to desserts.

Feasting the eye is an important element of nourishment, particularly in a Regime Minceur. Automatically you slow down to admire and contemplate. Eating slowly is a key toward oral satisfaction and leads toward the desirable state of Less is More.

"To cook well you cannot be stingy. But I reproach useless excess, the constant temptation to add a little something more in the belief that it will be better, when on the contrary just the reverse is true."

He seemed to be paraphrasing Gertrude Stein who once commented that some people think if perfection is good, more perfection must be better.

At Eugénie-les-Bains, Guérard uses only the finest chickens, ducks, eggs, lobster, crayfish, beef, veal, lamb, fruits, salads, vegetables. Some come from his property. Others he searches out in the colorful farmers' market in nearby Mont-de-Marsan. The herbs and flavorful grasses are at hand in the kitchen garden and in the meadows just beyond the kitchen door.

If you can go, it will be a glorious experience in gastronomic finesse. The success of Guérard's experiments can be judged in the laughter and convivialty of the dining rooms where everybody is having a wonderful time, slimming à la française. ■ gested the tooth fairy! Psychologists have found that reactions to color are more impulsive and emotional than reactions to forms or shapes. (But as people grow older, interest in form begins to exceed interest in color and this accounts for the fact that older people tend to prefer less striking colors. This was pointed out by color expert Eric P. Danger in his book Using Color To Sell [Gower Press].)

One interesting point emerged from the questionnaire: Most people thought that pink and rose were feminine colors. But most people thought that red was sexy. Therefore, you do not think there is necessarily a connection between "feminine" and "sexy"! History Professor Michael Kammen would agree with you about red being sexy. He recently complained to the New York Times that all the history books published in 1974 concerning love or sexuality, instead of having red covers (which he thought most appropriate), had purple, plum, or puce ones. We could have told him, however, that purple, plum, puce, lilac, lavender, etc. were all colors our readers definitely thought were sexy (running behind red and black, in combination with white).

"Color is deeply affected by the psychological climate of the times, as well as by the individual," believes Dr. Sharpe. "One can almost project the colors people will want in the future, based on the world situation. For instance, in a time of uncertainty and economic upheaval, people will choose dark, strong colors such as burgundies and browns. In times of affluence, people will go to the pastels and bright, gay colors." You must have noticed this in your everyday life. Sometimes, in a wonderful mood, you'll put on an orange or a scarlet dress just because you feel like it—the color is a reflection of you. Advertising people have studied this aspect of color, of course. Notice when you next visit your supermarket what colors are used for what products—and see what message the colors promote about the contents.

From the questionnaire, blue, red, and green turn out to be the most popular colors to wear—but you like greens and yellows to live with. Not surprisingly, therefore, your favorite House & Garden Colors turn out to be Sun Yellow, Green Mint, with Creamy Apricot third. Also not surprisingly, therefore, the color you most wanted your kitchen appliances to be, after white, was yellow, as distinct from gold. This was particularly interesting to us since there are very few yellow kitchen appliances on the market (as opposed to gold)—so from now on, let's change that! As to where the color in a room should go, 56 percent of our questionnaire respondents said in accessories, and 47 percent in art and in plants and flowers. Floors, walls, and windows came in a poor third.

Color in one's life is often taken for granted, as emerged from our investigation into dreaming in color (page 103). But as Dr. Kahn observed, our respondents were rather more likely to be aware of color than many others. A more dramatic reason for women's high percentage of dreaming in color, and indeed awareness of color in general, is given by House & Garden's Color Consultant, Faber Birren: "about 8 percent of men have some form of color deficiency—and less than 1 percent of women!"

Mr. Birren, one of the finest color experts in the country, and author of many books including Light, Color and Environment (Van Nostrand Reinhold) and Color in Your World (Collier), believes that color and light are becoming more relevant to a happy environment. "From our work," he says, "we have found that people react quite differently in a colorful environment than in a drab one, although they themselves may not be conscious of it. The natural condition for the human being is to live in a constantly changing environment—of light, color, forms. There's no such thing as a monotonous environment in nature. Today we know that children's intelligence actually degenerates in a monotonous environment." So let us be thankful that we appreciate color, as our questionnaire respondents so obviously do. In Mr. Birren's words: "Above all, for a home, have the courage of your convictions and feelings. Color is one of the natural delights of this world. It is the rule of nature, not the exception, and much of the good life resides in it." ■

Emalee Chapman,
cooking teacher, San Francisco
"I am starting an evening class for people who work, on quick things that take just half an hour, yet are nourishing, good for you. Cook something like a simple chicken with herbs—then balance out the menu with strawberries, unsweetened, marinated half an hour in orange juice, folded into whipped cream. Veal, pounded thin, dusted with parmesan instead of flour —followed by figs in orange juice."

Gerry George,
businessman, New York City
"People I know are concerned about over-indulgence in meat, and are learning to cook vegetables less. None of us wants to eat big meals these days. For instance, here's a light dessert my friends seem to like, made with frozen orange juice. (Buy frozen orange juice in tins with replaceable lids, to preserve the nutritional value as long as possible—spoon out the amount you need, then put the tin back in the freezer.) Put 2 or so tablespoons of frozen orange juice in a bowl and add yoghurt. Peel an apple and cut it into cubes and mix into the orange-yoghurt mixture. The combination is delicious."

Mrs. Kirk Douglas, Los Angeles
"Kirk and I are yoghurt freaks. We have yoghurt every morning for breakfast with various fruits. Kirk used to love a rich Roquefort dressing on salads. I've changed our salad dressing and he likes it just as well. It's made of yoghurt, salt, and pepper, lemon juice.

"We play a lot of tennis and serve a very light luncheon. I use the yoghurt and lemon juice dressing on a giant salad made with lettuce, mixed sliced chicken, sliced ham, sliced tomatoes, and sliced hard-boiled eggs. This is topped with crisp crumbly bacon."

Craig Claiborne, food writer and expert, New York City
"Frankly, I haven't noticed much difference in food. My whole principle is to eat in moderation. Those recipes that call for a lot of butter or heavy cream are not everyday dishes—they are for special occasions, and should be regarded that way."

"Trader Vic" Bergeron,
San Francisco
"We've eliminated the fat from the heavy Mexican food. For instance, chile rellenos. They used to be deep-fat fried—there's nearly ½ to ¾ of an ounce of fat in them, the way a Mexican cooks them. We bake them—with soufflé batter. We lay little cup molds, with no bottoms, on a flat cookie sheet. Then we put a little soufflé batter in each one, with the chile rellenos and put them in the oven."

New quick light recipes from Trader Vic
Mix Wasabi powder—a tangy, flavorful Japanese root—with watercress, vinegar, and water for a light watercress dressing. Or add Wasabi (mixed with water to make a paste) to half sour cream and half mayonnaise.

Quick Light Chicken 1
Broil chicken pieces then swirl them around in two tablespoons of peanut butter.

Quick Light Chicken 2
Put some chutney, with a little water to thin it, in the blender. Then roll your broiled chicken lightly in it and serve. Or marinate shrimp overnight in the chutney marinade and fry quickly.

Thin down a cream sauce for fish with chicken broth, Kikkoman soy sauce, and a few pistachio nuts.

Richard V. Hare,
interior designer, New York City
"Often my wife and I do a chef salad for a light meal—chopped fresh lettuce, grated carrots, chopped celery, slivers of ham and cheese, and leftover vegetables from the night before. With this light dressing: Put into the blender 2 tomatoes, a stalk of celery, 2 teaspoons horseradish, 1 teaspoon Dijon mustard, juice of 1 lemon, basil, parsley, 3 tablespoons olive oil, salt and pepper. This is enough for 4. With it, serve "cheese toast." Toast rye bread, thinly sliced, in the broiler. Spread lightly with mayonnaise. Sprinkle Parmesan on top, and put it back in the broiler."

Mrs. Henry Fonda, Hollywood
"A normal meal for Henry and me could include broiled chicken or fish, or veal flavored with lemon, margarine, and a squeeze of fresh garlic. With this, we have a large mixed green salad from our vegetable garden, which usually includes New Zealand spinach, radishes, carrots, bibb lettuce, and alfalfa sprouts. We keep two sprouting jars going all the time so that we always have one jar with fresh sprouts. For dessert, it's never more than fresh fruit.

"For entertaining, I'm into cold food—perhaps cold veal with a sauce of mashed tuna, capers, lemon juice, and a dash of yoghurt. With this, a cold ratatouille, from the garden including zucchini, other summer squashes, tomatoes, eggplant, salt, and pepper."

Laura Maioglio, owner, Barbetta Restaurant, New York
"American taste has evolved so much. They are interested in lighter foods, yes, but I see that as a greater sophistication. For instance, in my restaurant we have a dish, carne cruda alla Piemontese. This is raw veal. You take some veal—the same as you would use to make scaloppini—and you chop it. Don't put it through a grinder, it doesn't taste the same. Chop it by hand, spread it out on a dish, not in a mound. Then dress it with lemon, olive oil, tiny slivers of garlic, salt, and pepper. The first few years we offered it, nobody would touch it. Now it's become enormously popular.

Mrs. Alan Pakula, hostess, Hollywood
"For luncheons, I do two egg omelettes individually, with Spanish sauce (a mixture of Italian plum tomatoes, onions, tomato paste, mashed garlic, celery, and margarine). For salad now, endive and watercress combined with a light dressing of white wine vinegar, safflower oil, mashed garlic, salt, pepper, and Dijon mustard. When would you have served men a light luncheon like this in the past?"

Monique Silverman,
a Frenchwoman living in New York
"In France, you must remember we do not eat haute cuisine all the time! In most French houses, the food is very simple. I find much American food is heavy—steak, for instance, is full of fat and hard to digest. I get a cheap cut from my butcher (he can't understand it!) that is lean—tougher but easier on the stomach.

"I am now substituting yoghurt for cream, for instance in a Southern French zucchini dish called tian. Cut zucchini into ¼-inch pieces (with skin on) and sauté them with onions in a little butter. When they are half cooked, remove from heat and mash lightly with a fork. Boil rice, mix it with the zucchini, then add yoghurt, one or two eggs, and grated Swiss cheese. Mix it all together and put it in the oven."

William and Chesbrough Rayner, cookbook authors, New York
"There's certainly a move to lighter food and informal buffets these days. Guests can serve themselves to what they want. In our dining room, there is a round table where the buffet is laid out, plus separate tables where people can sit down comfortably. We often have almost a smorgasbord, with beef or chicken, vegetables, salads, and fruit." ■

How YOU Can Turn Box-Tops Into Gold!

My husband laughed when I told him we could rake in over $500 a year with my "crazy" idea. "Too simple," he said. But today we both laugh all the way to the bank.

by Mrs. Ellen Michael

Copyright 1975

From this moment on, forget everything you've ever been told about making and saving money — because almost over night you can learn to change your mail box into a money machine. You'll learn how to open it six days a week for the next year to pull out a guaranteed minimum of $500 — absolutely tax free or your money back.

Unless you simply don't need $500 in extra cash for 1975 — to spend any way you like — take a few minutes to read about the simple, step-by-step method I've worked out.

The method is so incredibly easy that anyone can master it quickly — yet so valuable that it will give you and your family the money you need to buy the luxuries in life before you are too old to enjoy them. You can follow the method in just a few spare minutes a day — without any previous experience. And yes, it's all perfectly legal.

Sound impossible? It's really not. In fact, it's been proved by thousands of people just like you. You CAN learn the secret of how to get SOMETHING for NOTHING through the "magic" of refunding. But first, here's exactly what refunding is and exactly how refunding works.

It's simplicity itself. Refunding is the process of sending box-tops and labels to companies which offer to send you cash, coupons or gifts in return. You've probably taken advantage of offers like these from time to time in a hit-and-miss way. But, you discovered that the "profits" were small — hardly worth the effort. Me too.

But, once I found out that the big companies like Campbell's, Proctor & Gamble, General Mills, Bordens and Lever Brothers make 2,000 to 3,000 giveaway offers every year worth millions of dollars — I set out to find the way to get my share of all that money.

By trial and error and with the help of a refund and box-top expert in New York, I finally figured out a simple, step-by-step method of raking in over $500 a year. The method was tested again and again to make sure it really works. It does. It's almost foolproof.

Everything you need to know about the magic of refunding has been written down — so that you can cash in on the gold mine just sitting there in your cupboard. All this valuable information has been published by Lincoln Press in a book called "How To Turn Box-Tops Into Dollars."

If you have any doubt in the world that you can take in the extra cash you need — here are some reported experiences of avid refunders:

- "I have been putting all my refunds in a special bank account . . . I have over $1,000 saved . . ."
- "I'm planning a week in Nassau with the special fund garnered from coupons and labels . . ."
- "I owed my mother-in-law $50 . . . I've repaid $47 through refunding . . ."
- "This is really a god-send to me. Last month I received $62 in cash and about $30 in coupons for food . . ."

Now, shopping is a money-making adventure, not a chore. You too can claim your share of the million dollar giveaway – when you know how.

- "With refunds I have been able to buy gifts for birthdays and weddings . . ."
- "It seems that every time the mail comes in, I have 50¢ to $1.25 in change — sometimes crisp dollar bills . . ."
- "In the last few months I have saved over $150 . . . that's not counting free cans and packages of food. Last year I bought a bedroom rug and a lawn edger out of my refund money . . ."

Money doesn't grow on trees, so stop for a minute to figure out how much cash — in the form of box-tops and labels — you've thrown into your trash can in the last few months. $200 or more would be a good guess.

I'll make you this promise: when you follow my method, you'll never do that again. Instead, you'll get the thrill of having your mail box filled to overflowing with money. You'll learn exactly how to claim your share of refunds on everything from soup to nuts. Just imagine, $2.00 for 4 Ajax box-tops; $1.00 for a Pillsbury Coffee Cake label; $1.00 for 3 Axion box-tops; $2.00 for a Palmolive Gold soap label. Every one of these cash refunds were actually offered last year.

Let me give you one warning, though. When you first start to use my method, some people may say, "What's the use — you only get back a quarter at a time." They may even laugh the way my husband did. Don't pay any attention to them. A national magazine survey reported that people from Maine to California take in an average of $420.00 a year refunding. If they can do it, you can too.

And money isn't the only thing you'll learn to get once you've read the book and followed my simple method. Top quality merchandise is offered regularly for box-tops and labels. For example, in the last year or so a Polaroid camera was given away for snack food labels; an electric deep fryer for oil labels; an electric mixer for fruit labels; bath towels for soup boxes; toys, dolls and games for mouthwash labels — plus hundreds more.

But make no mistake about it — unless you have the tips, advice and guidance you'll find in "How To Turn Box-Tops Into Dollars" at your fingertips — you won't have a prayer. And, the only way to get your copy is to order it now, by mail. It's not for sale at any bookstore or newsstand in the world — at any price.

3 Bonus Reports — Free

Yes. When you order your copy of "How To Turn Box-Tops Into Dollars" right away you will receive absolutely free three issues of the monthly report "Refunding News." That's right. Each month — for three months — you will be kept up-to-date on the latest box-top and refund offers guaranteed to help you profit. And it's all free.

Your Double Guarantee

This is a double, 100% no-risk offer. If you don't like the book when it arrives, send it back. Your money will be returned immediately, no questions asked. Or, keep and use the book (and the 3 Free Reports) for a full year. If you and you family don't take in at least $500 following the step-by-step method, send everything back next year. You still get all your money back.

Your First $1.00 Refund — Today

To prove that the magic of refunding is no illusion or gimmick — take your first $1.00 refund today. For, even though I had been thinking about charging $6.00 for the book — send just $5.00 in cash, check or money order with the coupon below to Lincoln Press, 4444 South Sheridan, Tulsa, Oklahoma 74145. "How To Turn Box-Tops Into Dollars" (plus the 3 Free Reports) will be sent to you immediately by return mail. Quit dropping quarters and dollars into your trash can. Claim your rightful share of the million dollar refunding giveaway now.

"I saw and felt results in the first 3 days."

NO RIGID DIETING...
NO COMPLICATED EXERCISES...
This ingenious '5' Minute Body Shaper Plan, designed for busy people like you, has you starting to lose inches and pounds immediately...in the privacy of your own home. It's Safe...Medically Approved...and Guaranteed!

Here are the 6 reasons why this plan works fast to start you looking years slimmer...in 14 days!

1. It Concentrates its Slimming Action On Your Fatty Areas, Waist, Hips, Upper Thighs, that give you an aging look. Because it works most of your muscles gracefully at one time—not body part by body part—the Plan stimulates faster slimming action to help you start fashioning a more youthful looking figure in 14 days.

2. Simple to Use. No disrobing. Attach it to any door knob, stretch out comfortably on the floor. Do one '5' Minute continuous, rhythmic, enjoyable exercise, twice daily, whenever you have the time, even while watching TV.

3. Designed to Slim Fatty Problem Areas. Choose 4 different '5' Minute exercises, each created to help slim down the problem fatty deposit areas of your figure in 14 days.

4. No Rigid Dieting. We suggest you temporarily eat 20% less until you reach your normal weight, without giving up any of the foods you love — eat Ice Cream, Cakes, Pasta, whatever! (It's all in the guide.)

5. Safer and Saves Time. No more running to gyms for complicated, exhausting workouts that can strain you. This simple '5' Minute Plan, that you do at home, leaves you refreshed.

6. Weighs Only 10 Ounces. Fits any wallet size case. Stores anywhere. Travels with you so you never have to miss a slimming session. Remember, it's the daily sessions that firm, shape and fashion you a more youthful looking figure.

It's Fun With Results.....''5'' Minutes And Out.

Fasting programs, when causing weight loss, unlike our plan usually burn off more active tissue (muscles) which can cause your skin to wrinkle, muscles to sag and create dragging fatigue. Our Plan increases active tissue growth—through the use of the '5' Minute exerciser—while concentrating greater fat loss by (exercise and temporary 20 percent food reduction) making you look years younger as you slim. Within the first '5' minutes you use the exerciser, you start burning off fat, speeding up your metabolism to help burn up stored calories, releasing excess water. Helps curb your appetite without suppressants. Increases energy and well being. It's so simple and enjoyable a plan to follow, we guarantee you can stay with it remaining slim without re-gaining those inches and pounds. It can put an end to your "gain-and-loss-cycles".

USE OUR '5' MINUTE BODY SHAPER PLAN FOR 14 DAYS AND WE GUARANTEE YOU THESE RESULTS:

"You Will Lose Inches and Pounds. Improve Your Vitality, Energy, Fitness, Posture, Work Off Body Tensions, Feel and Look Better and Younger — All To Your Satisfaction Within 14 Days — If You Follow Our Instructions — Or Your $9.98 Will Be Refunded."

EXPERTS AND CUSTOMERS AGREE:
It's the no-nonsense way to shape up fast!

Scientific reports and many of our 600,000 customers inform us that sauna wraps, inflated belts, weighted belts and other 'effortless exercisers' are of little or no value in firming, shaping and beautifying your figure. "YOU MUST WORK OFF THE INCHES," experts say. We believe, and results prove, our's is the simplest, safest, most enjoyable Plan to do it. We Guarantee It. Here's a sampling of what our slimming customers tell us that happened to them while using the Plan.

Name	Pounds Lost	Inches Lost (off waistline)	Time
G. C	25 lbs.	5¾ in.	(14 days)
M. F	32 lbs.	6⅜ in.	(24 days)
W. E.	15 lbs.	3 in.	(14 days)
M. B.	22 lbs.	8 in.	(21 days)
C. J.	10 lbs.	6¾ in.	(14 days)
P. O.	10 lbs.	6¼ in.	(14 days)
J. C.	10 lbs.	5 in.	(14 days)

They were measured by experts before and after 14 days. The results verified, some notarized. Your results may vary depending on how overweight you are and how much time you devote to the exerciser. The customers quoted spent 5 to 10 minutes, twice daily and reduced their food intake —temporarily—by about 20%, but none gave up the foods they love.

DO IT NOW! It's America's most successful figure shaper. 600,000 customers have purchased our '5' Minute Plan to slim down fast. Results are proven and some notarized. Our guarantee to you is in writing. Experts agree our plan works—and works fast. Now, can you think of any reason for not ordering your '5' Minute Body Shaper Plan and start slimming down today?

Satisfaction Guaranteed!

"Use our improved 5' Minute Body Shaper Plan for 14 days! See what it can do for you! If it is not what we say it is, simply return it to us, in good condition, for your $9.98 refund."

Grow Your Own

Egyptian Beauty Plant

Guaranteed to grow!

The life-juices of the Beauty Plant have been used as a skin moistener and beautifier since the first Pharaoh of Egypt. It was said to be the Secret of Cleopatra's Beauty. It is the secret ingredient of many lotions today!

You can actually use the Beauty Plant to sooth burns and sun burn. Just break off a leaf and rub the clear life juices on your burn. It feels so good! Keep your Beauty Plant in the kitchen for Natural first-aid.

It grows from a small rosette. It's easy. All you do is put it in a pot — water it once a week and watch it grow . . . up to two feet tall. The bigger the pot, the bigger it gets. Comes with easy instructions. It blossoms with spikes of large red flowers that last and last.

It makes a beautiful gift. Send Beauty to a friend. Guaranteed to Grow!

Hawaiian "Good Luck"

ti plant

Guaranteed to grow!

The native Hawaiians believe the Ti Plant has a mystical voodoo power. The leaves were worn to dispel evil. It is planted to bring GOOD LUCK, LONG LIFE and LASTING LOVE. The Ti Plant has been used for medicine, candy, food, alcoholic drinks, and the sexy Hula Skirt.

The Ti Plant grows out of a log — so fast that you can almost see it grow! All you do is put the Ti log in water and watch it grow! When it sprouts, put it in a pot. The bigger the pot, the bigger it will grow . . from one to six feet tall. You can have the size you want. Grow it in sun or shade — it blossoms! The Hawaiian Ti Plant makes an ideal gift. Send good luck to your friends and loved ones.

Choice of red or green leaves; guaranteed to grow or free replacement!

NEW PLANTER POLE TURNS A FEW INCHES OF SPACE INTO AN EXQUISITE TREE OF LIVING GREENERY

- holds 3 hanging plants!
- installs in seconds—no holes in walls or ceilings!
- adjustable—fits most ceilings, windows, counter tops!

Gather up those plants sitting on tables and shelves, doing absolutely nothing for your room, and hang them from this dramatic planter tree! Since it takes just a few inches of space, now you may choose just the spot that's best for your plants and for your decor.

Handsome Pole Works By Vise-Like Spring Tension

Completely eliminates unsightly, expensive-to-repair holes in ceilings and walls. Fully adjustable, it fits ceilings from 7'10" to 9'2", window frames from 5'2" to 6'2", even sits securely on counter tops or vanities. It has a brilliant chrome-like finish and holds pots up to 12" in diameter. Special non-mar caps protect floors, ceilings or furniture. Sold with a money-back guarantee.

How to get rich

START YOUR OWN BUSINESS RIGHT FROM YOUR HOME—AND MAKE A FORTUNE IN MAIL ORDER!

Millions of people read your ad and suddenly, you are swamped with cash orders from all over the country... MORE MONEY in 60 days than you could earn in a lifetime!

Like the Vermont dealer who ran one ad in Sports Afield magazine. His ad pulled 22,000 orders—over A HALF MILLION DOLLARS IN CASH!

Yes, Mail Order is the fastest-growing, most profitable business in America! And now with the population explosion... the huge teenage market... and more people moving to the suburbs—we are on the verge of the BIGGEST BOOM in Mail Order history!

Mail Order Beginners Get Cash by Mail!

Have you ever thought of operating a little mail order business of your own? Something you could start on a shoestring right from home in your spare time. It's a fabulous business!

Bob Carter of Newark, N.J. ran his first small mail order ad in House Beautiful magazine—offering an auto clothes rack. Business Week reported that his ad brought in $5,000 in orders. By the end of his first year in Mail Order, he had grossed over $100,000!

Another beginner—a lawyer from the midwest, sold a mail order item to fishermen. Specialty Salesman magazine reveals, "he made $70,000 the first three months!"

There is no other business where you can make a fortune so fast. Come up with a "hot" new item... and WHAM!

It strikes like a bolt of lightning!

Free

If you are sincerely interested in starting a lucrative business of your own ACT NOW! We can help you get rich in Mail Order just as we've helped others. Mail the coupon or send a postcard. We'll send you a free book, catalog, ads and complete facts about our offer. No salesman will call. No obligation. You don't need previous experience but you must be over 21. Write to:

Some folk claim they aren't afraid of the devil himself, but my Colonial American ancestors were. They thought devils hid in dark corners. To ward off evil parlor or dining room spirits, they filled corners with cupboards, and made them bright and gay. So, too, can you. Ours has panel doors in the base, glass doors above. Two glass shelves are framed in cherry. Illuminated, with cherry veneer back. Dentil mould. Cherry finish.

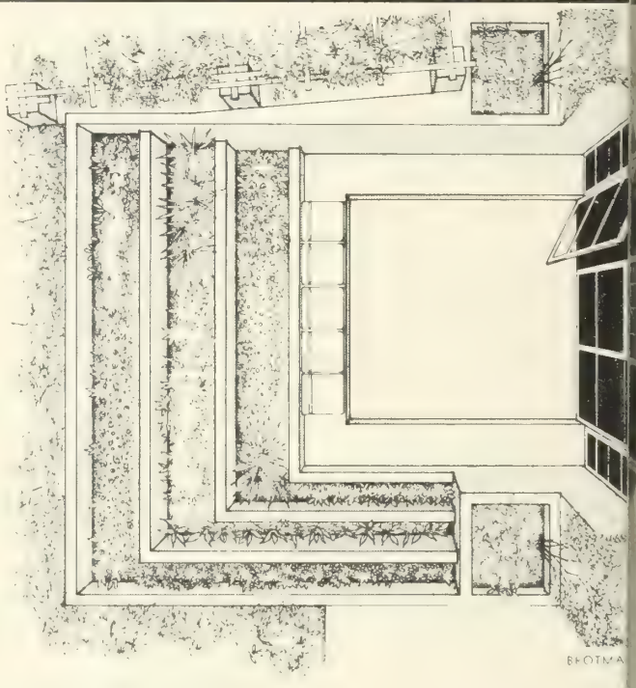
Clever make-overs to give a garden a lift

A stepped garden to catch sun, block wind, grow what you will . . . A holly for warm climates or indoors . . . Ridding lawns of weeds . . . Revamping old gardens

Flowers in steps create a terrace sun-trap

Stuccoed to match the house, a succession of retaining walls creates the garden amphitheatre, right, designed by Gae Aulenti (page 104). First wall—right next to patio paving—is highest—it is meant for sitting. Next comes wall that's a backrest for anyone sitting there. It also holds earth for first level of plants. Three upper walls have less exposed surface, in places are hidden by plants growing upward from below or trailing down from above. Simplest and least expensive way of building a similar garden amphitheatre would be to use cement block. In Portofino's beneficent climate, block walls need not go much below soil line. Where winters are severe, walls will need below-frost footings. Soil mixtures may vary from one level to another, so a garden of this type has almost limitless possibilities for growing things.



A no-trouble holly that grows indoors

Holly-like Ardisia is one of the few red-berried shrubs that grow well indoors. An evergreen that grows outdoors only in warm climates, ardisia has scallop-edged, dark green leaves. It will thrive in any kind of potting soil and can get along with little or no direct sunlight. It does not mind restricted roots and so hardly ever needs repotting. The flowers, below, are small and inconspicuous, but are followed by bright red berries that last until the next season's flowers appear. There is also a white-flowered variety, considered to be something of a rarity. Plants tend to be leggy, but this is easy to remedy—simply cut them back and they'll bush out from the lower stem. And don't discard the cuttings. They take root with no trouble at all, make husky new plants in a few months.

Inconspicuous ardisia flowers turn into long-lasting red berries

Weed identification and advisory service

During the hot months, lawn weeds have been flourishing along with the grass. Some weeds, of course, are inconspicuous enough to be ignored. Others spread fast and far enough to choke out lawn grasses, and these are the ones that need attention. There are so many kinds of lawn weeds, though, that even experienced gardeners may be stumped by the problem of identifying and applying the proper treatment to them. The Scott lawn people have taken a big step toward solving a lot of lawn weed problems by setting up a weed advisory service. This branch of the Scott organization identifies any weed sent to it, and makes recommendations for chemical or other treatment to eliminate the pest. To use this service, wrap a sample of the weed—stem, leaves, and flowers, if any—in aluminum foil, enclose in an ordinary envelope, and mail to O.M. Scott & Sons, Marysville, Ohio 43040. An identification and advice for treatment will be sent as soon as the Scott botanists can do their homework. If you're in a great hurry and can describe your pest plant verbally, dial one of Scott's toll-free numbers: In the East, the number is 800-543-1415; West, it's 800-543-0091; within Ohio, the number is 800-762-4010. There is no charge for the service, whether the advice is given by mail or by telephone.

A fresh start for old gardens

The fall months are the ideal time for remaking your lawns, replanting flower beds, and moving or replacing shrubs and trees. It all takes a good deal of planning, of course, and a good way to begin this planning is by reading Stanley Schuler's Make Your Garden New Again (Simon and Schuster, $9.95). Mr. Schuler describes how to go about making landscape changes for maximum effect with minimum effort. He takes up the basic problems of grading, soil preparation, drainage, and the location of outdoor living areas. He explains how to lay out and build walks, walls, terraces, flower beds, and shrub borders. His choices of trees, shrubs, vines, and herbaceous plants are carefully made for beauty and practicality in a variety of climates. As a guide to home landscaping, whether you are remaking your garden or are about to start from scratch, this book has the answers.

PIGEON SALAD

NOTE: A dark-fleshed game bird—quail, pheasant, guinea hen—is nearest substitute if pigeon is unavailable; but recipe could be adapted to Cornish hens or chicken.

INGREDIENTS

1 pigeon
pigeon consommé or chicken stock
2 or 3 leaves of 2 or 3 different salad greens like romaine, spinach, rugola, or a variety of lettuces vinaigrette sauce
12 artichoke bottoms, halved
1 tomato, peeled, seeded, chopped
1 tablespoon kernels of corn
1 tablespoon mushrooms, cut in strips
1 tablespoon lemon peel, cut in strips

METHOD

Remove legs from pigeon, and grill. Poach rest of pigeon in pigeon consommé (or well-flavored chicken stock) until cooked but still rose-colored. Slice thin. Dress greens with a light vinaigrette sauce. Arrange each plate with grilled thigh in center surrounded by greens on which are laid thin slices of poached pigeon. Ring with halved artichoke bottoms, sprinkle over remaining ingredients. Serves 2.

TISANE D'EUGÉNIE

A natural diuretic made with equal parts of heather flowers, corn silk, cherry stems, horsetail, and Uva-ursi (bearberry). Prepare as you would tea: Pour boiling water over herbs, steep at least 5 minutes, pour off tisane and serve, or chill to serve cold. Garnish with any combination of the following: slice of apple, slice of orange, a strawberry, a grape, a chunk of pineapple, and a sprig of fresh mint. Ingredients are available at herb-and-spice or health-food stores. Or from Kiehl Pharmacy, 109 Third Ave., New York, N.Y. 10003.

Crown Baroque is the most majestic and elegant sterling you can own. It is a work of art in solid silver that only Gorham could achieve—a work of art that can only grow more valuable with time. Because sterling is valued by its weight, design, craftsmanship, and future appreciation to succeeding generations, Crown Baroque is truly a superior investment. Unequaled in all these respects, it will never grow old... only more precious.

New Crown Baroque is the stateliest of the stately baroques. Hold a piece and you will experience the feel of its luxurious weight. It is the heaviest American sterling flatware you can buy, beautifully proportioned to feel comfortable in your hand and look exquisite on your table.

Crown Baroque is another striking example of the sterling masterpieces that Gorham has been creating since 1831. Masterpieces that have endured time and change to become classics, even more popular today than when first introduced. Each one is more than just a beautiful Gorham pattern. Each is a total design. A true work of art in sterling...with perfect balance between ornamentation, shape and function.

The world famous Gorham Hallmark has represented the pride of the silversmith's art for over one hundred and forty years. It says your Gorham Sterling is the ultimate in dignity and grace, beauty and craftsmanship. It tells everyone that you will not settle for anything less than the best.

Do you own a Gorham Original?

Crown Baroque...a new Gorham Original destined to become another classic in timeless design.

A KITCHENAID COMPACTOR CAN GET YOU OUT OF THIS MESS.

It's a beautiful answer to an ugly problem.

Just deposit your trash. The compactor will swallow it up, compacting it to about ¼ its original volume. It gobbles up cans, cartons, bottles and scrap. Quickly. Easily. Neatly.

The exclusive KitchenAid Litter Bin™ makes it easy to handle small trash without stooping. And the big trash drawer handles whole wastebasket loads at one time.

What's more, only KitchenAid has an activated charcoal air filter to eliminate odors. And you can use the KitchenAid compactor with or without trash bags.

Your KitchenAid dealer will show you how it works. His address is in the Yellow Pages under "Dishwashers." Or send us the coupon.

5th Century English reproductions.

The original of the japanned Queen Anne Secretary replica, shown here in one of our showrooms, was commissioned by the Duke of Marlborough in about 1700 for Blenheim Castle. Its lacquer colors .re softened by skilled hands to a nellow patina.

The original of the Regency Bam-)oo Chair was brought to New York –to a shop on 57th Street—by a :nowing connoisseur. Only by mak-ng models of its delicate original)arts could the sculptural curves, weeps and pitch be duplicated.

The Bachelor's Chest, like much Queen Anne furniture, is enriched)y rare walnut. Once called Persian, :he trees which produced this wood were planted in England by the Roman conquerors. Today it can)nly be found near the Caucasus, where soil, wind and rain conditions :emain perfect for producing its special character.

These are but three reproductions from our Baker collection with the enduring qualities which make the originals so valuable: proportion, detail, finish and authentic material.

OUR TOWEL.

Since we loomed our first Martex® Luxor Towel a quarter century ago, there has been none lusher. Denser. Softer. Or, if pure function is what you demand, more absorbent. With a little patience, and a few free hours, you can prove this to yourself by counting the tiny loops in every square inch.

True, what you see here amounts to nothing more than what a perfect towel should be.

Yet, more than any other product we make, this simple length of terry expresses our belief that the necessities of life should be as beautiful as the indulgences.

How to go to the movies without leaving home

BY MARGARET MORSE

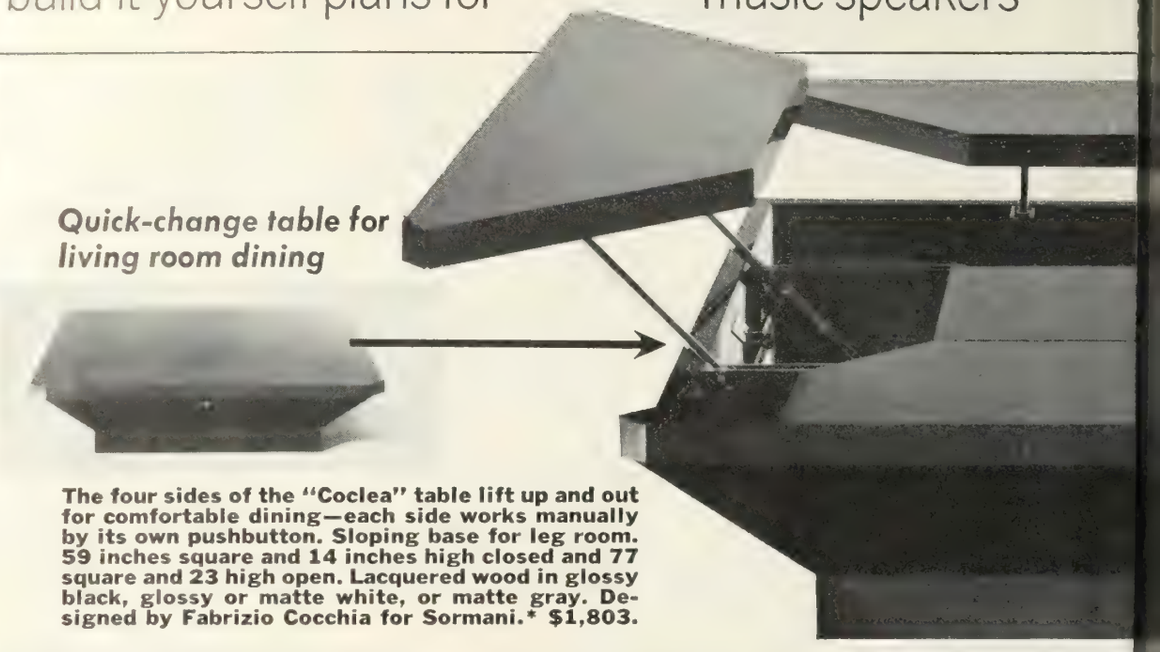
Where to rent 16mm. feature films by mail across the country—Great fun for parties or simply for movie buffs, 16mm. feature films are readily available by mail from many motion-picture film rental companies around the country. For a local list, check "Motion Picture Film Libraries" in your telephone Yellow Pages. Most companies rent to you with the agreement your showing will be strictly private and without admission charge, with your mailing the film back the next day. The prices we've quoted—from the latest catalogues—are for a single showing under these conditions. For other conditions and specifics, see company catalogues. Please note that prices for a given film may vary widely and that prices are subject to change.

If you don't have a 16mm. motion-picture projector, most large photography stores rent them—about $25 a day or $65 a week in New York City. Or look in the telephone Yellow Pages under "Motion Picture Equipment & Supplies Renting."

Before listing some companies that rent 16mm. features by mail, I suggest the quickest way to find the film you want may be the Film Programmer's Guide to 16mm. Rentals. It covers features, early cinema, selected documentaries, and newsreels, often gives comparative prices for different distributors carrying the film, with a directory of 52 film distributors and summary of their rental and price conditions in back. Compiled by (Continued on page 232)

Now you can buy nine pretty sheet patterns by Wamsutta by the yard! In cotton and polyester Ultracale, 55 inches wide, at about $3 a yard, a real bargain in chic for sewing slipcovers, curtains, even covering walls. At Bloomingdale's and Macy's in New York, Burdine's in Miami.

Quick-change table for living room dining



The four sides of the "Coclea" table lift up and out for comfortable dining—each side works manually by its own pushbutton. Sloping base for leg room. 59 inches square and 14 inches high closed and 77 square and 23 high open. Lacquered wood in glossy black, glossy or matte white, or matte gray. Designed by Fabrizio Cocchia for Sormani.* $1,803.

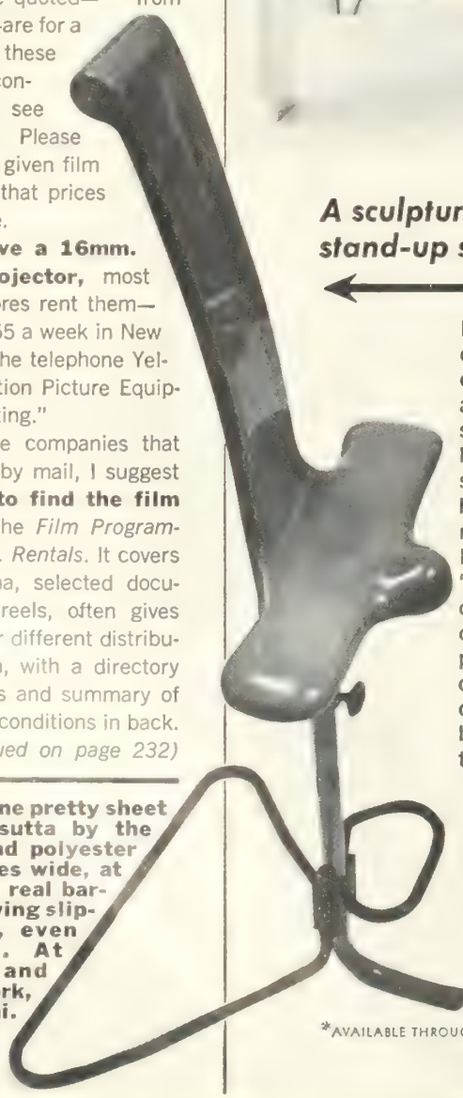
A half-moon of black granite, 8 feet long, notched with V-shaped stainless steel legs. Two drawers. As shown or topped with Carrara marble, about $6,850; olive ash burl or ovangkol burl, about $6,250. By Leon Rosen for The Pace Collection.*

A sculptural seat for stand-up support



If you spend hours over a kitchen counter or worktable and would like the support of a chair but freedom of standing, the high, half-seat "standing rest" is for you. It's an example of the "form follows function" design Italy often does so well. Molded plastic seats in orange, white, brown, or black. The adjustable black iron base is tripod-shaped for stability. Designed by Claudio Salocchi for Sormani.* About $173.

*AVAILABLE THROUGH INTERIOR DESIGNERS ONLY.

On keeping heat inside, where it belongs

What insulation is and where to put it, ways to reinforce windows and doors, plus a gadget to help control your shopping costs in the supermarket

Settling in for the winter

By Sandra Oddo

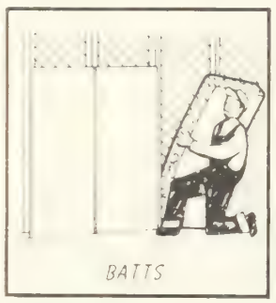
Insulation is the answer. In all those lists of ways to conserve energy, it figures first, and by now we've read it so often that it sounds just a little boring: Ah, yes, insulate (yawn). But how? With what? How much? When?

When? Now. It's cool enough now that you won't roast in the attic or under the roof. It's warm enough that you won't freeze outside while you're tucking in the basement windows. Construction-supply places are up to their rafters in insulation of all kinds. And—the big reason—expensive winter heat is not yet fleeing through your walls in invisible waves. Or rather, in waves that become all too visible on your utilities bills.

How much? "In typical frame or masonry veneer construction," say Henry R. Spies, Seichi Konzo, Jean Calvin, and Wayne Thoms in their valuable book 350 Ways to Save Energy (and Money) (Crown, $5.95), "each 1,000 square feet of uninsulated wall surface . . . will lose 18,750 BTUs per hour." Proper insulation can reduce the loss by more than three quarters. What's proper? For maximum savings, walls should have an R-value of at least 13, ceilings or roofs an R-value of 19, and floors over basements or crawl spaces at least as much as walls.

With what? The most widely used insulation is fiberglass, R-11 for 3½-inch wall batts, or R-3 for each inch of thickness. It is made by melting down glass, extruding it in fibers, and packing the fibers together with resins. Mineral wool, made with melted rock or slag by the same process, has a similar R-value. Both are relatively inexpensive to buy—about 10c a square foot—and easy to apply in new houses. Fiberglass is made (Continued on page 16)

Rolls are made to fit between studs built on 16- or 24-inch centers.



Batts are 48 inches long and, like blankets, have vapor barrier backing.

Boards are usually 2 by 8 feet, also come with tongues and grooves.

For ceilings, a depth of 6 inches—and don't balance on joists to do it.

The wonderful value o

R

Insulation is measured in R-value, t amount of resistance it puts up to he passing through it. The better the sulation, the higher the R-value. Highe of the commonly used insulation is po urethane, with an R-5.88 rating for ea inch of thickness of insulation. T R-value is usually printed on the m terial itself, or on the package.

Insulation can also be measured in —the amount of heat (in BTUs) it w conduct per square foot per hour. T lower the K factor, the better. It rang from .16 for polyurethane to .47 f vermiculite.

Both R and K ratings can change d pending on whether the insulation is loose, rigid, or batt form, and on wheth it is used in walls or ceilings.

The safe use of foam

Polystyrene is something called a thermoplastic material. When it's hot you can mold it—so when there is a fire, it melts. It will melt away from a very small fire. But in a large fire it will burn as well as wood, and will release heat much more quickly—explosively in some cases. It will drip and cling. And it will release a lot of deadly carbon monoxide.

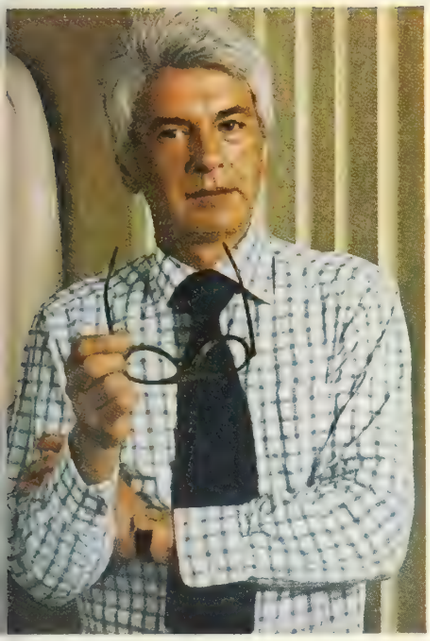
Polyurethane is a thermoset material—once molded it will burn but not drip or melt. It will release the same gases.

Neither should be used as insulation where it will be exposed. Amspec, a construction-materials subsidiary of Dow Chemical, which makes Styrofoam, has conducted extensive tests and found that the best fireproofing cover-up for rigid foam insulation is plain old gypsum board. A sheet as thin as a half-inc spackled and taped, will make a wall as fi resistant as if there were no foam there. F retardant paint can also be used, but ten to be brittle. If it should accidentally be ch ped, its value would be destroyed. Mc paneling works, though it conducts he Wood paneling does not work.

As we become more energy-conscio more people are going to consider insulati panels or shutters to cover windows at nigh Rigid foam, in form, is perfect for these—b because of its flammability, says an Amsp spokesman, they do not recommend it unle covered with metal on both sides, or unle used only against the glass, when neith window frame nor nearby paneling is of woo

"The new romantic looks can take the heart out of your hair. 30 minutes with condition* will put it back."

Pierre Henri



"Personally, I love the romantic looks.

I also hate them. I love what the soft waves, bouncy curls, and fluffy bangs do for you. I hate what the permanents, stiff brushes, brush rollers can do to your hair.

They can turn soft into strawlike, bouncy into broken, fluffy into frizzy.

Now I'm not suggesting that you switch to some Plain Jane hairstyle. But I strongly suggest that, along with the romance, you give your hair a good sensible dose of condition* Beauty Pack Treatment from Clairol.

Of course, condition* may cost a little more than most other conditioners, but it's loaded with protein.

In just 30 minutes, condition* sinks right into the hair shaft, supplying protein to the deprived hollows.

It adds new body and manageability, helps repair split ends, and gives your hair a terrific shine.

You give it permanents. Brush it out. Roll it up.

If you really want your hair to look romantic, give it a little love. Give it condition*."

in 6-inch batts for ceilings.

Cellulose fiber, made from wood pulp or recycled paper chemically treated to resist fire and water, has a slightly lower R-value than mineral wool. It comes in batts and blankets but is used most often as loose fill. Some settling deterioration may be expected with time.

Foamed plastic boards, polystyrene, and polyurethane are becoming more common and more valuable as insulating materials. Polystyrene can be either molded (like insulating coffee cups) or extruded. The extruded form is best for insulating boards, with an R-value of 4 to 5.4 per inch of thickness. It is completely waterproof. Polyurethane has an even higher R-value but may pick up moisture and swell with time. It is used, therefore, only in places where it is protected from moisture—as between the metal sheets that form the sides of a refrigerator. Both will burn, so they should always be covered with a fire-resistant material. In a concrete-block construction, rigid insulation has a labor-saving advantage. It can be pasted directly to the block wall, inside or out, with mastic. Gypsum board or siding can be pasted to the insulation, eliminating extensive carpentry. If you install it yourself, it costs about 15¢ a square foot.

Polyurethane foam, sprayed between existing walls, is an effective but unpredictable insulator. The technology of spraying is not quite where it should be yet, and a lot depends on the skill of the operator. It can also swell if it picks up moisture after it is installed.

Urea-formaldehyde foam, patented by the Rapperswill Corp. of New York as Rapco-Foam, is totally non-flammable. It has an R-value of about 5 per inch, it does not settle or swell (though it may contract up to 3 percent), and, installed by an approved applicator, it is guaranteed for the life of the structure. Rapperswill has trained and licensed about 1,000 applicators in the U.S.—and the training is important, since improperly mixed urea-formaldehyde foam can develop a lingering formaldehyde odor. It should cost about 50 percent more to blow into an existing wall than blown fiberglass would.

In considering the use of all foams, check your local building codes. Polystyrene, for example, is banned in Chicago.

Particle board, made from miscellaneous wood fibers, is sometimes used as an insulating sheathing board, between wall studs and house siding. It has a R-value of about 2.6 per inch and is a fairly good soundproofing material. It is inexpensive, but, like wood, is susceptible to termites.

Expanded mineral materials like vermiculite or perlite are available as boards or loose granules to fill existing walls or ceiling spaces. They're fireproof and verminproof. As a board, perlite has an R-value of 3 per inch for roof uses. Loose fill is slightly less than R-2 per inch.

How? If you are building a new house, the answer is easy—everywhere, with everything. Start by planning to take advantage of the sun. A ranch-house-like rectangle, for instance, will use 40 percent more energy if its long sides face east and west than it will if they face north and south. Energy-conscious builders are beginning to advocate a total wall system with full batts of fiberglass between wall studs, and sheathing of ¾-inch or 1-inch Styrofoam to cover the outside, ground plate to rafters, under the siding. Such a wall would have an R-value of more than 18.

Rigid insulation manufactured by companies like Dow and Owens-Corning figures in a new concept for roofs—turn them upside down. Insulating boards go on top of wood and tar paper, just under the shingles, to make the roof more heat-and-weather tight.

If you want to add insulation to an existing house, it may take a little more ingenuity. Start with the ceiling, since savings count the most there. If it's loose fill, common in older houses, has it settled? You can add more, or you can replace it with batts of insulation. You can even lay batts on top of the fill, as long as the batts have no vapor barriers. A foil or kraft paper moisture barrier will trap any moisture in the fill, perhaps compounding a problem. If there is no space between ceiling and roof, consider insulating the roof with board-type insulation. Or, if you can spare 2 inches of room height, and your joists can carry the extra weight, glue rigid insulation to the existing ceiling, then cover it with another layer of gypsum board for fire-resistance.

If your exterior walls have no insulation, the only practical solution is to have some blown in. Strips of siding are removed, holes are bored at intervals, and insulation—loose perlite, vermiculite, fiberglass, mineral wool, cellulose fiber, or foam—is blown into the interior wall cavities. It is not a job

The Birmingham Mint of England proudly presents The Colonial Heritage Collection – a strictly limited edition of Bicentennial plates in solid sterling silver.

To salute America's Bicentennial, the world-renowned Birmingham Mint has created six extraordinarily beautiful works of the silversmith's art.

The Colonial Heritage Collection captures, in the soft glow of fine sterling silver, six major events in America's colonial history. The Landing of the Pilgrim Fathers. The First Thanksgiving. William Penn's Treaty with the Indians. Patrick Henry's "Liberty or Death" Oration. The Boston Tea Party. And the Signing of the Declaration of Independence.

To bring out all the detail and drama of these sculptured scenes, the plates will be struck in high relief, from dies hand-carved by master craftsmen. Each plate will bear the prized Maker's Mark of the Birmingham Mint and come with a Certificate of Authenticity signed by the Managing Director of the Mint. Founded during Washington's presidency, the Birmingham Mint is England's oldest, largest private mint, known throughout the world for its fine commemorative plates and other collector's items in precious metal.

Each solid sterling silver plate—with official British Government hallmarks guaranteeing the purity of the metal—will be sent to you in a deluxe presentation case, suitable for wall mounting if desired. The Mint will issue one plate every two months, from November 1975 to September 1976. The price will remain $180 per plate, regardless of any increases in the cost of silver.

Along with your sixth plate, you will receive a special gift from the Birmingham Mint—an additional plate struck in classic pewter, the traditional metal of colonial America. It will portray famous "Heroes of The Revolution."

Only 2000 sets, each with registered serial number, will be struck in sterling silver. Orders received after the issue is fully subscribed must regretfully be returned.

Because of its artistic quality and intrinsic value, and as a token of friendship between our two great nations, The Colonial Heritage Collection will surely become one of the most cherished heirlooms of the Bicentennial—to be enjoyed now and passed along with pride to future generations.

Rediscover wonder-working whole grains and other natural fibers

New medical research tells you why and how

By Eloise R. Trescher, RD

"Said a lean, wiry lipid imbiber
Of no diet am I a subscriber
And you never would guess
That I eat to excess
For the secret, my friends, is the fiber."

From an article by Dr. David Kritchevsky, The Wistar Institute of Anatomy and Biology, Philadelphia, Pa.

The implication of the above limerick is yet to be proven, but research in this country and in England has turned up convincing evidence to establish its credibility.

What is dietary fiber? It is that part of plants, the whole grains, vegetables, nuts, fruits, and legumes that are not digested by the secretions of the human gastrointestinal tract. It is made up of a complex of carbohydrates of which the layman rarely hears—celluloses, hemicelluloses, mucilages, pentosans, gums, pectins, and noncarbohydrate lignin.

Recently research has revived interest in dietary fiber. But as early as 1920, Dr. J. H. Kellogg, Medical Director of the Battle Creek Sanatorium, advised an "Antitoxic Diet." He recommended the daily use of fruits, vegetables, nuts, legumes, and whole grain cereals especially coarse oatmeals and wheat bran in our diets.

Dr. Kellogg wrote, "Modern medical research has clearly incriminated the colon as the source of more disease and physical suffering than any other organ of the body. The artificial conditions of life, sedentary habits, concentrated foodstuffs, false modesty, ignorance, and neglect of bodily needs have produced a crippled state of the colon as an almost universal condition among civilized men and women. One of the many functions of the colon or large intestine is to carry food residue to the rectum."

In 1974, fifty-four years later, Dr. B. H. Ershoff wrote in the Journal of Applied Nutrition the following possible benefits of dietary fiber:

1. As an antihypercholesterolemic and antiatherosclerotic agent (prevention of an elevated cholesterol and hardening of the arteries.)
2. As a promoter of normal bowel function.
3. As an antitoxic agent.

The multimillion dollar annual sales of laxatives and cathartics substantiate their claims. Present studies indicate that diets low in fiber might be implicated in certain types of heart disease, elevated cholesterol, cancer of the colon, and other diseases of the colon such as diverticulosis.

The ways in which dietary fiber works are complex. Different kinds of fiber play different roles. The chief roles of dietary fibers are to:
1. Increase the bulk of the diet. This may result in greater excretion of bile salts and fats.
2. Permit greater water binding capacity of the intestinal contents.
3. Promote a favorable milieu for intestinal bacterial flora.
4. Produce larger and softer stools.
5. Decrease the transit time of the fecal mass. Carcinogenic substances would have shorter contact time with the intestinal mucosa and therefore less chance of promoting the development of cancer.

Persons whose diets are composed of highly refined foods and foods low in fiber content (meat, fish, poultry, eggs, cheese) are often constipated and take muciloids in water to provide intestinal bulk. A happier solution to the problem is to eat foods high in fiber content—a salad of fresh fruit or greens, 100 percent whole grain breads, crackers, or cereals, especially those rich in bran, some dried figs or prunes, a dish of Scotch oatmeal at breakfast. Any of these, singly or in combination, provide pleasant ways of including dietary fiber, and help promote satisfactory bowel movements.

Little is now known about the specific properties of different fibers. The U.S. Department of Agriculture Handbook No. 8, 1963, our most recent comprehensive source of information on the composition of foods, lists only crude fiber or C.F. Crude fiber is the insoluble material left after severe acid and base hydrolysis. C.F. values must be used because those for dietary fibers are presently unavailable.

The amounts of C.F. in foods vary widely. Whole grains contain large quantities but as you see in the lists on page 28 much of these are removed in milling. The C.F.

"If anyone had told me few years ago that I would be an Interior Decorator, I would have said you're crazy!"

Mrs. Faye C. Haynie
An outstanding LaSalle graduate from Madisonville, Kentucky

"Less than a month after I mailed my final lesson I was hired by a decorator firm. What makes my career so special is that I choose my own hours . . . and I feel so rich when I compare my earnings with what I used to earn," writes LaSalle graduate, Mrs. Faye C. Haynie. "If anyone had told me a few years ago that I would be an Interior Decorator, I would have said "you're crazy!"

/ou have a natural love for attractive homes, y don't you become an interior decorator? re's how one woman made her dream of a nderful career come true.

It seems only yesterday that Mrs. Faye Haynie Madisonville, Kentucky was working in a job didn't like . . . as a million other women do. Today, she enjoys a good income in an excit- career of her own . . . having the time of her as an interior decorator.

How did Mrs. Haynie accomplish this racle?

One day she answered an advertisement of Salle Extension University, a correspondence itution, describing the attractions of a career interior decorating.

When she realized how much fun it could be learn decorating in her spare time at home, e decided to enroll. That was the beginning of whole new life for her, and one of the reasons r her happiness today.

LaSalle training has helped many women in- ease their decorating skills. LaSalle could help u do it, too. Why don't you send for the book- offered below?

An ideal career for women

ere are few other fields to match the pleasures id rewards that a woman — whether married or ngle — can enjoy as an interior decorator. Con- der for a moment:

You'll be able to put your natural talents and eative urge to use in designing beautiful and citing rooms for clients.

Your hours will be spent shopping for the un- ual. In glamorous showrooms, antique shops id galleries. Selecting whatever is lovely and nique . . . in fabrics, furniture and accessories. pplying your "decorator's touch" to beautify home, a suite of offices, a hotel or apartment ouse lobby. Whatever your assignment, you'll arn money doing work you enjoy.

You'll enjoy the freedom of not being tied own to a set routine. Or 9 to 5 office grind. You an often choose to work full or part time.

Best of all, in addition to the money and satis- action in accomplishment, you'll delight in eeting new and interesting people. Clients ften become friends.

For a beginning, you may prefer a position in a decorating studio, home furnishing gallery, or smart department store. With experience, you'll have every opportunity to build an independent business of your own.

How you train at home

The LaSalle Course in Interior Decorating has been prepared to give you practical, complete and up-to-date preparation for this exciting modern career. Lessons come to you by mail; they are as fascinating as the work itself. Much of the study material included is unique in a course of this kind. You get fine quality sketching equipment, coloring materials, stencils that make it easy for you to draw room plans, and much more.

Step by step, you are shown how to develop your creative ability. You are taught the principles of color and design and the historic background of today's decoration. You are trained in the selection and use of furniture, fabrics, accessories, lighting. You learn how to achieve beautiful settings to delight your clients and build your reputation.

Even before you have finished the course, you may want to apply your new knowledge to glorifying your own home.

At each step, you are given practical assignments which are then carefully reviewed by your instructors and returned to you. You are coached with care for your work as a decorator.

The LaSalle Course in Interior Decorating is backed by more than sixty years of leadership in the field of home education. More than 2,000,000 people have enrolled for home-study courses with LaSalle.

Wheat-Soy Waffles

1 cup whole wheat flour
1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup soy flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 eggs, separated
1½ cups milk
3 tablespoons melted butter or oil
2 tablespoons honey

Stir dry ingredients together. Beat egg yolks, add milk, butter, and honey and blend well. Stir into dry ingredients. Beat the egg whites until stiff and fold them into the batter. Bake on hot, oiled waffle iron. Makes about 10 waffles. You can add ½ cup of chopped nuts folded in with the egg whites. From Diet for a Small Planet by Frances Moore Lappé.

Lacy Oatmeal Cookies

½ pound butter, melted
2¼ cups light brown sugar
2¼ cups regular oatmeal, not instant
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 egg slightly beaten

Mix together the melted butter, sugar, oatmeal, vanilla, and egg. Drop by the teaspoonful on an ungreased cookie sheet, allowing for 3-inch spread. Bake in a 350° oven until brown, 5-7 minutes. Cool the cookies. Makes 5 dozen. Contributed by Mrs. Richard Randall to the Walters Art Gallery cookbook Private Collections.

Rice Bread

2 tablespoons dry yeast
1½ cups lukewarm water
¼ cup honey
2 cups cooked, moist rice
2 tablespoons corn or rice oil
2 teaspoons salt
½ cup rice bran
5 cups unbleached flour

Preheat oven to 375°. In a large bowl, mix yeast, water and honey until dissolved and frothy. Thoroughly blend in rice, oil, salt and rice bran. Add enough flour to form a soft dough. Knead dough on floured board at least 15 minutes until smooth and elastic. Form into ball, place in greased bowl, cover with damp tea towel and set in warm place to rise 1½ hours or until double in size. Punch down, let rise again 40 minutes or until doubled and return to floured board. Knead and shape into 2 loaves, place in 2 greased bread pans and let rise until again double in size. Bake for 10 minutes, lower heat to 325° and continue baking 35 minutes. Remove from oven, let stand 5 minutes, remove from pans and cool on rack. Makes 2 loaves. Health care in America is changing—just how is it going to affect you?

Preventive Medicine

What it means and how it's going to make you live happier, longer

"Physicians can see that diseases we know to be preventable do not occur in the first place"

Findings and forecasts from Dr. Ernst L. Wynder, president and medical director of the American Health Foundation

By Caroline Seebohm

The expression "preventive medicine" is not very familiar yet to most people—but it looks as though it's going to become an important part of our vocabulary of the next decade. The reason it's beginning to make news is simple: As Americans know more and more about health, it's suddenly clear that we can help ourselves live longer and happier than we've ever lived before.

"Nobody takes better care of you than YOU!" is the slogan of the American Health Foundation, a nonprofit organization formed to advance the cause of preventive medicine. "We need a new approach to health care," says its president and medical director, Dr. Ernst L. Wynder. "In its idealistic sense, the physician should attempt to prevent illness in patients. We, however, equate doctors with sickness. Perhaps you know the probably apocryphal story that it was a custom for doctors in China to be paid when you were well—when you got sick, you stopped paying! I like to believe that disease really presents the first defeat of the medical art, and that we as physicians should see that those diseases that we know to be preventable should not occur in the first place. And this means that you, the people, must cooperate.

"For instance, we now know there are risk factors relating to cancer and cardiovascular disease that can be avoided—such as smoking. There are three ways to deal with this particular risk factor: (1) by telling young people (in particular) not to begin to smoke, which does not do much good for those people who believe that cancer or premature death from smoking will not happen to them; (2) by setting up smoke cessation clinics, to help those people who want to give up smoking but cannot do so by themselves; and (3) by making cigarettes less harmful. The American Health Foundation is concentrating on all these ways with some success—for instance, we have in this country today cigarettes that are less harmful than they were ten years ago, through reduction of tar-nicotine levels.

"In the area of nutrition we are also applying preventive measures. We concur with existing opinion that saturated fats and high cholesterol increase risk of arteriosclerosis and cardiovascular disease. But what we are now finding is that the high fat or high cholesterol diet also appears to be a risk factor relating to a whole variety of cancers—breast, colon, pancreas, and kidney, for instance.

"You don't take your car for granted. It has regular checkups. But you take your body for granted. We all have the illusion of immortality"

"Nearly everyone overeats, even those on a so-called normal diet—and we have to be careful when we use the word 'normal.' Many people confuse 'normal' with 'average.' What is average for Americans is not average for the Japanese, where cardiovascular disease and these cancers are relatively uncommon. Nor would they be average in Puerto Rico, where also these diseases are less common. We really need to know what 'normal' is. The normal cholesterol level might well be between 100 and 120 milligrams percent in the bloodstream of an adult individual, which we see rarely in America. Here the average is between 220 and 230 milligrams.

"One reason for this problem is that in the last 100 years we have become physically less and less active, and thus require fewer and fewer calories." A sign of the times: The recommended dietary allowances issued by the Food and Nutrition Board of the National Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences are down in proteins and in calories, (see House & Garden, September 1975, page 112). "Yet as we become more affluent, we tend to eat more and more fat—in this century alone total fat contribution to total calories increased from about 32 percent to 42 percent, instead of decreasing. People will not exercise more—it takes too much discipline—so the only alternative is to cut down on calories, fat, and cholesterol. We are suggesting to the food industry to lower fat and cholesterol content in their food products. We are asking you, in fact, to modify your entire diet."

"In China, preventive medicine is emphasized because it saves the society money. We should be looking to that too"

Even the government has begun to take notice of the value of preventive medicine. The first Health and Nutrition Examination Survey, United States, 1971-2, undertaken by the National Center for Health Statistics, has just published its preliminary findings. This new program—the first of its kind—aims to establish a continuing national nutrition surveillance system that will measure the nutritional status of the U.S. population and provide an objective test of programs to improve that status. Preliminary findings, just out, reveal that "there is evidence of a deficiency with respect to the nutrient iron, based on both the dietary intake and biochemical data. This dietary deficiency occurs at all age levels and is not limited to persons in the below-poverty level group." The results also show that the biochemical iron deficiency is more

"We are beginning school programs that teach children how to be aware of their own blood pressure, cholesterol count, etc" prevalent in the younger age groups, something that would not surprise Dr. Wynder.

"Health care in children is a neglected area," he says. "We are beginning Know Your Body programs in schools, where we tell children how to learn about their body. We issue them a health passport, which records their own blood pressure, cholesterol count, etc. As children become more knowledgeable about the potential risk factors as they apply to themselves, they are much more likely to have better health habits."

The American Health Foundation is also interested in mini-checkups for adults in their place of work. "We send out allied health professionals to take blood pressure and cholesterol count, and fill out a health questionnaire to try and identify by these limited studies the high-risk patients, and zero in on them. The whole procedure takes less than ten minutes, and costs less than $10. Then if risk factors are found they can be acted upon."

Again, one of Dr. Wynder's preventive medicine ideas is now being taken up elsewhere: Gimbels department stores in New York have instituted a hypertension detection and treatment program for their employees at the stores themselves, and high blood pressure has been adequately reduced in 81 percent of the treated workers. The program was so successful that it is being extended to other organizations. Because the site of the Gimbels clinic was where the patients worked, much time and cost were saved—and the patients could work better.

"We are spending billions of dollars on illness," declares Dr. Wynder. "Yet we spend little on reducing these illnesses. If we did reduce them, what would be the economic saving to this country? In China, a great deal of emphasis is being placed on preventive medicine, because as a society they can save money that way. For economic reasons, we also should pay more attention to disease prevention."

Dr. Wynder envisages that the medical care of tomorrow will include a mini-screening—just as regularly as a motor vehicle. "You take your body for granted," he says. "But you don't take your car for granted. It has regular check-ups. We all have the illusion of immortality—'it can't happen to me.' Well, it's up to you to take the responsibility—remember, nobody takes better care of you than you."

Living in a world of increased knowledge and awareness about nutrition and food for health; with this new government program of Health and Nutrition Examination surveys; and with the work of the American Health Foundation in trying to modify risk factors relating to disease, perhaps at last we are beginning to understand the value of preventive medicine and practice it ourselves. It's our best hope for the future.

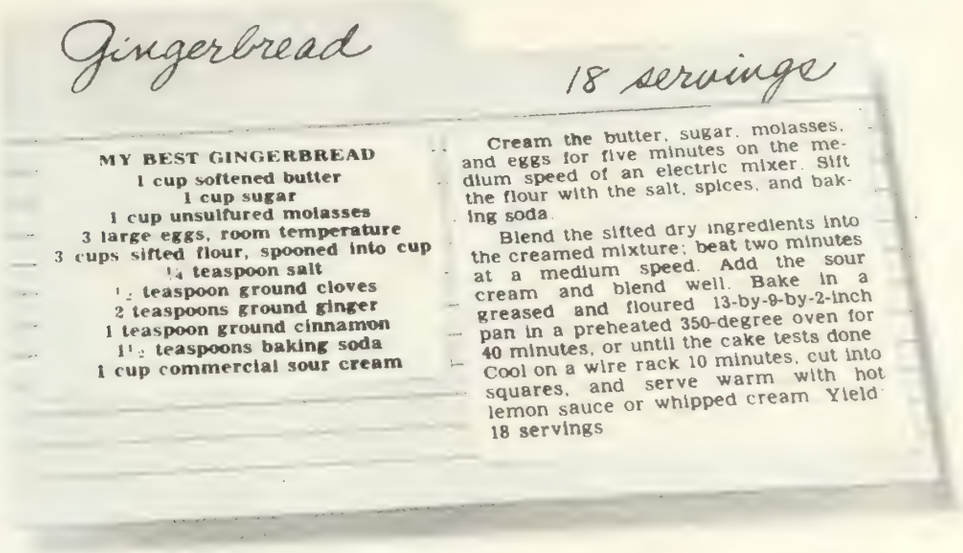
It's not because of our recipe for gingerbread



Actually, it's a superb recipe for gingerbread.

But ask our subscribers why they read The National Observer, and help with their gingerbread is not likely to appear at the top of the list.

What they're more apt to tell you is that The National Observer helps them "make sense" out of the news. Or it helps them "broaden" their outlooks. Or they might simply say it helps them "cope."

That's a lot closer to what you would find if you were a reader of The National Observer.

You'd become aware of the background details and inside stories that make the news meaningful. You'd gain a panoramic view of the world as it really is. And along the way, you'd probably find yourself a little more comfortable with what's happening these days.

Readers of The National Observer appreciate what it means to witness the "death" of a city like Saigon, as well as what it means to be the parents of a dying child.

They find a newly discovered cause (and possible cure) for cancer as interesting as the development of a safe IUD.

They can explain the constitutional "loophole" that enables Indira Gandhi to become a "democratic dictator," as well as startle people with the fact that despite soaring divorce statistics, two-thirds of all first marriages still manage to survive.

But readers of The National Observer get more than the cold, hard facts. They enjoy a cross-section of the "human condition" painted with honesty, sensitivity, and an eye to improving the quality of life. For instance:

- How an elderly couple brought new life to their marriage of 43 years.
- How to stop land swindles from bilking people of their hard-earned retirement savings.
- Why some perfectly sane people get trapped in mental institutions for years.
- Why there is so much violence among teenagers in "good middle-class" schools.

THE NATIONAL OBSERVER
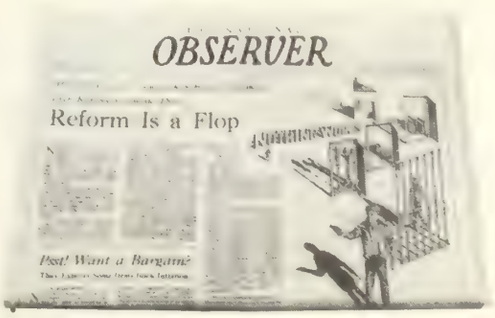
A recipe for living



Concerned as it is with people and their daily lives, The National Observer also brings you personal guides to thriftier, zestier living. It alerts you to current shopping "buys" and ways to make your home more comfortable. It reviews current films, books, music, art, even travel areas, so you can best plan and enjoy leisure time. It gives you how-to's on everything from better health to better bridge to better gingerbread.

And if you're feeling sad, you'll find something in The National Observer to cheer you. Whether it's a story about a singing dog named Buckypoo (he only sings to piano) or a great piece of grafitti (scrawled under the sign DON'T WRITE ON THIS WALL was the question, "You want maybe we should type?").

The National Observer is not a man's paper. It's not a woman's paper. It's a people paper. And we'd like to invite you to participate in it. Here's a marvelous opportunity to join us as a new subscriber at a very low cost and with no risk on your part.

All you need do is complete and return the attached postpaid reply card. Please send no money. We'll bill you later when we start sending you The National Observer. Then if you're unhappy, just write "cancel" on your invoice and you won't owe a cent.

So why not take advantage of this opportunity? After all, you have nothing to lose. In fact, look at what you've already gained . . . a darned good recipe for gingerbread.

...the ideal way to buy your presents from The Metropolitan Museum

Every three months—four times a year—the Museum will announce by mail remarkable new replicas—exact copies of Museum originals: sculpture, decorative objects, tableware, and ornaments.

The variety will be extraordinary: ancient jewelry in gold and silver; Oriental and European porcelain; early American glass in crystal and rare colors; bronze from Egypt, Greece, China, and the medieval world; silver, pewter, brass, and pottery from Colonial America.

These copies, often produced by the same techniques used for the originals, are made by artist-craftsmen working under the Museum's direct supervision. The care taken in production frequently limits the quantity, and the majority of replicas can be bought only by mail or at the Museum. Seaports and seafood feed the imagination on a leisurely New England weekend

By Nancy Richards

The look of the New England countryside in the fall is usually reason enough for a long weekend there. Then add to that the color of the leaves, the pleasure of buying fresh vegetables and late summer fruit from roadside stands. And the relaxation of stopping at a simple seafood restaurant for a long lunch of chowder, corn bread, and a broiled fish. Who needs more? This year, however, with everything since 1776 in special, loving focus, it would be a shame not to squeeze New England of every bit of history, architecture, and sea lore that she so richly offers. Choosing the coast and her seaports as a theme, I started off in New York with the first of the historic ports in miniature right under my nose. At 16 Fulton Street, on the East River, the South Street Seaport quarters several huge, floating antiques—a schooner, a sidewheeler, an old ferryboat, and the three-masted "Wavertree."

Once on the road, for me the major stop in Connecticut was in Mystic, in Rhode Island, Newport, in Massachusetts, New Bedford.

An outdoor maritime museum on the Mystic River at a point close to the Sound, Mystic Seaport is involved in preserving maritime crafts, gear, and art from the 18th and 19th centuries, when ships were the biggest industry of New England and much of the coastal population was either building them, fishing and whaling from them, or sailing them around the world in prosperous foreign trade. With the advent of the steam engine and in time of war they converted to other uses. Ships have always been built at Mystic; yachts and big fishermen still are. For about $3.50 admission you see a restoration, on about 40 acres along the river, that's filled with 19th-century commercial buildings found in a port, libraries of maritime topics, exhibits of small craft from all periods, and galleries full of handsome ship paintings—often of vessels built in Mystic. A beautiful wooden whaling ship, the Charles W. Morgan, restored as painstakingly as an old house would be, sits at the dock in the Henry B. DuPont Restoration Shipyard. The general store, built in 1850, was brought from Rhode Island along with its original inventory of ear trumpets, hoop-skirt foundations, tack, and canned goods now over 100 years old was a place to play checkers, n letters, and meet one's friends hear the news and it still radia the same cozy atmosphere. SUPERDOME IN NEW ORLEANS

Defining the pleasant proportions of three-story historic New Orleans and looming largely over it, the new Louisiana Superdome will be to that state what the sum of Carnegie Hall, Shea Stadium, and Madison Square Garden plus the Hilton Hotel is to New York. Like Houston's Astrodome, the Superdome is covered by a clear span (no posts) roof, the diameter of which is longer than two football fields. The area of the roof is almost 10 acres or the size of a small farm. It is completely air-conditioned and a six-sided system of television screens (26 by 22 feet apiece) suspended near the dome top gives every seat in the house both the experience of one's own eyes and a huge replay monitor. Specially designed to resist even hurricane gusts of up to 200 miles per hour, the Superdome is well worth visiting for a football game, a spectacular show, or a rock concert, even in the fall hurricane season.

"PRAYING JOHN" PLATE

The portrait on my plate of an old gentleman kneeling is labeled "Praying John, Ellis, Kansas." But the reverse side indicates it was made by A. Mulheim in Austria. Who was "Praying John" and what is the history of this plate?

W.W.O.—Niagara Falls, N.Y.

Praying John Horrigan, character of the little town of Ellis, Kans. in the 1870s became a living legend because of a ritual he performed three times daily, every day of his life: He fell to his knees in the tall prairie grass and prayed. A. Mulheim, a Swiss watchmaker and Ellis merchant, persuaded Horrigan to pose for the picture that was then used on the handpainted dishes imported from Austria and Germany.

VICTORIAN CHAIR

How old is my folding chair, and can you tell me anything about its style?

M.M.—Phoenix, Ariz.

Your Victorian chair with bamboo turnings probably dates from the 1870s. Some feel that "bamboo" furniture belongs to the Eastlake style, though it does not relate to his theories expressed in Hints on Household Taste. George Hunzinger, New York City manufacturer, propagated the popularity of folding chairs.

BAVARIAN DISH

From my rough sketch of the mark on a small, heart-shaped dish I own, can you give me any information about when and where it was made?—V.H.A. Washington, D.C.

Your small dish was made before 1891 at a porcelain factory that was started in 1881 at Arzberg, Bavaria by Carl Schumann. This explains the distinguishing initials ACS on your mark.

From the picture and marks I've drawn, can you identify my silver salt and spoon?

F.G.—LaCrosse, Wis.

NEW ENGLAND SALT AND SPOON

Your sterling silver open salt and spoon are of American origin, probably of very early 20th-century manufacture. The silver open salt was made by the Webster Company of North Attleboro, Mass., and the silver spoon was made by the Manchester Manufacturing Company of Providence, R.I.

The potion of love.

(and how it all began 450 years ago)

We know she was young. Blonde. Beautiful. And widowed.

But did she create the original Amaretto di Saronno as a thank you for her portrait? Or was it a gift to express affection for Bernardino Luini, the artist who painted her in 1525?

History has lost the answers—even her name—leaving nothing but Luini's stunning fresco in the Sanctuary of Santa Maria delle Grazie in Saronno, Italy. And...

...her romantic, intriguing liqueur. We still like to think Amaretto di Saronno is a liqueur that inspired a great love. It's something to wonder about tonight as you sip its intriguing, provocative bouquet.

Discover the many other ways to use Italy's rare liqueur of love in our free recipe booklet. Just write: Foreign Vintages, Inc., 98 Cutter Mill Road, Great Neck, 11021, New York, Dept. 001.

Levolor Riviera blinds come in 107 extraordinary colors. Geoffrey Beene liked one.

SEND 50¢ FOR A COPY OF "WINDOW MAGIC" TO LEVOLOR LORENTZEN, INC., HOBOKEN, N.J. 07030. TO FIND NEAREST DEALER, CALL 800-447-4700. IN ILL., 800-322-4400. BOTH TOLL FREE.

If you had to pick the fashion designer who invents the most unusual colors, it would probably be Geoffrey Beene. But it's not surprising that he designed an outfit in the exact shade of a Levolor Riviera blind. Because Levolor's color chart reads like a roster of designer colors. Dozens of luscious, exciting colors, ranging from gingham prints to polished aluminum (shown here, Pink #230).*

Of course, with blinds as in fashion, color is important. But style is equally important. And Levolor blinds are beautifully styled. The slats are thin, and elegant. Instead of an awkward tilt cord, Levolor uses the Magic Wand,™ a transparent rod that actually adds to the beauty of the blind.

Levolor blinds are also the most practical window covering yet discovered. They require virtually no maintenance. And the right choice of color can even cut down your air conditioning or heating load. (If there were a Riviera in every window, there might not be an energy crisis.)

Levolor Riviera fashion blinds. If Geoffrey Beene liked one, you probably will, too.

FRENCH VITRINE

Your vitrine, intended for the display of curios, mainly reflects the influence of the Louis XV and Louis XVI styles. It is probably of French manufacture, dating perhaps from the latter 19th-century when the vitrine was de rigueur in every fashionable Victorian parlor.

AMERICAN CAST-IRON BANK

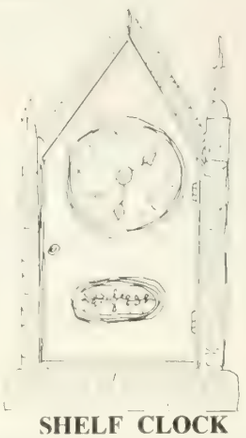
Who made my bank? I've been told it's very old and quite collectible. What makes it so? L.R.—Pottsville, Pa.

Your mechanical cast-iron bank, patented May 28, 1890 by John H. Bowen of Philadelphia and made by J & E Stevens Co. of Cromwell, Conn., is collectible. Rarity, attractiveness, and spectacular actions are important factors to collectors of banks. In your model, the clown rising on his hands and spinning around the globe has great eye appeal.

My vase looks Oriental but the bottom has Zsolnay and Pécs on it. Can you tell me anything about its origin and style? R.B. Jr.—Fayetteville, N.C.

Your reticulated vase illustrates the exotic Persian influence prominent in the work of Zsolnay of Pécs in Hungary about the 1880s. This kind of lace-like openwork, also found in Chinese Ming vases, was often called by the Chinese "Kuei" or "devil's work," because its delicacy seemed to them beyond the realm of human skill.

DEVIL'S WORK VASE



SHELF CLOCK

Our shelf clock was made by the Gilbert Mfg. Co., case patented by Geo. B. Owen. Can you tell us more? J.B.T.—Annapolis Royal, Nova Scotia

Your clock is the "Winsted Gothic Extra" model, probably made between 1868 and 1871. This model, in an 1878 price list, was sold at that time for $5.75. George B. Owen was a designer who became very influential in the Gilbert clock interests. The Gilbert Manufacturing Co. was active 1866-1871, when it was succeeded by the William L. Gilbert Clock Co.

IMPORTED FROM THE PEOPLE WHO BROUGHT YOU ART, HISTORY, CULTURE AND SEX.

From Europe. All those deliciously tempting tastes you've acquired a taste for. Four European liqueurs brought to you by Leroux exactly as you remember them.

Remember Amaretto? From Torino in Italy—where people sit in cafes and ogle each other. Amaretto di Torino with a mysterious hint of almonds and apricots. With coffee or in coffee or any time.

And Cognac with Orange. It tempted you in France. With coffee, or dessert, and on Duck à l'Orange. Now sip it at home.

And the taste of those succulent wild Danube strawberries, Fraise de Bois. We brought it back for you.

And the joy of Denmark's Tivoli Garden. It's all summed up in Cherry Karise. One of the happiest experiences a flavor connoisseur could ever have.

PEWTER

It speaks in patinaed tones to everyone, softly and with affection. It commands respect and admiration because of its tradition but it demands nothing. You can appreciate it for its beauty and yet be touched by the fact that you can touch it, wash it, fondle it. But, what had been merely a tradition, is now an innovation. In the sculptural figurines of our American wildlife; in the whimsy of the dentist at work upon his patient; in the carefree, rollicking approach to children at play, this collection of Hummelwerk pewter is uniquely true to its metal but shows the mettle of a whole new approach that is distinctly of our time, yet with the hand craftsmanship of the ages. The pewter jewelry (and there is a vast selection), has the look of museum pieces but the lark of wearability. Nothing can harm its beauty. It begs to be worn daily, by the male and female of all ages. Our pewter is not a genuine imitation, plated, filled anything. It's Pewter!

ern Alps in the South Island of New Zealand, with Mt Cook prominent. Mt Cook – height, 12,349 feet.

The search for the fabulous fleece of the Drysdale Ram takes you to the other side of the world.

To New Zealand. The Land of the Long White Cloud. The land of the Drysdale Ram. The only home the Drysdale Ram has known. Because the Drysdale is a special breed of sheep developed by the famous wool men of New Zealand.

Drysdale. Bred to provide the fabled fleece long searched for by carpet makers of many lands. A fleece genetically developed to provide in even greater measure the natural advantages of pure virgin wool.

To fabulous Bremworth carpets, the Drysdale Ram endows greater pile strength, extra resilience, longer wear. And that's what you inherit in the dense, plush-pile carpet that is Bremworth Accolade.

From faraway New Zealand, 100% pure wool carpet sired by the Ram called Drysdale.

The search finishes beautifully.

THE ACCOLADE CARPET BY BREMWORTH

FABULOUS CARPETS FROM NEW ZEALAND

From the Drysdale flock we culled the best. The Bremworth Ram!

From the Bremworth Ram and his progeny you inherit the fabulous Bremworth Ambassador Carpet.

The Bremworth Ambassador Carpet. Take a hard look at its pile. Long and shaggy, with a deep and echoing colour. All the warmth and splendour of pure virgin wool. And with a secret that sets it apart from all the others.

The secret is that Bremworth have helped to breed a sheep whose fleece combines those qualities most prized in a carpet – sensuous softness and rugged resilience. This breed of sheep is called the Drysdale. From its flock we culled the best. A very special animal. The Bremworth Ram.

Selected New Zealand sheep stations rear and shear his progeny for exclusive supply to the Bremworth looms. No other carpet manufacturer in the world can claim to have genetically perfected a wool exclusively for carpets; nor to have the ability to control quality from the very inception of production. That's why the Bremworth Ambassador carpet is exceptional.

Its texture, vibrant tone and deep opulence charge any room with excitement and luxury.

Because of the Bremworth Ram, the Ambassador is as resilient as it is beautiful. Resilient not only against wear, but against fade. The Ambassador will live with you for a long, long time without losing either its heart or its colour. It comes in a range of rather special shades. And, we're afraid, at a very special price. But what would you expect for an almost magical carpet from the other side of the world? A carpet whose fabulous fleece decends from the pride of the Drysdale flock, the original Bremworth Ram.

Built to take almost anything you can dish out.

An exclusive 9-Year Service Contract on its incredibly durable interior.
After nine years and millions of dollars of research and development we can make this unprecedented promise:

In addition to the General Electric warranty, if the PermaTuf™ tub or door liner should fail to contain water due to a manufacturing defect such as cracking, chipping, peeling or rusting within the nine (9)-year contract period (ending ten years from purchase date), General Electric will repair or replace the tub or door WITHOUT CHARGE for either PARTS or LABOR unless failure is due to misuse or abuse.

This Service Contract applies to dishwashers with PermaTuf tub and door liner installed and retained for home use within the 48 contiguous states or the District of Columbia. Not applicable to Alaska, Hawaii, Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, Canal Zone or Puerto Rico.

Plus a full 30-Day Money-Back Warranty.
Buy your Potscrubber II, 950 or 1050, dishwasher from a participating dealer in the 48 states or D.C. and give it normal care. If you are not completely satisfied (and you'll be the judge), notify the dealer from whom you purchased the dishwasher within 30 days and present your certificate. He will take it back and refund the money.

The General Electric Potscrubber II dishwasher.

It can even save you energy.
GE has a Rinse and Hold Cycle that rinses loose soil from partial loads and lets you postpone turning on your dishwasher till you have a full load.

Besides this, the Potscrubber II Dishwasher has a Power Saver Drying Option. When you press the "Heat Off" button, the dishes dry naturally by their residual heat.

A few words about sound and space.
The Potscrubber II Dishwasher is remarkably quiet, thanks to its glass fiber insulation.

It's also got a door opening that's a full 3½ inches larger than some competitive models. Even with all its space, it will fit right in where your old dishwasher was.

And because you sometimes have very tall glasses to wash in the top rack or very large platters to wash in the bottom one, there's a Dial-A-Level® Rack which can be adjusted up or down.

GE Servicemen don't like to keep a lady waiting.
When you buy GE, you get Customer Care® Service. Our pledge that wherever you are, or go, in the 48 contiguous states, you'll find a qualified GE serviceman nearby. Should you ever need one.

Accept Good Housekeeping's "strict editorial judgment" for Potscrubber II dishwasher performance.
They gave it their Consumers' "Limited Warranty Seal."

It will help you out of some tough scrapes.
Before you put in your baked-on pots and pans, just tip off the larger scraps. There's no pre-rinsing or pre-scraping at all. A Soft Food Disposer pulverizes the remaining scraps and flushes them away.

And the GE Potscrubber II Dishwasher will clean them thoroughly, even with a full load.

And take advantage of a special limited time offer. This historic pewter plate free when you buy your 950 or 1050 Potscrubber II from your GE dealer.
9¾ inches in diameter, a bicentennial collector's item, a limited edition registered by serial number with International Silver Company. With a retail value of $75.

But hurry. This special offer from General Electric is limited.

Bird Solid Vinyl Siding.
Its real beauty is the way it saves you money.

In today's economy, Bird Solid Vinyl Siding isn't just the most beautiful choice for your home... it's the most sensible. Because with Bird solid vinyl, you eliminate the need for expensive periodic repainting. Your home investment is protected, for years and years to come.

Bird Solid Vinyl Siding can't show wear or scratches like wood or metal with their thin surface coatings and it never needs painting because it's solid color from front to back.

In fact, houses covered with Bird solid vinyl a dozen years ago still look new... and you can expect they will a dozen years from now.

Bird solid vinyl can't dent, rust, creak or rattle like metal. It can't attract electricity or spoil TV reception.

It looks like beautiful freshly-painted wood. But it can't peel, flake, blister, rot or be damaged by termites like wood.

Only Bird makes woodgrain-textured BRANDED® Vinyl Siding, shown here, with the distinctive vinyl-on-vinyl color accents... today's most-wanted style.

It's just one of Bird's beautiful ways to save money. Get all the details on the complete Bird solid vinyl line by mailing in our coupon today.

RANGE
all while removing smoke and odor.

The Jenn Air Grill-Range is a completely different kind of range. A range that can change its top. Because it has an exclusive built-in ventilator that whisks smoke and odors down into the range and outdoors, before they can escape into your kitchen.

So you can grill on top of the range. Or in seconds you can add an automatically revolving rotisserie. A shish kebaber. A non-stick griddle that can cook up to a pound of bacon. A french fryer to deep-fry donuts or shrimp. You can even have a choice of 4 glass or 4 conventional electric burners with just a flick of a cartridge.

And if you like to grill, you can sear delicious outdoor flavor into steaks, burgers, lobster, chops, ham, chicken, even corn-on-the-cob. Without the deep knee bends, the greasy spatter, the messy clean up of broiling. The Jenn Air Grill-Range. It changes to suit your taste.

NOTES OF A HAPPY HOUSEKEEPER

Little chores made easier

A versatile address file . . . wheeled luggage carrier . . . new paint remover and furniture polish . . . easy way to dust piano strings . . . new kind of air freshener . . . and other panaceas for household problems

By Mary Elizabeth Falter

I spent a rainy morning last week transposing my out-of-date address book into a neat little card file. I think this system works better than a book, because if there are changes to be made, it's a simple matter to pull out the card and make a new one. It's also possible to jot down special information, such as birthdays, anniversaries, summer addresses. I plan to make a separate local file, so that if we have a fairly large party involving written invitations, I can just go through the box and pull out the names I want.

Tom keeps a useful travel address book. He records the names of people, shops, restaurants, and services in the places we visit most often, as well as other special information. His book also contains the names of friends that we might want to write and important telephone numbers like those of our bank, broker, lawyer, doctor, pharmacy, optician, and other emergency numbers.

Many airports have curbside check-in for larger pieces of luggage, which simplifies the whole procedure enormously. But carry-on luggage can be a problem too—somehow all those little things you can't live without that you jam into the carry-ons at the last minute seem to weigh a ton by the time you walk through the long corridors of the airport, board your plane, and sink into your seat. We've found a little, wheeled luggage carrier that handles small bags very efficiently. Called Kart-a-Bag, it has a telescoping handle and it folds into a neat zippered case when not in use. When we arrive at the airport, we just unzip it, attach the slender handle to the little ledge that forms the base, and lash our two small bags—one atop the other—in place with the adjustable stretch-cord that fastens securely to a special hook. One of us pulls it along through the airport with little or no effort. It even rides the escalator smoothly. The base has 3-inch rubber wheels and stubby tip-proof legs that keep it steady when not in motion. The Kart-a-Bag is available in three models and you can get a folding container that converts it into a shopping or utility cart.

We've used a marvelous paint remover called Zip-Strip. It easily and quickly removes paint, old varnish, and stain from furniture, woodwork, boats, or any painted surface. It's nonflammable, but should be used in a well-ventilated place and not for prolonged periods of time. However, in most cases you don't need much time. Two of us applied it to a chest of drawers in about twenty minutes. Tom did the chest and I the drawers, spreading on the Zip-Strip rather thickly with putty knives. In about half an hour we were able to scrape the paint off down to the bare wood. I have even used it on badly crusted pans and broilers and Tom has resurrected hopelessly stiff paintbrushes by soaking them in Zip-Strip. It's made by the Star Bronze Company.

I'm still devoted to Republic Freezette's freezing containers that are useful for all sorts of things besides freezing. The wide variety of sizes and shapes—round, tall, short, square, rectangular, pie-wedge-shaped—makes them ideal storage boxes for use throughout the house, as well as in the freezer and refrigerator. Tom uses them for nails, screws, and small tools in his workshop. I use them for sorting and storing things in the kitchen, like skewers and the smaller parts of the meat grinder, for sewing supplies, and for arranging neatly all the little items that usually clutter the top bureau drawer. The new interlocking tops on the round containers are splendid, and all the containers are so sturdy they can be boiled or frozen and can go into the dishwasher without losing their shape.

I've found that every houseplant has a personality all its own when it comes to being watered. Some like to be lightly watered frequently and sprayed with a fine mist, while others—dwarf English ivy, for instance—seem to prefer having their leaves washed every few days under gently running water. Some plants should almost dry out between waterings (grape ivy and Swiss ivy are good examples), while others like to be kept damp but never flooded. This means a daily patrol with the watering can and sprayer, but it's worth it. If a plant really wilts from an accidental lack of water, the best way to revive it is to root soak it in a deep bowl of water for a few hours. This agrees particularly with flowering plants like chrysanthemums and begonias. We once kept a single white hydrangea bloom fresh and pretty for six weeks by soaking it about every third day.

I came across an entirely new kind of air freshener the other day and it's perfect for our pantry, which is beyond the reach of the kitchen ventilating fan and tends to trap cooking odors. Instead of a spray or wick, this freshener is a solid cake and comes in a little ventilated picture frame about 5 inches square. It's available in three scents. You can put any picture you want inside the frame, so we used a botanical print in our lime green frame. Solid Air Freshener, which is made by American Housewares, has done a good job of sweetening the air in our little cul-de-sac.

We sent for the piano tuner the other day—for the first time in two years. He found our old grand piano to be in reasonably good shape, although he does have to come back and make some repairs on the case. I asked him what to do about the thick layer of dust accumulated inside the piano and over the strings. He told us to take the vacuum and reverse the hose, gently blowing one small area at a time. Sucking up the dust with the business end could cause damage, he said.

We've tried a new furniture polish, Colgate's Wood Crafter, which we think is one of the best we've ever used. It comes in the usual spray can, but unlike some of its competitors, a little goes a long way. Made of a unique combination of carnuba wax and montan wax, it sprays on and wipes off, leaving furniture really clean and enriched. It also comes in a paste wax, which will shine wall paneling, plastic and tile surfaces, slate, marble, and stainless steel. Not for floors, however.

Great American Naturals

By Paula Rice Jackso

What are the Great American Naturals? Whatever's real. Polished, bleached woods, butcher block, peeled pine, ash burl. Wicker, bamboo, rattan. Handwoven fabrics like linen and cotton and natural colors—wheat, rice-paper white, or saddle browns and coppery earth reds. Natural textures like rough woven sisal, or soft, smooth wools. And the style can come from Colonial roots, on its way to the most modern and innovative American designs. Here's a sampling of great American decorating naturals ready to buy at stores across the country:

Patchwork suede in three colors covers a rectangular sectional seating system that's plumped with lots of tufted pillows. The suedes are in two shades of brown—a nutty walnut, creamy mocha—and a chamois the color of iced coffee. Side section is 99 inches long with a center section 60½ inches long, all 30 inches high. Sofa by Flair at Woodward & Lothrop, Washington, D.C.

Pale-finished pine freestanding pewter rack with four shelves has an 18th-century, slightly rustic flavor. Two top shelves have protective rails across the front which are flush with the rack's sides, so if you wish to put two together there is one, uninterrupted line of continuous shelf. The rack measures 81 inches tall, 44 inches wide, 31½ inches deep—deep enough for a wide variety of collectibles. It's from the "Continental Pine" collection by Century Furniture at Joske's, Houston.

A new all-cotton fabric collection called "Sturbridge Village" is derived from documented fabrics in the Old Sturbridge Village Museum in Sturbridge, Mass. One that's particularly bright and lively is "Fitch House Stencil," a red and blue stenciled flower on a creamy white ground. Use it to cover a chaise longue for an especially fresh look. Another is "Lucinda," a millefleur pattern of blue, yellow, and green on a chocolate brown ground. The fabrics are available by the yard and have been made into comforters, throw pillows, napkins, placemats, and lampshades. The fabrics, treated to resist stains and spills, are by Waverly and at B. Altman, New York.

A natural oak folding table with storage for six folding chairs inside its base is a lifesaver for small spaces. The table has two drop leaves so that it measures 20½ inches wide folded, 70½ inches wide opened. The chair seats are upholstered with cushiony polyurethane and the table has a sleek washable finish. All are by Moredi at Abraham & Straus, Brooklyn.

The "Maryland Colony Collection" by Brandt Cabinet Works was done in collaboration with the Maryland Historical Society and consists of some fifteen pieces produced from the originals at the Hammond-Harwood House in Annapolis and the Baltimore Museum of Art. A pole fire screen standing 57¾ inches high, has a piece of needlework inside its almost square frame that is the same design as the original. It's also removable so that you may insert your own work. The screen raises and lowers and was originally used to regulate the amount of heat coming out of the fireplace. Another piece in the collection is a mahogany, revolving, tilt-top tea table with delicate inlay work on its top. It stands on three legs and is 28½ inches high. The original pieces were finished with dark, earth-ground colors craftsmen mixed with oil and rubbed into the wood before applying a coat of beeswax. These pieces are finished in a considerably lighter shade as the colors have been ground to a powder and have been mixed with water which allows the wood grain to come through clearly. Most of the "Maryland Colony Collection" is at Woodward & Lothrop.

A rich, densely woven cotton bedspread with deep trapunto ribbing around the hem is new from Nettle Creek. In white only, it is a throw-style spread with a nubbly, handwoven look. Called "Casa Real," it's at Bayles Furniture, Rochester, N.Y.

An unusual upholstery fabric for club chairs, a sofa, or armchair —real wool melton. The fabrics, in plaids, solids, and stripes have a strong masculine look to them

These days it looks like you can't be certain of anything. Prices rise daily. Quality apparently no longer counts. And pride in workmanship seems to be a thing of the past. But even in the midst of all this doubt, there is still one thing you can be sure of. You can still count on the comfort, the quality, the craftsmanship of La-Z-Boy. And we can back that claim up. With a name that's the best known in the business. Because you've made us the largest chair company in the business. And for good reason.

Take our La-Z-Rocker, for example. It gives customers their money's worth. It's made with the finest materials. Like a wide variety of handsome Dupont Nylon fabrics. This chair has a specially designed mechanism that makes it easy to turn. It also features rocker motion and independent back action that lets you pick exactly the kind of comfort that suits you. When you see it, you'll know why our customers are La-Z-Boy fans for life.

So when you're in the market for comfort, put your money in a La-Z-Boy.

that's very comfortable, clean, tailored, and sportsmanlike. The colors are soft grays, heather blues, cranberry, and forest green. Upholstered furniture by Hickory Chair at B. Altman.

Early Canadiana is represented by two groups of North American country furniture. One is the "Seigneurie Collection" and the other, the "County Museum Collection." Both are by Simmons and were researched by Jean Palardy, O.C., a well-known author and lecturer on early Canadian life. While both groups are spare, "Seigneurie" is the slightly more formal of the two, being derived from French furniture of the 1800s. Details are crucial to this group—the hardware has been imported and the chair seats woven from natural sea grasses. "County Museum" is more casual and the pieces have been faithfully copied from those in the Wellington County Museum in Wellington, Ontario. Whereas practically no nails are used in the "Seigneurie" group, square-headed steel nails are used here as they were plentiful in 1870 when the originals were made. One piece is a spoon rack which holds seven spoons and has a small spice drawer below. Another piece is a 52-inch-wide dry sink with two doors and a little drawer at the upper left for small bar or gardening tools. An optional metal liner protects the wood from ice and water spills. All the pieces in both collections are made of Canadian pine in a natural or slightly darker finish at Higbee's, Cleveland.

"Nation of Nations" is the name of a beautiful new collection of sheets, bedspreads, and bath towels. America is the melting pot for English, French, German, and Spanish textile designs found in the Smithsonian Institution. Adaptations for these designs, most of which are floral, are a part of the American Colonial tradition and blend beautifully with both traditional and modern furniture. One is "Flower Tree"—a pattern for a bedspread, of a flowering tree centered amid branches and growing from a stylized base. "Scalloped Chintz," its coordinated pattern for sheets and pillowcases, is a design of flowers and sheaves of wheat in a motif of successive mounds. These are the contribution to the collection from England, the designs having been traced to India. Everything is by Fieldcrest at Rich's, Atlanta.

Furniture maker Kip Cobur has done a series of coffee table made from stripped, bleached and polished tree trunks. The trunks have been halved, thei branches removed and reinserte to provide supporting legs. Th look is truly that of a tree, thoug it is a table. A double-ringed Wis consin cheese mold of butche block the color of maple syrup i the frame for a mirror that woul look as great in a pine-paneled kitchen as it would on a white washed stucco wall. Mirror an tables are at Abraham & Straus.

Four chairs make up the "Grea American Homes Collection"— homes of Presidents Washington Jefferson, Adams, and Jackson Each is stenciled in warm color against a bayberry green painte finish and signed by its artist. 197 has produced "Mount Vernon" and "Monticello" and in 197 "Old House" and "Hermitage" wil follow. The chairs are in a limited numbered set of fours by the Hitchcock Chair Co. and at Edward Keith, Kansas City, Mo.

A fantasy of clouds, hills, an trees in a rough woven cotton fabric designed by Jack Lenor Larsen covers all the pillows and cushions of a semicircular sectional sofa system. Outside, the sofa is upholstered in a solid persimmon cotton velvet as are the section bases; the inside cushions are patterned in umbered oranges, gold and soft taupe. Very colorful Two "quarter-of-the-pie"—shaped wedges serve as ottomans. The sectional sofa is by Flair and may be seen at Bayles Furniture.

Southwest American Indian-inspired designs make an interesting group of handsculpted, lighted hanging planters and ceramic lamps. The lights in the planters are "grow" lights which also happen to spotlight them. One planter is an earthy amber color with hanging straps of hemp interlaced with large terra-cotta beads. Another planter is one large shell with macramé hanging straps and smaller shells entwined through them. "Shells with White" is a 30-inch wide, 40-inch high mirror completely framed with over 2,000 shells collected on the beaches of the Pacific, placed on a wood frame for stability. All at The Broadway, Los Angeles.

A beautiful recessed scalloped shell is revealed on opening the front of a magnificent, 92-inch-high slant front desk and bookcase. It's made of cherry solids and veneers and has three carved spiral finials at its top and crown. Up top is the bookcase with adjustable shelves and tiny drawers, and cubby holes. A small five-sided Shaker table, also made of cherry veneers, has a five-sided tabletop that looks exactly like a star, and an eight-legged spiderleg table made of a rare, buttery curly maple offers another example of the meticulous detail and craftsmanship that attends these modern reproductions of 18th-century pieces. Three sliding silver trays and drawers that lock are a part of a yew wood sideboard. Yew wood has a lovely, soft, golden color and is extremely hard and durable. The piece is long, 80½ inches, and narrow, 17½ inches deep. Four thin, absolutely straight legs carry it well. All these are by The Wright Table Company and may be seen and ordered at Woodward & Lothrop.

The natural straw color and rough texture of sisal matting contrast well with the wood floors, woodwork, and wood furniture. Meier & Frank, Portland, Ore. has a group of sisal patterns by Otto Gerdau.

Clean, fluid curves of natural rattan peel and split rattan wrapped around solid mahogany frames make up a 42-inch-wide étagère. Clear glass shelves lie neatly inside the curves letting the eye wander over its graceful lines. The étagère is from a group called "Sika," which includes a stacking unit, shelf console, and shelf corner so that an entire system of gently curving multi-level shelves can be put together. By Design Institute America at Strawbridge & Clothier, Philadelphia.

Bamboo, cane, and natural cork all framed with chrome for new bathroom countertop accessories . . . a rectangular basket, a soap dish with an acrylic liner, a cup holder, tissue box, and boutique tissue box holders by Style Built, also at Strawbridge & Clothier.

The natural power and clout of jewel-brilliant color has been put into a new collection of rugs designed by Wolf Bauer. Concentric sweeps of vermilion, scarlet, fuchsia, and purple come together in "Parfait," and shades of cerise, putty, and a rust brown shape an abstract blossom called "Serendipity." They have a pile of Acrilan and modacrylic fiber and may be ordered for size at Jordan Marsh, Boston. The "Art Deco" rugs are by Concepts International.

Finished log posts and open, diagonal dowels are the frames of a sofa, chair, and ottoman—all of it a light, peeled pine. The dowels are the back and side supports of the sofa and chair and give them a light, airy, but solid look. There is also an armchair with a leather seat and back pad that rests on a finished log frame. Taut leather armrest straps make the arms. Upholster the sofa cushions in a fresh white Haitian cotton for an ensemble of pine, leather, and cotton that's informal and very relaxed. The log post and dowel furniture was designed by Milo Baughman for Thayer Coggin and may be seen at Joske's.

Here are two new alternatives for collector's rugs that have a wonderful handcrafted look. The first are imported from Ireland by Weinberger and are basically geometric interpretations of southwestern American designs. The colors tend toward natural mineral colors such as iron red and slate blue. These are at B. Altman. The second group, "Pow Wow," are hand-hooked, washable modacrylic rugs colored in the more traditional black, white, and red with brown colorings of the flat woven, antique Indian rugs. The rugs are by A. Leon Capel & Sons and may be ordered in standard sizes at Joske's.

Two pieces for the bedroom in smooth, polished walnut and classic Shaker design: a five-drawer chest with small rounded drawer knobs and a mirror with four tiny knobs at its base just like the knobs of the drawers, though miniature. The mirror attaches to a wall peg (like a coat hook) through one of two holes in a walnut "tab" behind its top, so that the mirror may be raised or lowered. By Elmore Re productions at Rich's.

A rich, dense, roughwoven linen look comes from three upholstery cloths that are all rayon. "Agria Fleece," "Utrera Linen," and "Ilone Alabaster" are each 54 inches wide in shades of sand, wheat, and cream. They're by Van Waters and Rogers at The Broadway.

Elm, the color of polished ivory and strong, supermodern rectilinear lines describe the "Patterns 36" collection, brand new this fall. The base of a glass-topped dining table and the frames of four dining chairs are built on full inch-thick slats of elm with full inch separations between them. The effect is clean and straightforward. Base and deck units as well as door panels on cabinets and chests have complementary right and left 90-degree angle plank design so an entire wall system can be put together that is geometrically balanced. "Patterns 36" by Founders Furniture is at Joske's and Jordan Marsh.

Split rattan, naturally finished, halved, and laid flat on its side gives two tables a surface that's gently rounded. The reeds are cut and placed on a solid mahogany frame in such a way as to make a large, elongated "X" in the center of each—a 28-inch-high sofa back table and a 38-inch-square cocktail table. The legs of the table are diagonally placed which gives them both a slightly hexagonal look. They're from the "Makati" group by Design Institute America at Strawbridge & Clothier.

Only flowers with naturally bright colors are used in dried flower arrangements at Eighteenth Century Bouquet in Princeton, N.J. Arrangements can be mailed in special papier-mâché boxes, then transferred to a 6-inch bowl or you can have a box of flowers, grasses and other ingredients to take home to work on. Mrs. Jean Clark, author of The Art of Colonial Flower Arranging (Pyne Press) and owner of Eighteenth Century Bouquet, will give demonstrations of flower arranging at Bishop and O'Neill September 24-27. Her book contains about 20 designs.

Oak and knotty oak herringbone parquetry cover top of 88-inch-wide oval dining extension table. Ladderbacked knotty oak dining chairs polished to a rich butterscotch complete group. Herringbone parquetry with oak mitered door panels is from the "Candlewood" collection by Century Furniture at J. H. Harvey, White Plains, N.Y.

Pen and ink drawings, which look as if they were really embroidered instead of sketched, patter a new upholstery fabric that's a cotton. It's a country scene of hill and trees, like toile, but muc more modern. Unusual colors, to —a sunset orange with red, or slat blue and a lighter blue, or the mos dramatic, emerald green wit black. The cloth is slightly glazed 48 inches wide, and called "Amer ica the Beautiful," by Bloomcraft.

You can design your own fire tools, book ends, door latches, and irons, cabinet hinges, wall brack ets, almost anything that can be hand-forged in steel or bronze. Steve Kayne, artist and blacksmith, can help you. Traditional shapes such as a heart, or a shepherd's crook, or an omega can be made into a set of beautiful tools, or you might choose a letter of the alphabet instead. Latches, hinges, and brackets are finished in Colonial rusts or flat lacquer black. Write to Steve Kayne Hand Forged Hardware, Smithtown, N.Y. 11787.

A classic of American Colonial design is a mahogany folding card table designed by Duncan Phyfe, the original of which is in the Coke-Garrett House in Williamsburg, Va. The table has a cloverleaf top and sits on a central, acanthus carved pedestal and three brass lion's-paw feet. When the top is closed, the table fits flat against a wall; opened, two feet slide forward to support the tabletop. The back crest rail of a sofa from the Federal era has inlaid bird's-eye maple inlay. "Federal" is new group of perfectly made, beautiful reproductions of pieces from the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation. All made by Kittinger. A large group of the "Federal" collection may be seen at Bishop and O'Neill, Ardmore, Pa.

Ash and ash veneers in a soft driftwood finish make a 54-inch-high clothes chest. It has six drawers and three swing-out doors for shirt and sweater storage. The drawer pulls have the look of antique brass and are recessed in their brass cases in much the same style as the traditional campaign chests. This one is from the Circa 76 Collection by Henredon and it is available at Meier & Frank. ■

We borrowed an old idea and came up with a new metal.

The old idea was sand casting. A craft perfected before the American Revolution. The new metal, by Wilton Armetale,® is actually a marriage of ten different metals. Which is what gives our dinnerware and serving pieces the look and feel of traditional pewter. Armetale metal won't chip, crack, or break. You can cook in it. And eat and drink from it. Every Armetale piece is cast in its own sand mold and painstakenly finished in the colonial tradition.

To make sure you're getting the real Armetale brand, look for the RWP "Touchmark" on every piece. Because today's Armetale collectible is sure to become tomorrow's heirloom. Write us for the store nearest you that sells Armetale gift and dinnerware.

summer palaces of Europe. Curiously, they were built one right next to the other on Bellevue Avenue, and for years the public's fascination with them has eclipsed other aspects of Newport's history. With all the construction going on in the 1890s the atmosphere must have been like that of a gold-rush town except that these were stone mansions that stand undiminished today and are open to the public. Other big houses are still owned by descendants of the original summer colony, some of whom now live in Newport year round.

Today Newport is a spectacular digest of American architecture of every period. The seafood restaurants are good and historic taverns still serve lunch and dinner. Visitors arrive by boat and car and if the America's Cup races are going on, the restaurants and nightclubs up and down the wharves are filled with the crews of boats from all over the world. In the fall, reservations are easily had at several motels and hotels with marinas that sit close together along the wharves. The Sheraton Inn on Goat Island is marvelous if you come by boat. The Treadway Inn, also near the water, is a gray-shingled motel within walking distance of Bowen's Wharf with its nightclubs and restaurants, antique shops, and the best of the Colonial house museums. The Chase and Chase bookshop on Thames Street sells a blue paperback guide to Newport that gives history, tiny pictures of houses to look for with a description, and a glossary of architectural terms in case you've forgotten about gambrel roofs. For me, the first stop was Trinity Church built in 1725 by Richard Munday. Said to have been copied from pictures of Christopher Wren's London churches, it is also meant to be influenced by Boston's Old North Church which was built about the same time. Newporters are still fond of getting married here. Simple, serene Colonial houses, some as early as 1690, are all around Trinity Church. Many of them have been restored and now are for rent as part of a program Doris Duke's Newport Restoration Foundation has for salvaging what's left that's good in the Colonial section. The Foundation's director, Francis Comstock, pointed out examples of the many houses that the Foundation has restored since the sixties. With its simple architectural details the house at 6 Cross Street was on Mr. Comstock's list as an example of late 17th-century dwellings and in that same category is 32 Clarke Street. The house at 33 Washington Street with a two-story gambrel roof, bold moldings, and windows with a pediment marks the period just before the Revolution when Newport was in full swing as a seaport. A beautiful example of a house of the Federal period is the Samuel Whitehorne House, built in 1811, which is open to the public by appointment with the Restoration Foundation. This brick museum is full of furniture from Newport cabinetmakers —kneehole desks, highboys, lowboys, furniture with a recurring shell motif—and wonderful quilts on the beds.

Near the Whitehorne House are two fish restaurants, the Pier and Christies, right down on the water. Both have their own moorings if you arrive by boat. The Pier serves, among other things on a long, long menu full of seafood dishes, something called Special Clambake. It comes to the table in a pot and is a combination of steamers, Rhode Island lobster, corn, and onions. Their ice-cream pie is a spectacular dessert. A short walk from the Pier is a block of Franklin Street that's full of antique shops. In the window of one I saw what can only be called a "set" of bedroom furniture, which was made in 1876 of turned maple but which looked just like bamboo—a tall chest, bed, washstand, chairs, and more, for $2,200. The Preservation Society of Newport County on Washington Square has a pamphlet listing antique shops and other pamphlets and brochures of interest. It has maintained for many years most of Newport's House Museums beginning with the Hunter House built in 1748, which is full of Goddard and Townsend furniture. Close by is the White Horse Tavern, built in 1673, the oldest tavern still in use in the country today. Its low-ceilinged, beamed rooms are full of rag rugs and contemporary primitive paintings of Newport scenes. There's a good beefsteak and kidney pie that comes in a casserole or a "pirate's" chowder full of potatoes, corn, and chicken all boiled with clams; or a pork and apple pie, served only at lunch. Also on Washington Square is the Brick Market by Peter Harrison, a Newport architect, built just after the time of Munday's Trinity Church. Here there are Newport crafts for sale, reproduction furniture and silver, blank pads put in tiny bookcovers with Newport scenes on them—perfect to leave by a phone. I bought a book called The Newport Cookbook by Ceil Dyer that's full of gossip and recipes dating from Colonial times through the turn of the century. There's a recipe for a New England boiled dinner—good, it says, if done on top of the stove in a pot today, but superb if cooked the old-fashioned way in a pot hung on a crane over an open fire in a fireplace. Another is the recipe for Rhode Island johnnycakes made from cornmeal and molasses, and an old, old formula for Indian pudding, which is also a cornmeal and molasses recipe. Serve this one when it's still hot with vanilla ice cream. The author also includes menus and recipes from the days of the big cottages when the food was very French. Among them, a lunch menu of William K. Vanderbilt, served one day on board his yacht. It was not a light lunch.

Bellevue Avenue and the Ocean Drive represent the advent of Newport as a resort. Bellevue is more 19th century, with its stick and shingle architecture and the huge palaces of the 1890s. Ocean, a curving stretch of road along the Bay also has some wooden 19th-century houses but consists mainly of 20th-century versions of everything from French provincial houses to Italian villas. They are beautiful big houses in a setting of rocks, wild grasses, pheasant, heron, swans, and marshes filled with cattails. See them from the road or from the water on a boat —the Viking Princess is a little tourist ferry that starts from the Sheraton Inn on Goat Island and scoots along the route of the Ocean Drive from the water side. Two houses in particular look wonderful from the water. One, the Ledges, is an enormous stick-style house with a wide porch running round it—("stick style" means that the decorative wood or sticks reflect the houses' architectural frames). The other is the big house of Hammersmith Farm, an impressive shingled cottage with later additions. Many contemporary architects have admired the freedom of these big rambling wooden houses, as they seemed more organically American than the more grandiose Beaux Arts-inspired houses on Bellevue Avenue. It is this other group, however, that no one should miss seeing and that consistently draws busloads of visitors. The Preservation Society maintains these big houses and has pamphlets about their history and wonderful tips about how to interpret them. The guides are full of gossip about the original occupants—sometimes as interesting as the house itself.

For me, the two houses, the Breakers and Marble House, that Richard Morris Hunt built in the 1890s for two Vanderbilt brothers were of immediate interest. Marble House, which is marble indoors and out, cost $11 million to build. It borrows the grandest aspect of European houses—Italian marble, French ceilings with stucco reliefs, Gobelin tapestries, buhl furniture, grand staircases, huge marble mantels, Louis XV woodwork—even in upstairs bedrooms there are golden swags, alabaster, and gilt. The Breakers has seventy rooms grouped on four floors in the style of an Italian Renaissance palace. The great hall, that you walk into from the front door, rises two stories with a gallery on the second. Indoor fountains, columns, arcades, carved paneling, ceiling mosaics, vast fireplaces all fulfill in the most extravagant way every palatial fantasy in the history of architecture and decoration. Both of these houses were built for entertaining and must have looked incredible all lit up at night. They are open until November 16, from 10 until 5.

Rosecliff, the setting for Gatsby's parties in the recent movie version of The Great Gatsby is a relatively small house by Vanderbilt standards. It is full of light and it is said that Stanford White had the Versailles Petit Trianon in mind when he built it. The ballroom runs the width of the house and is see-through with windows all along either side. A heart-shaped staircase leads to a wide upstairs hall where sunny big bedrooms face the ocean and all the bathrooms have huge tubs. This white pleasure pavilion is perhaps the most livable, by today's standards, of the big houses. It was built for the daughter of Jim Fair, the man who mined the Comstock Lode.

There are two other buildings that can't be missed. One is the Tennis Casino, another of the McKim, Mead and White buildings in Newport, and an example of shingle architecture. It's one of the first of a new category of buildings which emerged in the 1880s—resort clubs. The other is the Redwood Library built in 1748 by Peter Harrison who saw pictures of Palladian buildings in books brought from England and so made his own temple-like library long before even Thomas Jefferson was interested in classical architecture. It's full of portraits, marble busts, and beautiful glass-topped cases for display of folios or bird prints.

New Bedford is under an hour's drive from Newport. The outskirts look like other contemporary New England towns but the further towards the water and the historic waterfront area one goes, the tinier and more charming the houses get. For the last few years, New Bedford has been in the process of restoring its downtown, an enormous task that involves rerouting traffic. Easiest way to explore is on foot. Park for 10¢ an hour in the Kerwin Parking Lot on Acushnet Avenue at Williams Street, about two minutes away.

In the heart of this renewal area, on Johnny Cake Hill, overlooking the water, is a remarkable whaling museum which in itself epitomizes much of New Bedford history, since until the 1850s it was a one-industry port. There, in a large main room, is the largest ship model in the world: 60 feet long and big enough to go on board. Every aspect of the whaling business, from log books, paintings of ships, spare-time art of the men who shipped out on whaling barks for

Pecky Cypress
Gray Design #211

Until now the look of Cypress paneling would cost you a small fortune.

If you could find it.

The Cypress we're talking about is called Pecky Cypress, and it just isn't that easy to find. Lumbermen say it's harder to get than rosewood from Brazil. And long ago, interior decorators stopped considering its natural, earthy texture as an option. Pecky Cypress has been that difficult to find.

But now we've captured the lost look of Pecky Cypress in Masonite hardboard paneling. It has the rare "character marks" and impressions, the rich subtle run of the Pecky Cypress grain. And you can put six panels side-by-side without repeating the design.

Just look at what happens when you put it up in your rec room, bedroom, attic, or study. The warm, weathered tone of Masonite's new Pecky Cypress Design turns an ordinary room into a room you'll love.

Pecky Cypress Design paneling features a man-made finish on real Masonite brand hardboard. It's a quarter-inch thick so it's durable. It can take knocks, bumps and bruises; won't splinter or crack. And cleaning is as easy as a wipe with a damp sponge.

the new State Department Reception Rooms, great American women poets, architect Walter Gropius and Isabel O'Neil, authority on painted finishes

State Department Americana Project

Having no crowned heads, the United States Goverment has no crown jewels, as such. But it has one of the greatest collections of American furniture in the country, some of it in the White House, where it is mixed with French and English cousins, and some of it in the State Department Diplomatic Reception Rooms, where its bloodline is pure Yankee and, from a cabinetmaker's point of view, pure blue.

It is also what might be called a bequest collection. Official funds are not available for prestige furniture, paintings, and decorative objects appropriate to the Reception Rooms, and it is only through the efforts of the Fine Arts Committee of the State Department and what is called the Americana Project that the rooms are so splendid. Everything in them has been given, loaned, consigned for purchase, or purchased outright by private citizens, and the fact that the collections are now valued at more than $8,500,000 is proof of extraordinary generosity. Equally generous have been contributions given to make the Reception Rooms architecturally appropriate to their furnishings. When you visit the Reception Rooms, you will see why the architectural changes were mandatory. One style had to be superimposed upon another.

The Department of State is housed in a modern office building of which the oldest part was completed in 1941; the newest

PAINTED FINISHES OF THE 18TH CENTURY

This is the title of Isabel O'Neil's forthcoming exhibition of her students' work, 1974-75 season. It will open on Monday, September 22, and run through Friday, September 26. Hours, 11 A.M. to 4 P.M.; place, The Studio Workshop, 177 East 87th Street, New York City. Mrs. O'Neil, above, is the author of The Art of the Painted Finish, a House & Garden book published by William Morrow in 1971. She knows whereof she writes. For almost twenty years she has been teaching the alchemistic art of turning a plain surface into a painted, fantasized version of everything from tortoise shell to lapis lazuli. She calls her finishes the "Great Impersonators." And that they are.

A salute to America's women poets

Most actresses, when they turn their talents to interpreting poetry, brush up on their Shakespeare, and play Juliet until it's time for Lady Macbeth. Not so Joan Fontaine, a lady who has lit up the silver screen to the tune of three Academy nominations, one of which turned into an Oscar, and to whom poetry is the music of the spheres. She can play Shakespeare any time she cares to, but she prefers to tour the country reading poetry rather than fluting it from a canvas balcony. Beginning this fall and ending next April, she will travel from New England to the Pacific in a performance of her own arrangement of verse called America: Three Centuries Through The Words Of Her Women Poets. She starts with Anne Bradstreet, our first New England female poet ("If ever two were one, then surely we."), goes on to Phillis Wheatley, African-born, sold on a slave block in Boston in 1761, eventually lauded by European royalty, and winds up with a battery of greats—Amy Lowell, Emily Dickinson, Edna St. Vincent Millay, Sara Teasdale, Marianne Moore, Sylvia Plath and many others, including Black, Indian, and Spanish-American women poets. "The idea," she says, "is to give the audience a vivid, scenic picture of America for the Bicentennial, as well as insight into the emotional and social growth of the feminine poetic personality." She is still trying to incorporate something of Dorothy Parker's. "She's difficult, but I can't leave her out. I don't know what she thought about the Grand Canyon, but she knew more about women than Freud."

Beautiful 18th-century rooms have been created within a completely modern building

(the building is now three times its original size), in 1961. It is just what it looks like, an 8-story office building designed for function, pure and simple. Some 7,000 people work in it, and it is not until you reach the eighth floor that you step out of a modern clickety-clack beehive into the 18th century. The shift of scene is such a leap backward in time that if you suddenly came upon Benjamin Franklin trotting down a corridor, you wouldn't be surprised. The rooms are settings for great ghosts—all benign.

The transformation was not just a question of "setting a stage." Business offices, as a rule, are pedestrian things. 18th-century drawing rooms were not. The problem, consequently, was not one of restoration (there was nothing to restore), but of taking an impersonal shell and creating within it a series of architecturally beautiful rooms true to the period of 18th-century American houses at their grandest. Ceilings had to be raised, new floors laid, paneling and fireplaces installed, moldings and pilasters and plaster ornamentation designed. A formidable, if fascinating, undertaking, and a costly one. To date, about one third of the work has been completed, including the three principal rooms—the John Quincy Adams drawing room, the Thomas Jefferson state reception room, and the Benjamin Franklin state dining room. Here are entertained kings and queens, prime ministers and foreign ministers, members of parliament, foreign and American leaders. The occasion may be a small luncheon, a formal dinner for 120 people, or a reception for 1,000 guests. There is space enough for almost any demand—very beautiful space, beautifully furnished.

As far as possible, the furniture is limited to the period between 1740-1825, and consists for the most part of major examples of American Chippendale, Queen Anne, Hepplewhite, Sheraton, and Duncan Phyfe. Of necessity, the rugs are Persian, Turkish, and Chinese. American rugs of the period (mostly of the braided rag variety) were not quite sumptuous enough for rooms of this elegance. The porcelains, too, are European or Chinese—a custom of the time. American potters were contentir themselves with simple tablewar not works of art. But all the silv is American, and superb, an with only a few exceptions, th paintings and portraits are b great American artists—portrai of early Secretaries of State suc as John Jay and Robert Livingsto by Gilbert Stuart; James Monro and James Madison by Thom Sully; Thomas Jefferson by Ba Otis.

The early and important por trait of George Washington b Gilbert Stuart is here, as are th Rembrandt Peale portraits o George and Martha. Most inter esting, historically, is the unfinish ed painting by Benjamin West o the Preliminary Treaty of Peac in Paris, 1782. It was supposedl West's intention to add the British Commissioner and the British Secretary to the group of signers but the two Englishmen neve made it. The famous "Treaty o Paris" tambour writing desk o which the treaty was signed sits i the John Quincy Adams stat drawing room, as does the tabl desk designed and owned by Thomas Jefferson, and on which he might very well have drafted the Declaration of Independence. With his usual ingenuity, Jefferson designed the desk with an adjustable lift-up top rather like an architect's drafting board. Because of arthritis, he was far more comfortable working erect than seated. Like a sensible man, he stood up.

The collection of museum pieces goes on and on. Only about half of it is owned outright by the Department of State. The other half is on loan, sometimes permanent, sometimes not, or on consignment from American business firms or private citizens, and can be withdrawn at any time unless it is purchased by a donor to the collections. They are princely gifts, obviously, but that is how great collections are built. On the other hand, a contribution of $250 will make you an Associate Member of the Americana Project, and the money will be added either to the acquisitions fund or the architectural improvements fund. You may also give a piece of American furniture of historic interest, a painting by an American artist of the period, a piece of 18th-century American

Great architect, timeless house

Considered the most potent architectural force of the 20th century, Walter Gropius has been rightly called "one of the few actual inventors of modern architecture." Educator and social philosopher as well, he founded in 1919 the renowned Bauhaus School at Weimar, Germany, designed buildings all over the world, and from 1937 until 1952 was Professor of Architecture and Chairman of the Department at the Harvard Graduate School of Design. The first building he designed in the United States—after close consultation with his old friend, Marcel Breuer—was his own home in Lincoln, Mass., not far from Cambridge. Built shortly after 1937, the house succeeds in blending what was then considered architectural oil and water—New England tradition and a contemporary means of expression (it was shown in House & Garden in 1949).

Its materials, although handled in a highly inventive way, are all indigenous and familiar. Dr. Gropius refused to use anything that could not be obtained either from an American building supply house or catalogue. He believed in "fulfilling regional conditions rather than international precepts," and he never broke his rule.

The house is still occupied by his widow, who recently offered it, complete with its original furniture made in the Bauhaus workshops, to the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities. (In mint condition, the house today looks about as antique as a new penny.) But before the offer can be accepted, the Society must establish through gifts an endowment fund of $500,000. Museums, to endure, must be nurtured. Former Dean of the Harvard School of Design, architect José Luis Sert heads the campaign. Should you wish to contribute, checks should be made to SPNEA/Gropius House Fund, 141 Cambridge Street, Boston, Mass. 02114. All gifts are tax-deductible.

In due time, depending on public response, the house will be open as a museum. Mrs. Gropius will remain in residence and will act as curator. In the interim, she is always happy to show the house by appointment to architects, designers, and students who would like to see how Bauhaus principles can be adapted to the New England environment—and work. ■

Because a Stiffel lamp is inspired by classic designs of the past—designs that have nothing to do with fads and fancies and everything to do with lasting elegance. Here are three examples.

Left: The English Regency period rules tastefully here in this table lamp. Applied ormolu leaves finger an urn of fine ivory enamel. 37″ high. About $189.

Center: The church is the inspiration for this aristocratic British triform candlestick. The golden English old brass finish highlights the strong, noble lines. 32″ tall. About $134.

Right: This candlestick, modeled on 18th century Tibeto-Chinese creations, exhibits the "simplicity" that made the Orient famous. Golden distressed old brass finish. 39″ high. About $139.

Prices may be slightly higher in the South and West.

to do yourself, and only foam will fill a wall without air pockets caused by nails, crosspieces, pipes, and wires (the consistency of urea-formaldehyde foam—like stale sponge cake—makes it possible to cut it away from wires and pipes if necessary). Rigid insulation can be put on under siding, if you happen to be residing. Or it can be installed inside between furring strips, then covered with gypsum board—but moldings will probably have to be replaced to fit the new wider wall. One-inch wood paneling adds a little to the R-value of a wall, but the insulating value of plywood panels is negligible.

Basement walls should have at least 2 inches of waterproof insulation installed from the top of the wall to a point at least 2 feet below the outside ground level, unless the basement is used for unheated storage. Then the ceiling between basement and living space should be insulated. If your basement is damp because of condensation (not because of leaks), insulation will turn it into a livable space.

In deciding what to do about your insulation, two government publications can be of help: "Retrofitting Existing Housing for Energy Conservation: An Economic Analysis," by Steven Petersen, National Bureau of Standards Building Science Series 64, $1.35 (C13.29/2:64); and HUD's "In the Bank—Up the Chimney," $1.70 (023-00-00297-3). Both available from the Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

Doors and windows

There they are, openings to the cold, cold world outside, accountable for a frightening amount of the heat loss from a well-insulated house. An insulated wall may have a value of R-13 or more; a single-glass window is only R-.88. Look at yours carefully. If they are h thieves, you can add on, bolster or decorate them to make th hold heat better.

Vinyl film is more expensiv but it is clear, and has an estimat life of three to five years.

A wooden storm door, even if is half glass, will cut heat loss through the door in half. A stro spring closer on the storm do saves heat in two ways—it insur a closed door and it discourag lingering in the doorway.

Even better than a storm do is a storm porch, an unheated e closed space outside the main do that can also be used for boo caps, skates, and snowy mittens. you can, plan to have the stor door to one side rather than rectly in front of the main door.

Polyethylene film, rolled and tacked or stapled tautly, is inexpensive barrier to winter chill.

Most caulking must be done when outside temperatures are above 50°, so if you find cracks where any two materials meet, caulk them now. If the cracks are large, fill them first with oakum, then caulk. (Do not caulk the drainage holes usually found in storm-screen combination windows.)

Weatherstrip, paying particular attention to the sills of your doors. Consider using masking tape or fabric-backed heating duct tape to seal any windows or doors that will not be opened during the winter.

If you're sealing off an exterior door that has a storm door, you can insulate the space between them with batts. The unfinished sides of doors to unheated attics or basements can be covered with insulating particle board.

Remove the screens from all windows that receive winter sun. The wire mesh blocks a surprising amount of heat.

Decorating. Tightly fitting shutters and curtains are energy-saving friends. Heavy curtains, particularly if they have closely woven linings—the kind that keep them from fading in the sun—can reduce heat loss by a quarter, according to Spies, Konzo, Calvin, and Thoms in 350 Ways to Save Energy (and Money), if they are kept drawn after it is dark. But in order to work as heat-savers, curtains must be tight to the window at sides and top. Otherwise, heat near the ceiling of the room will be dumped over the top of the curtain into the cold space against the window. Paste and sew strips of Velcro to edges of window and curtain, and press them together at night. Consider equipping the curtain with a valance that is closed on top. Consider making the valance deep enough that you can put tubes of fluorescent light (it uses far less electricity than incandescent bulbs do) along it, either to wash down the curtain or to reflect from the ceiling.

Shutters and insulating panels can make windows nearly as heatproof as walls. The R-value of hinged shutters or panels can be improved by pasting rigid insulation to their window sides. Make your own insulating panels. Four layers of corrugated cardboard, pasted on plywood with a white glue such as Elmer's, make effective insulation, say Eugene and Sandra Fulton Eccli in Save Energy: Save Money! Swing the panels from the ceiling, or put them on tracks to slide across the windows at night. Paint or paper them, or cover them with fabric, or mount mirrors on them. One warning: If your insulation is polystyrene or polyethylene, remember that both give off toxic fumes in a fire and therefore must be covered with a nonflammable material. ■

The new Early American collection from Case gives you a beautiful feeling of the good old days. And it lets you enjoy the same painstaking craftsmanship that Case has been putting into knives for more than a century.

For example, we put at least 75 hand operations in each one of Case's nine Early Americans. Notice how the tang extends the full length of the handle for extra strength. And how the handles are natural walnut for natural beauty, impregnated with clear acrylic so they're dishwasher-safe.

And how the blades are glaze-finished surgical steel with edges as sharp as the edges we used to put on our straight razors.

You liked your furniture enough to pay a lot for it. So what are you doing to get your money's worth? A blob of ice cream, a dribble of pop, and suddenly that new sofa or your favorite chair starts looking its age.

But an occasional, generous spray of "Scotchgard" Brand Fabric Protector on clean furniture, and watery and oily spills just bead up. And you can blot them away.

It pays to invest a little in your furniture's future. "Scotchgard" Brand Fabric Protector helps keep your furniture looking newer a lot longer.

COMMON-SENSE DECORATING

is more than a surface change with paint and fabrics, or a response to current mood or fashion. Space is designed for activity, the realities of the situation. A designer looks at the total environment in architectural terms—scale, volume, traffic patterns, people, and habits. Then he organizes furniture and decorating objects into the total scheme. Common sense decorating is practicality.

SIMPLICITY

Think of what you might leave out, more than what you leave in. Every room needs a basic framework. Analyze the ebb and flow of activity. It's often the case that any given area works best with a minimum of things in it.

SPACE

The unfurnished parts of the room are just as important as the furnished. Shapes made by emptiness are all part of the visual excitement. Try drawing out floor plans and see how the jigsaw puzzle of shapes looks to your eye. Darken empty parts, so the drawing looks like a negative. Is the negative positive?

LIGHT

Creating a quality of light can do more for a room than any other single thing. Good lighting relates to the architecture. Often this means you don't see it until it's lit. It can be a combination of things, built in, strips of bulbs, light bounced off a surface, light on objects. Let decorative lamps shine where they are legitimate.

COMFORT

Having the soft beds and chairs and textures you care about is merely a fractional part of feeling at ease in your own surroundings. Comfort is well-planned storage, for clothes, books, records, tableware, linens, all the things and equipment you live with. They should be right where you want them. Plan for the things you will accumulate. Provide empty space for the future.

FLEXIBILITY

Most of today's rooms are called upon to work for a variety of activities. Many must be comfortable for both small and large numbers of people. By considering its potential uses in the basic design, you create a room that always seems especially planned for each different way it is used.

EFFICIENCY

Your idiosyncracies must be considered to smooth out your life and make everything efficient. Don't be influenced by others. Your living pattern and yours alone is to be considered. If you like eating in the kitchen, design a way to do it. It's the only way you'll be entirely happy in your surroundings.

Turn through the following pages to hear from some of America's top designers who speak out strongly for common-sense decorating and give inspiring examples.

TOP DESIGNERS SPEAK OUT FOR

COMMON-SENSE DECORATING

Common-sense decorating means a room that really works for the way you want to live. And today, that room probably includes several or all of these qualities—simplicity, a sense of space and light, comfort, flexibility, and efficiency. On this and the next pages are examples—plus more ideas from top designers and architects, who believe that a room that works well looks good

"You have to think about how you really want to live," says designer Joseph Braswell. "For instance, if you have a library and living room and want a very simple, flexible, and inexpensive change, install double doors between the two rooms—so you have the option to keep the library as a den or guest room, or open the doors and make one big space for parties."

"Every room is a six-sided box," explains designer Angelo Donghia, "with four walls, ceiling, and floor. Each surface complements each other. That's common sense. So take a room that has windows in two adjacent walls with wonderful views. What color should you paint the floor, ceiling, and walls? No color. To complement these two windows, and continue the sparkly light effect, put mirror on both the other walls, so all four are alike. Paint the ceiling sky blue and the floors bleached white. Now everything balances."

"If you have a very small room with a low ceiling, and an unattractive fireplace as the only point of interest, replace it," suggests designer Michael Taylor, "with an overscaled sandstone French fireplace. Treat the windows with pairs of thick natural wood panels—not shutters—also on a larger scale. Put a large sofa opposite the fireplace, a smaller one by it, and chairs opposite, all upholstered in the same heavy natural hand-woven burlap silk. By using overscaled things, the space is enlarged and a difficult room becomes simple."

A LARGE BARN SPACE THAT WORKS AS A COMFORTABLE SITTING ROOM

Common-sense decorating has turned this once-dark, over-decorated barn into a simple, light, living space. Designer John Saladino painted the walls and ceiling icy-white, and stripped the beams to accentuate height. A natural woven sisal floor covering merges with the glass-topped coffee table; custom sofas have slipcovers of inexpensive, sun-resistant curtain lining. Ice-blue silk wall panels conceal two unwanted doors—installed at doorway height, "to make the room more human." Drum table of practical porcelain; windows veiled in seamless gauze to cut out glare—light is indirect, from fixtures mounted on sides of beams.

WHAT TOP DESIGNERS SAY

"If you are looking for a feeling of warmth in a large room," says designer Arthur Smith, "take the furniture away from the walls. Rugs also reduce living space. Flexible arrangements of chairs make for intimacy—using easy-to-move wicker, benches, and slipper chairs, for instance—so that even if the room is large, two people can live comfortably in it by themselves." (For Arthur Smith's design for a New York apartment, see page 100.)

"What do you do with a small breakfast room (10 by 12) that must be used for family, TV-watching, and grown-up lunches?" asks designer George Clarkson. "Put a soft banquette at one end of the room, and at the opposite end, a TV suspended from the ceiling. Use a table with casters, light enough for anyone to move easily, that is kept against the wall under the TV during the day, and pushed to the middle of the room for meals."

"If you have a room with a poor view," say designers Mica Ertegun and Chessy Rayner of Mac II, "hang clear plastic blinds on the windows, painted with a landscape or abstract design. Then you can adjust the panels to make a montage or show the complete design. This treatment hides the ugly view and also lets in light."

"How do you make a basement or cellar comfortable and light?" asks architect James Baker. "Paint it white, and install tile flooring which will not show dirt. A mixed bag of furniture always creates comfort and informality—family pieces that tell a story, and a light-upholstered sectional couch for comfort and flexibility. Leave pipes intentionally uninsulated beneath the floor to create warmth."

"If you like books, try using them as a decorative wall material on every wall in the room," suggests designer William Machado. "It's not only very practical, but also looks extremely handsome."

"If you want freedom from complexity without losing luxury," says designer Bruce Gregga, "new windows can give a room completely new youth and vitality. For instance, if you have mullion windows, try putting in plate glass ones, with flat shutters. This is not expensive, but it gives a room (Continued on page 154)

A KITCHEN/DINING ROOM THAT REALLY WORKS

Common-sense decorating—a room comfortable enough for a large family and flexible enough to entertain in. To make it work, architect Kenneth Lange of Elder, Angell & Lange pulled down walls, raised the ceiling, added hand-hewn beams and installed a central counter as room divider—doubling as children's eatery, far left. Terrific storage over and under counter (plus wine rack); built-in radio/intercom for efficiency; brick floor, planters, and barn wood cabinets for comfort in the George West family's perfectly working, yet most inviting, environment.

DESIGNER AND CLIENT TALK FRANKLY

A good working relationship between interior designer and client is based on mutual understanding and respect. Recognizing changing needs and an openness to new ideas on both sides can produce consistently good results. Here are examples on how well it can work.

"A good client wants the job d in a professiona way, using the experience and skill of an interi decorator"
Mark Hampton

What the designers say

George Clarkson: "A young client came to me and her opening request was that she wanted 'a very period room.' She meant antiques and classic furniture. Today, Mrs. Tankoos's apartment has not one antique in it. Yet you would not be conscious of this—it is simply up-to-date, using steel and glass tables, deep pile rugs, open wall space, and no clutter. Much of the furniture was designed specially for her—replacing antiques at a fraction of the cost. White sailcloth curtains, the upholstery of white and beige tones in heavy woven fabrics, melon walls. The whole look of the apartment is completely contemporary."

Joseph Braswell: "Mrs. Langdon wanted a period, 18th-century feeling throughout the apartment, except for the library, which is a marriage of old and new. For instance, a chimney breast of stainless steel is the background for an antique Roman bust; the lighting is a heavy 17th-century Flemish silver chandelier that blends wonderfully with the stainless steel. So the basic feeling of the classically proportioned room is maintained, while looking forward to today."

John Dickinson: "Working with the Donald Magnins' house in San Francisco, the problem was the living room. It was full of furniture that didn't work too well either for the family or for parties. There is a study on the same floor that does nicely for

What the clients say

Mrs. S. Joseph Tankoos, Jr.: "George helped me find my own taste. I found that it was really contemporary after all, instead of chintz and prints. I knew what colors I wanted—I wanted complexions to look fantastic, so the living room is salmon-colored, and everybody looks great in it. He took the time and explained everything—for instance, he gave me renderings, and estimates, right at the beginning. This was highly professional; and from then on we had a wonderful relationship."

Mrs. Homer Alfred Langdon: "My apartment is large and old, so I needed someone with versatility to work on it. I gave Joe pages of requirements, since I am a very organized person, particularly with storage, and he executed everything perfectly. The apartment had also to work for small and large parties, and he succeeded in that, too. The decorating was a happy time."

Mrs. Donald Magnin: "For our weekend house, we wanted red, white, and blue. John suggested all white—and it worked out wonderfully. He solved the problem of using white by slipcovering every-

"When the Cushings moved to this apartment, they brought their furniture with them, so the apartment had to be planned with this in mind. It has a long entrance hall that leads into the dining room and living room, and as they entertain a lot, we needed all the space available. So there is one color scheme for all rooms—off-white, beige, and shades of pink. The same carpeting throughout. This makes the space seem much larger, with pretty vistas."

the family—so we turned the big living room into a room for entertaining. There is very little furniture in it now—a big bay window-shaped sofa, some benches (without backs, so one can face either direction), and two small chairs that can move easily. Most important, there's lots of empty floor space for milling about at big parties."

Joseph D'Urso: "There's a difference between 'design' and 'what happens in the design.' A room should be a setting for what is added later. All the rooms in the Aaron Lockers' living room are white. They were surprised that I used a glossy white—but it makes the room lighter and brighter. There was an old purple mantel in the room that they didn't want to remove. So the twins and I painted it—and loved the way the pattern came up in the white bas-relief." (For more details of the Locker house, see page 104.)

Robert Perkins: "The problem with Kezia Keeble's apartment was that it had a tiny bedroom—so instead of using it as a bedroom we turned it into a dressing room, with dressing table, closets, and an outsize armoire, 8 feet long and 8 feet high. We built an alcove in the main room for the bed, between bookshelves, with cushions and bolsters. This made excellent sense for the way she lives."

Richard V. Hare: "My assignment with Mrs. Gary was to incorporate a large household of furniture into a new apartment, and organize it so everything worked. To make a lot of objects livable within a large space, we created small sitting, living, reading, and eating areas within the larger framework of the space—so that these areas could be used for small as well as for larger groups. One has to be very flexible as well as treat the furniture with respect."

Leonard Stanley: "Mrs. Parry's house in Los Angeles had a four-car garage that became her living room. It was an odd structure, with columns we had to work around—but, by using screens, the room became very cozy and intimate, the effect accentuated by using a lot of chairs and ottomans you could pull up—for Mrs. Parry wanted it to be a place where she could entertain. She was an ideal client—open to ideas, and yet with requests of her own, particularly in respect to entertaining—making the former garage into a comfortable space with very flexible seating."

thing in sailcloth, and making double sets of everything. So when someone sits down with a wet bathing suit I can simply change the slipcovers. No problem with fading from the sun either—the house looks as fresh as ever. We used the same idea in our town house."

Mrs. Aaron Locker: "The decisions were made quickly. Joe brought a minimum of choices, but he was the motivating force. For instance, I wanted beige sofas in the living room. Joe wanted black. He drew the floor plan with black sofas, and we saw what he meant—it looks like a contemporary painting. Suddenly the room took form and shape, the square on one side, the circle on the other. The beige sofas would never have done the same thing."

Kezia Keeble: "I took Bob to okay the apartment before I bought it—to see if he could do anything with it. Everything worked out perfectly. Facing the bed is a sofa with a wicker table and pie-shaped chairs for sitting or eating on. Bob and I worked together all along. It was a wonderful experience."

Mrs. Pat Gary: "Richard really cared about making the place look like me. He knew my furniture well and how it would look best in its new surroundings. For instance, he used a large, very formal French desk to break up my bedroom into two halves, so one side is for sleeping, and the other is a sitting area with a fireplace. The effect is really charming."

Mrs. Vidor Parry: "Leonard transformed the garage into a very charming living room. For instance, he put in an 18th-century fireplace that really fit. The house also had a library that looked west—which, in California, means it got too much sun. I wanted wheat-colored burlap on the walls. Leonard insisted on sable brown. I realized this color kept the glare down—my colors would have been blinding. Only a professional would have known that."

"A good designer makes your own ideas work even better" Mrs. Frederick Cushing

"Everything Mark did worked wonderfully. For instance, a favorite piece of furniture is a bench that seats two people. Mark designed the dining room around it—putting ten chairs and the bench at a round table, to seat twelve. The bench is covered in a chocolate-brown velvet, and the table has a beige cover over which we can put other cloths. The walls are a flattering pink—all women look well in this room."

DESIGNING FOR A DYNAMIC COUPLE

VERSATILE ROOMS FOR AVID PARTY-GIVERS

Transforming a respectable old New York apartment for a dynamic young coupl meant one thing to designer Arthur Smith: Make it simple, make it fresh, an make it work. Since the owners are avid party givers on every imaginabl scale, the big old rooms had to be versatile—and if anything more beautifu when filled with people. The entrance hall, above, its shimmering blue achieve with a deep tone over a vivid cerulean undercoat, is home for a Matisse draw ing and a glamorous French 1930s mirrored table—but it often serves as second dining room for large dinner parties as well. In the big living room left, the owners wanted a feeling of warmth and intimacy, which Mr. Smit created with conversational furniture groups well away from the walls. Flexibl floor plan accommodates lots of people. Mirrored window reveals add sparkle

DESIGNING FOR A DYNAMIC COUPLE

EXPANDABLE PARTIES, MOVIES AFTER LUNCH AND BEFORE DINNER

The green dining room, opposite page (its color inspired by a painting), is a marvel of flexibility. Its permanent furniture: an expandable round table that seats up to ten guests, and a small table in a window for breakfast-for-two or an extra four dinner guests. For larger parties, folding tables are brought in, covered with green-and-white cloths. Mr. Smith designed brown lacquer-and-brass mantel, shell-patterned carpet; screen is suede panels bordered with dark mirror. Because movies after lunch or before dinner are a favorite pastime, two bedrooms were turned into a gay red, white, and black screening room, below, with a projection room in a former bath. Facing the wall-to-wall movie screen, a pair of chairs with fold-out seats for floor sitting. One checkered step up behind the lipstick-red sofa is its identical twin. Sony projector between ottomans enlarges ordinary television images on a special 4-by-6-foot screen that rolls out of the way when not in use. For refreshments, a drink cart in a corner. Just for fun: a bubble-gum machine and popcorn maker.

Dining room is lit softly by candles, table lamps, and dimmer-controlled lights hidden behind curtains in window reveals.

DESIGNING FOR A WHOLE FAMILY

MAKING AN OLD HOUSE THINK YOUNG

"I love the dining room. It's a great place to bring a pot of coffee, spread out the magazines, photo albums—whatever I'm working on at the moment . . ."
Renée Locker

"I enjoy working in the greenhouse after a day at the office. It's restful —and very rewarding—to get my hands into the soil . . ."
Aaron Locker

"I really like the living room best. It's a people room —you get a feeling of plenty of space, even when there are plenty of people . . ."
Rick Locker

"The house is designed to suit the way the Lockers like to live. The real excitement happens when they are in the rooms..."
Joseph D'Urso, designer

It was inevitable, when Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Locker asked Joseph D'Urso to rejuvenate their old Long Island house, that the entire family would be involved in the project. To the Lockers, doing things together is the whole point of being a family. To Mr. D'Urso, it's also the point of interior design: "My concern is not to 'decorate' a room, but to create a setting in which everyone involved can feel free to do whatever he loves to do." The Lockers called on Mr. D'Urso because they responded to the spirit of his work. "We found a picture of a barn he had redone," says Mrs. Locker. "We liked the feel of it. When we met Joe, we knew he was the one for us."

"The painting in the living room was a flash of inspiration," says Rick. "Joe had the idea; we each chose a color (mom's purple got streaky, so we had to leave it out)." "Keith and I helped Rick do the painting," says Jeff. "Dad supervised."

"I think the living room is the most dynamic room in the house. It's great to bring my friends to—we turn on the stereo, have some iced tea, sit around and talk..."
Jeff Locker

"When I come into the house I head straight for the refrigerator..."
Keith Locker

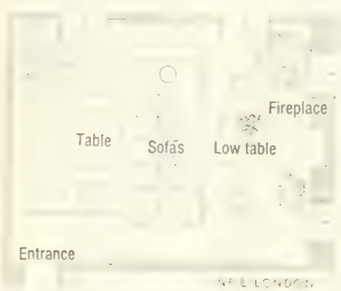
PRACTICAL ROOMS FOR EVERYONE'S INTERESTS

"We bought the house because of its big, well-scaled rooms, wonderful grounds, its flavor of a bygone way of living," says Mr. Locker. "But it was very dim, heavily curtained. Everything ended in shadow." Mr. D'Urso called it 'ersatz-grand'; Keith called it "spooky."

"We were more contemporary," says Mrs. Locker. "We needed more light, more practicality, more fun. Joe helped us create exactly what we wanted."

They made decisions quickly: Curtains came down, sunlight came in; everything was painted shiny white, all the rooms carpeted in continuous gray. Lamps and chandeliers went to the attic, replaced by big dramatic uplights, track lights, lights outside the windows. "When it came to radical changes, like painting, paneling, or reshaping the dining room, Joe kept reassuring us," says Mrs. Locker. "That's what professionals do—give you courage."

"Joe made us see the relationship between what he was doing and our daily living—it was exciting to watch the house taking shape," says Rick. "But after a while, the design becomes part of living, and you take it for granted. Now it's just—home."



In the living room, right, two conversation areas center on back-to-back black leather sofas where food, feet, and the family dog are all welcome. At sofa ends, Formica-encased stereo speakers hold primitive art, two huge uplights (the only lights in the room); pull-around furniture makes floor-plan flexible. A step through glass doors is the greenhouse, opposite page, top, with gravelly garden path, lots of tropical foliage. Dining room, center, once immense, dark, and stuffy, was transformed with white paint, a Formica-and-steel table Mr. D'Urso designed, and surprising built-out walls that dramatize fireplace, conceal wall-cupboards and indirect lighting, make room comfortable for family dining. In the white-and-naturals kitchen, bottom, Mrs. Locker worked out the floor plan with shapes on a sheet of paper; Mr. D'Urso helped put the plan to work, devised lighting. Old double ovens—"that look like something out of a laundromat"—came with the house. Mrs. Locker: "The house was such fun to do, I wish it had taken longer."

COMMON-SENSE DECORATING

LIVABLE, PRACTICAL NATURALS

FOR AN ACTIVE FAMILY'S HOUSE

Summery straws, natural wicker, honest textures and fibers in tones of biscuity beige, all add up to a soft-spoken atmosphere plus practical liveability in a family house by the sea. When Mr. and Mrs. Jones Yorke built the house, they asked their friend, designer Mark Hampton, for help with some basics—like the clear cedar paneling, balconies, and beams that span the 32-foot tray ceiling. Then, with his blessing, Mrs. Yorke put her own decorating ideas to work: "The flow of natural tones heightens the sense of space we wanted to create," she says, "and lets the real color in the house come from the view of trees, pond, and in the distance, the sea." Easily cleaned surfaces, polyurethane-coated floor, washable duck upholstery make upkeep "as easy as it can be with children and dogs running through all day." Lighting system of recessed ceiling and deck lights, uplights, simple reading lights devised with help of James McCurdy.

VERSATILE, COMFORTABLE NATURALS FOR A SWEEP-OF-SPACE CITY APARTMENT

A velvety flow of natural honey-tones gives a living-dining room in Chicago an atmosphere of space without sparseness, comfort without clutter. Against a background of bare bleached floor and walls glazed and combed the color and texture of shiny woven straw, designer Bruce Gregga brought in big-scaled furniture, importantly surrounded by space. He designed the ultra-cushy, Ultrasuede-covered sofa (with a divided back so people can perch from that side, too), and covered two gilt-framed chairs with a surprising fabric of untreated Madagascar straw—a great natural that wears beautifully, wipes clean. At the other end of the room, in the bare, ceiling-high bay window that overlooks city and lake, stand a curved wicker banquette cushioned with pale Ultrasuede, a table made of a glass cylinder topped with travertine "shaded" by a ficus tree "because it's nice to have dinner under." Two gilt chairs are covered in leopard-patterned velvet—a wild jungle natural, tamed.

HORST

"The exciting thing about naturals is the way they respond to light," says Mr. Gregga. "In direct morning light, the room is pale and shimmery; reflected afternoon light turns everything a luscious apricot." At night, light comes from uplights by the screens and under the trees, and from fire light (which turns two huge quartz crystals on the hearth, left, the color of flame). Dinner by candlelight—and city lights outside.

how to grow almost anythin

Your outdoor favorites—wildflowers, vines, bulbs, garden flowers, creepers, and shrubs—can be enjoyed indoors, too. Expert H. Peter Loewer tells you how in his new book and in this interview with garden editor, Marybeth Weston.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Anything that grows outdoors will grow indoors is the premise of H. Peter Loewer's Bringing the Outdoors In (Walker, $12.50). Mr. Loewer is one of those richly talented people—a skilled horticulturalist, writer, illustrator, also a photographer, home carpenter, experimenter. The book bears witness to all of this, including a knack for finding ingenious indoor garden supplies in sport, pet, and hardware shops, and by mail. This is a sampling of his ideas and of the plants he and his wife have grown in their upstate New York farmhouse. It is also a sampling of plants that could spend at least part of their year happily indoors with you.

Collecting outdoor plants

Whether collecting in the field or buying plants, start in the fall. When digging, take enough soil to keep the plants from wilting. If you put your specimens in plastic bags, don't seal the tops. Choose young and small plants. Pot immediately, soak, and allow to drain. If possible let plant adjust to pot before bringing indoors, before frost. To dig native plants, ask permission from landowners, follow state conservation laws, and take sparingly. You can collect or buy wildflower seed, but some will take years to reach maturity. Buying established plants from wildflower nurseries is usually the best bet.

Pots and placement

For most outdoor plants, 4-to-6-inch pots are good starters. Clay pots look natural, are natural, and unlike plastic will let you know by their color if you are making a mistake in watering or fertilizing. It is difficult to overwater when using clay. Place the pots in rooms with the right light and temperature for the variety (see lists and advice on care). The trickiest plants to bring indoors are the wild ones. Growing and flowering wildflowers in the home is not difficult, but you must have the facilities to winter the plants at about 45 degrees so that they can have their dormant period. This can last up to three months but is open to experimentation. After potting and watering, mulch the surface with sphagnum, vermiculite, or perlite to keep the soil moist and to cut off light. About the middle of November put the pots in plastic bags, tied tightly, and move to their winter quarters—a really cool room, even a newspaper-filled box on an apartment balcony—till February.

Light

Flowering plants need sun—full, partial (4 hours), or artificial light. A new world has opened up for the plant lover who is denied adequate natural light. This is the method of growing plants under fluorescent or incandescent light or a combination.

Temperature

If your plant does best at 68-70 degrees during the day, try to give it 60 at night. If it likes 60 during the day, give it 50 at night. Most plant growth occurs at night. That 10-degree drop gives the plant additional aid in the utilization of sugars it has produced during the day.

Soil

Store-bought soil is fine for part of a mix, but the cheaper types pack down. Sand helps make heavy soils more porous. Peat moss adds nutritive value as it decomposes; it is on the acid side. Crushed eggshells add lime and counter acidity. An all-purpose standard mix, good for most plants is: ¼ loam or packaged soil, ¼ sand or vermiculite, ¼ leaf mold or peat moss, ¼ packaged dehydrated cow manure. Keep these supplies on hand and vary as needed. A good bulb mix is ½ sand, ½ peat moss, no soil or fertilizer.

Food and water

Water-soluble fertilizers are good—a 20-20-20 formula for established plants and a 10-10-10 for seedlings—and cut mixing directions by half to be on the safe side. Don't feed a plant when it is dormant or in the midst of a once-a-year blooming period. Plants in the sun or in active growth need extra water, need less water in a cool room, and only enough to keep them from shriveling when they are dormant. Always soak clay pots before use; new ones steal water from the soil.

Dormancy

Dormancy is particularly noticeable with plants from the temperate regions of the world. Tropicals are not so obvious, as they hold their leaves throughout the year, but few plants will flower, fruit, and continue to bear new leaves on a year-round basis. Most of the plants brought in from out of doors will slow down their growth for the bleaker part of the winter. Outdoor plants brought indoors will generally bloom earlier than usual and not bloom again that year. Everything in life must rest at one time or another. A plant is a living thing and subject to the same regulations that govern the human body. Without light, plants become anemic; without air, water, and food, they slowly waste away. Too much heat or too much cold will generally do them in. Without routine maintenance, they quickly appear unshaven and unshorn. With good care their life brightens yours.

INDOORS

Surprise plants you can grow indoors

Garden flowers

Ageratum
Alyssum
Bellis
Browallia
Gazania
Heliotrope
Impatiens
Marigolds, dwarf
Nicotiana
Petunias
Portulaca
Roses, miniature
Torenia
Violas
Zinnias, dwarf

CARE: Sun or partial sun, standard soil mix. Water as needed. Start from seed or if you have a garden, pot root ball in standard mix. Snip back to encourage continuing bloom. Like all roses, miniatures have special needs but grow well under fluorescents or in bright windows.

Woodland wildflowers

Adders-Tongue
Erythronium americanum
Bloodroot
Sanguinaria canadensis
Bluets
Houstonia caerulea
Cobra lily
Darlingtonia californica
Columbine
Aquilegia canadensis
Foamflower
Tiarella cordifolia
Hepatica
H. acutiloba, H. americana
Lungwort
Pulmonaria saccarata
Moccasin flower
Cypripedium acaule
Pitcher plant
Sarracenia flava
S. purpurea
Spring Beauty
Claytonia virginica
Trillium
T. grandiflorum, others

CARE: Partial sun, porous acid soil (what they grew in or a standard soil mix plus extra ¼ peat). Keep moist. Cobra lily and pitcher plant need high humidity. Note special 45-degree dormancy requirements.

Quick bulbs

Acidanthera
A. bicolor murieliae
Autumn crocus
Colchicum autumnale
Dahlia, dwarf
Gloriosa lily
G. rothschildiana
Lilies, nursery pre-potted
Lilium
Sternbergia
S. lutea
Watsonia
W. humilis maculata

CARE: Sun or partial sun, bulb mix (half peat, half sand). Keep moist. No cold dark winter wait necessary for fall and summer bulbs. After bloom, let foliage mature, then withhold water to rest, or plant outdoors. Hybrid lilies easily forced are Enchantment, Cinnabar.

Shrubs and other plants for a cool room

Andromeda, Pieris
Azalea
Boxwood, Buxus
Cyclamen, hardy small
Euonymous, E. fortunei
Ferns, young hardy
Holly, Ilex
Lavender, Lavandula
Pine, or any root-balled Christmas tree
Primroses, Primula
Rhododendron

CARE: Partial sun or shade, 45-60 degrees (cool entranceway or enclosed porch ideal), acid soil except for lavender. Water as needed, mist daily. Plants in other categories take normal 60-70 room temperatures, but not these. Non-tropical ferns indoors will need winter dormancy after first or second year. Move shrubs outdoors, if possible, in spring for a long life.

Flowering vines

Cardinal climber
Quamoclit sloteri
Clematis
C. lanuginosa, spp.
